Do you know the new regulations on packages sent to men in the service? Here they are: You can send packages to soldiers anywhere in the U. S., although there are now Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men; and you can send packages to men in the Navy, Coast Guard, and Marines, wherever they are. And when you send that package from home, remember—the gift men in the service always appreciate is cigarettes. And the favorite with men in the Army, Navy, Coast Guard, and Marines is Camel (based on actual sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens). So stop in at your local dealer today—and mail him a carton of Camels.—Adv.

Paper Watermarks

A watermark is obviously a very valuable trademark, since it is embodied in the paper without interfering with that paper's usefulness. The name of the inventor of watermarks is unrecorded. We find watermarks as far back as the 13th century.

Briefly, a watermark is made by incorporating a design in thin wire in the mold on which paper is being formed. Where the wire touches the paper, it is naturally thinner. And so the impress of the wire is visible if the finished paper is held up to the light.

Folks Share Homes With Farm Animals in Andorra

Unharmed and unmolested by the conquering Napoleon and more recently by Hitler's armies is a small nation, Andorra, which lies between France and Spain on the slopes of the Pyrenees mountains. During the long winter months the people of Andorra (pop. 5,000) are "holed in" as the mountain passes become obstructed by snow.

Frequently farm animals are kept inside the homes to utilize the warmth of their bodies. Murder has never been committed in Andorra, according to records.

On April 7 J. A. Peterson, of Montgomery, who has had his plane based here for some time, arrived out from Alex City Wednesday afternoon where he had his plane given a hundred-hour check, leaving right out for Brewton, Ala., where he is on a daily Civil Air Patrol for the duration.

Delphin Popwell, of Birmingham, was in Thursday to pick up Mr. Rasor, who is with the State Forestry Department, flying over to Anniston to check on some forest fires that seem to have been out of control. This flight being another of the many C. A. P. missions.

Two Auburn planes arrived for a brief stop Saturday evening, being flown by Professors Woodrow Darling and H. T. Urgerhart.

Chas. Wade arrived back Saturday evening. He had been on a trip through Texas, making a number of the principal cities. Chas. says he averaged flying seven and a half hours daily from Monday through Saturday.

Mr. Bruce Shaw, of Calera, made several local flights Saturday.

Sunday visitors consisted of Mr. B. H. Reynolds, of Starksville, Miss., flying a ship from a point in Florida where he had picked up a plane to be used in pilot training at Starksville. Also Delphin Popwell and Mr. Tyson of Birmingham were in for a short time.

Local flying Sunday was done by Sergeant Brinker of Gunter Field, Leo Thompson and Chas. W

Four questions every American should ask himself

1. HOW CAN I HELP WIN THE WAR?

2. HOW CAN I KEEP THE COST OF LIVING DOWN?

3. HOW CAN I BE SURE TO HAVE SOME MONEY TO TIDE ME OVER THE PERIOD OF READJUSTMENT WHEN THE WAR IS WON?

4. HOW CAN I GET $4 FOR $3?

• An answer to all four questions is: BUY WAR BONDS through the Payroll Savings Plan.

The more bonds you buy, the more quickly we can win the war.

The more bonds you buy, the more you reduce the possibility of a rising cost of living.

The more bonds you buy now, the more money you will have when the war is won.

The more bonds you buy, the more four dollars you'll get for threes!

Put at least 10%—not 6%, or 7%, or even 9%, but 10%—of your earnings into War Bonds. Do it through your company. Twenty-one million Americans are doing it now. Let's make it at least 10% for every American!

WHAT YOU SHOULD DO
If you are . . .
1. Already setting aside 10% of your pay in War Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan—boost that 10% if you can.
2. Working in a plant where the Plan is installed, but haven't signed up yet—sign up tomorrow.
3. Working in a plant where the Payroll Savings Plan hasn't been installed, talk to your union head, foreman, or plant manager—and see if it can't be installed right away. The local bank will be glad to help.
4. Unable to get in on the Payroll Savings Plan for any reason, go to your local bank. They will be glad to help you start a Plan of your own.

CHILTON COUNTY SHORT $150,000 IN WAR BOND DRIVE

Well into the second week in the drive for thirteen billion dollars in Victory Bonds finds Chilton County short of their quota by $150,000. It is reported by Frank Callen, Victory chairman of the drive, that to reach the amount set by the Treasury Department as Chilton County's part in the selling of these bonds, it will take every man, woman and child, doing their very best, to reach our goal.

Estimating that there are 10,000 depositors in the banks of this county each depositor would be required to buy $1,500 worth of bonds before the quota would be reached. The smallest bond of course is a twenty-five dollar bond and sells for $17.75.

Of course every depositor cannot buy a bond so that leaves it up to those who can buy bonds to do so.

According to Mr. Callen in a statement Tuesday, we are a long way from our goal and the last half of the campaign finds us up against the hardest part of the fight.

Reports from every part of the county are that the committees are gradually getting their forces lined up and the remaining part of the drive will see more real action than the first part. The first saw the big buyers walking up and doing their bit—now it is up the little fellow to contribute his share. It don't count up as fast but when enough individuals buy as many bonds as their bank account will allow, the result is the same.

The fact is that Chlton County today s $150,000 short of the goal set by the United States Treasury in the Second War Bond Drive. The sum can only be reached by hard work and everyone doing his or her part.

A CALL FORM THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

We are behind with our quota around $100,000. We have only 10 days It will take each and every one of us to get this amount. Boys are dying at this time. There may be some from Chilton County. Count your money and see if you have done your part.

We want every church in Chilton County, white and colored, to urge the sale of bonds at their morning service on April 25, 1943, for at least five minutes.

We urge and insist that every form of business, every farmer, and every other class of people give four hours Wednesday, the 28th day of April, to urge the sale of bonds, from 1 o'clock to 5 o'clock p.m.

"We lend our money, and our boys give their lives."

CHILTON COUNTY POST NEEDS [illegible] MORE MEMBERS

Mr. J. Hance Alred, Post Adjutant of the Chilton County Post American Legion, is in receipt of a letter from Congressman Pete Jarman relative to Chilton's paid up membership. The letter is self explanatory, and reads:

Dear Comrade: I have just read with unusual interest Trotter Jones' bulletin of the 5th, stating that Alabama is in excellent position to accomplish the unheard of feat of leading the National Legion parade three years in a row and urging all of us to renewed efforts during April.

Trotter did not request me to write this letter, which is prompted by my unswerving interest in the Legion and particularly, perhaps, because it was my honor to lead the United States at the head of the Alabama delegations in the Paris and San Antonio parades in 1927 and 1928.

I note that your excellent Post needs 10 members to reach its recent peak and sincerely hope that you will see that the 10, and five more if possible reach headquarters by April 28th.

Thanking you in advance and with kind personal regards to you and each member of your Post, I am,

Yours sincerely,
PETE JARMAN.

Let those ex-service men who have not paid up their dues do so at once, so that Comrade Alred may be able to send in a completed report by April 28

THEIR EYES ARE ON YOU, THEIR EARS LISTEN FOR YOUR ANSWER!

Over 1,500 Chilton County men are in the armed forces. They are in North Africa, in the South Pacific, n frozen Alaska. They are in the camps in this country from Maine to California, from Michigan to Florida. They are at the Panama Canal, they are on the sea and in the air.

These men get their mail from home and many of them get the local papers. Boys away from home are always anxious about what is happening on the home front. They want to know what their hometown is doing. These boys are proud of their hometown. They read their letters to their buddies and they show them their county paper. In turn their buddies read our boys their letters and read to them from their hometown paper. What message will they receive next month?

Many boys will show with justifiable pride just how well their homefolks supported the war effort by buying WAR BONDS. Chilton County boys will be anxious to know what we have done. Will they be able to say: "My county went over the top, they are with us, they are helping the government to supply the food, the ammunition, the tanks, the ships and planes we need to win this war."

If we meet our quota our boys will be proud of their homefolks. If we fail to meet the quota they will wonder why the homefolks of their buddies evidenced such interest and we failed. Don't let them be ashamed of Chilton County.

Now this quota is not going to be met if we sit around and wonder whether or not so-and-so is buying bonds. It is not going to be met if we sit and wait till someone calls on us and urges us to do our duty. The quota will not be met if we just hope that it will. There s one way and only one way, we have got to buy bonds NOW. Let us all get after this quota right now and lets exceed the quota by 10 per cent. By doing this we can get the government to christen a big bomber "The Spirit of Chilton County, Alabama." It would be an accomplishment to be proud of. It would be a fine thing to have our bomber wing its way over Germany or Japan and repay the brutal enemy for his many acts of violence.

This war will be over one of these days. Our men will come home. Will we be able to look them in the face and say "we did our best?" We all have a habit of saying what we did. In the realism of warfare we frequently hear it said "we won the Revoluntionary War, we won the Spanish-American War, we won the World War. Many thousand will be able to say "we won World War No. II." How about you?

Down through the years it will be much more pleasant to say "we met our quota" than to have to make some sort of an effort to explain why we did not meet it. If we want to meet the quota, lets get at it right now. If we do not care, then let's hoist the white flag and ask Hitler for his terms, thus erasing the word freedom from our memory and delivering our children into the hands of the world's most notorious gangsters.

EASTER SERVICES AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

A Sunrise Easter service will be held at the Methodist Church Sunday morning at 7 o'clock. The choir will render special Easter music. The regular Sunday School will be held at 9:45 o'clock. If you have been careless about attending Sunday School, let's begin anew and be at Sunday School Easter Sunday.

At the 11 o'clock hour a special Easter message will be delivered by the pastor.

Methodism observes this Easter as World Service, Sunday, when each Methodist is asked to make a contribution to the Benevolences. The Methodist Church is a global church—global geographically, all-embracing in its interests. And for that reason it has global responsibility—to and for all mankind. The World Service agencies of the Methodist Church merge into all plans for a better world in the post-war era.

It is through the World-Service offerings that the Gospel of the Risen Lord is carried. It is carried to men and women, to boys and girls, "to earth's remotest part." Preaching a gospel of love in a world of hate.

There will be no night services, but instead a vesper service will be held at 6:30 o'clock. What an inspiration it would be to each other and the pastor if all Clanton Methodists would be in their places at church on Easter Sunday. All visitors are cordially invited to come worship with us in all these services.—O. C. Lloyd, Pastor.

It is estimated that 3,000 of Mobile's civilian population reside in tents or trialers.

CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL REPORTS ON BONDS AND SCRAP

Figures this week from U. H Abrams, pricipal, show that the Clanton Grammar School has sold $11,607.58 in United States War Bonds to date. The children have brought in 32,215 pounds of scrap iron and 15,090 pounds of scrap rubber.

This is a wonderful contribution to the war effort by this school and the children are still at work doing what they can to help.

The teachers are to be commended also in keeping the fact before their pupils that winning the war is their first consideration.

Verbena Celebrates Hitler's Birthday

Patriotic citizens of Verbena celebrated Hitler's birthday Tuesday of this week by selling $3,685 worth of war bonds to buy bombs to send to him personally. Since the beginning of the recent drive Verbena has raised $5,582.50. We're sure that every buyer of a Bond would like for his share to be the one that dropped right on top of Hitler's head.

ISABELLA P.-T. A. WILL SPONSOR MANLESS WEDDING

The Isabella Parent-Teachers Association will sponsor a Manless Wedding at the schoolhouse Friday evening at 8:30. The admission will be 10c and 20c and the proceeds will go for stage furniture. The public is invited to come out and enjoy an evening of fun with the Isabella Parent-Teachers.

EASTER SEAL SALE ENDS THIS SATURDAY

The sale of Easter Seals for Crippled Children is making good headway. The program of sale of seals through the schools began in most schools on Monday, April 19th. By the time of the early mail on that day 97 persons had replied to their seals-enclosed letters.

The various Civic Clubs, Pilots, Kiwanis, Lions, Music Club and the Study Club are expected to make their annual contributions soon, with some of the clubs already written. Persons on the streets are asking members of the Department of Education for stamps. The school children are on the job pushing sales Everybody is buying Easter Seals for Crippled Children—have you?

There are three days more till Easter and three days more in which to buy your seals. Our goal is $500 for Chilton County, so that 101 crippled children can receive treatment for their crippled limbs.

SPECIAL PARKING PRIVILEGES DISCONTINUED BY CITY COUNCIL

At a regular meeting of the Mayor and Council April 20, 1943, the matter of special parking privileges was discussed at length and the Council voted unanimously to discontinue all special privileges except to Doctors

Attested: H. M. Simpson, Clerk.

COMMUNITY TOWN MEETING FOR WAR HELD AT COURTHOUSE

At a meeting held Monday of this week plans were made for regular Town Meeting for War to be held in Chilton County. The first meeting will be in the courtroom of the courthouse in Clanton Monday night, April 26, at 8:00 p.m. All iterested citizens are urged to attend.

Among the purposes of these meetings are:

First: Strengthening of morale, by arousing the people to the dangers confronting them, by bringing about a better understanding and appreciation of the things for which we are fighting and by promoting unity among all the people.

Second: Developing the full productive capacity of the community for the war effort by stimulating and supporting the various war activities.

Third: Providing a medium through which the people may hear an inspirational patriotic talk, receive correct and current questions, made suggestions and providing a place where propaganda rumors and false information can be corrected and combatted.

Fourth: Bringing together the volunteer workers in the different war activities where they may receive encourgement, become better acquainted with each other, know more about the work the others are doing, and coordinate their efforts.

Fifth: Holding memorial service for members of the armed service from the community who are wounded or make the supreme sacrifice in service of their country, publicly honoring and recognizing the citizens who render outstanding and meritorious service on the home front, honoring parents with sons in service, recognizing with appropriate send-off selective service inductees and volunteers.

Either Mr. Haygood Patterson, executive director of the Alabama State Defense Council, or Mr. Olin H. Horton, assistant executive director of the Alabama State Defense Council, will be the main speaker for the Monday night program. Several of the Defense Council committees will be asked for short reports of their committees. The Chilton County High School band will furnish music.

At the meeting held Monday and presided over by Mr. C. E. Stapp chairman of the County Defense Council, Mr. C. Fenn Jones was elected chairman of the Town Meeting for War Committee. Mr. John Hollis, county chairman of Speakers' Bureau, was named as co-chairman with Mr. Jones Mr. J. C. Pattillo, circuit clerk, was named co-ordinator with the responsibility of securing places for meetings and arranging details of the programs

NOTICE

To my friends and patients, in order to conserve my health and better serve my patients, I have decided to be out of my office on Wednesdays, beginning Wednesday, April 21st.

DR. H. M. NIX,
Maplesville, Ala.

APPOINTMENTS MADE

W. W. Jones, of Clanton; W. T. White, of Maplesville, and W. R. Clements, of Jemison, have been appointed members of the Chilton County Jury Commission by Gov. Chancey Sparks.

The Huntsville Mercury, weekly, has adopted tabloid form.

Local Mother To Be Honored By P.-T. A.

Within the corporate limits of Clanton near the Willis Camp lives Mrs. Mary Gwathney, who has six sons in war service. Walter, age 30, from whom his mother hears about once a month, is now somewhere in the South Pacific. Rayford, 28, is in Los Angeles, Calif. James, not quite two years younger than Rayford, is located in New Orleans. Arthur Grant, who visits his mother often, is a sergeant at Craig Field, Selma, Ala. Homer is in training at Fort Sam Houston near San Antonio, Texas. Billy, who is now 18, volunteered last fall for Navy service, is in trainig now in San Diego, Calif.

The father of these boys was an invalid six years prior to his death which occurred when Billy was only two years old. Mrs. Gwathney took up practical nursing and did such other work as she could find.

Mrs. Gwathney and her six sons have faced hardships and stern conditions with determined hearts and smiling countenances. It is a real joy to this splendid mother to coverse with those who call on her. She is greatful for her success in training these six stalwart and handsome men and has dedicated them. as they have themselves also, to the service of our country.

JESSE CULP WINS THIRD PLACE IN PUBLIC SPEAKING CONTEST

Jesse Culp, member of the Senior II Class of Isabella High School, won the quarter-final F. F. A. Public Speaking contest held in the Clanton Vocational Agriculture Department Friday morning, April 9, as he spoke on "The Future of Farming."

Jesse is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Culp, of Clanton, Route 3. He is vice president of the Isabella F. F. A. and has entered the speaking contest for the last two years. Last year he lost in the quarter-finals.

The next contest that Jesse enters will be the semi-finals which will be held within the next two weeks. The winner of the semi-finals will speak in the final contest to be held at the F. F. A. convention this summer.

W. H. Ousley from Billingsley was the other contestant. His subject was "Forestry."

Judges for the contest were Mr. Patterson Hicks, principal of Chilton County High School; Mrs. Joe Rummell, vocational home economics teacher at Clanton, and Mr. D. P. Culp, Chilton County Superintendent of Education.

Mrs. Heflin, Miss Barber Salvage Ch'mn.

Just as you were called upon to save your scrap iron, your tin and your scrap rubber, so are you called upon this week to start saving your kitchen fats, your old silk hose and more tin cans.

Mrs. Grady Heflin has been named county chairman and Miss Mattie Jo Barber co-chairman of the present drive by the Home Salvage Program

Each week on a specified day, to be named later, a truck will make the rounds and gather these necessary scrap for the purpose of turning them into munitions for use of the Allies.

The monies received from all of these scrap will go to the Chilton County Crippled Children's Clinic and remain here at home.

By contributing to this drive, you are accomplishing two things at the same time—aiding the Allies and also the Crippled Children's Clinic. Show your willingness to help by contacting the chairmen and offering your services in this program.

JR. RED CROSS MAKING AFGHANS FOR SOLDIERS

The Jr. Red Cross in most of the Junior and Senior High Schools of the county are busy making woolen afghans with 70 pounds of material given them by the A. L. Corman Clothing Co., of Nashville, Tenn.

Approximately 25 afghans can be made from this material. These afghans are used around the soldiers who are able to be up and in a wheel chair. Through the efforts of Mrs Grady Heflin some of the women of Clanton have given woolen material and thread which the Jr. Red Cross is using to good advantage. Any one who wishes to see the finished work can see them at the office of Miss Lillian McKee, county attendance officer.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

New Jap Activity in Australian Sector Threatens Entire Allied Pacific Front; United Nations Mastery of Air, Sea Brings African Campaign to Climax

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

General Montgomery, leader of the victorious British Eighth army, inspects the weapons native to some of the fiercest fighters in his army. The men are Gurkhas from India. The weapon, the curving khukri which has been used effectively in hand-to-hand clashes. The weapon may never be unsheathed without blood being drawn.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:

Something in the Air

Indicative of an impending large scale move, in line with warnings of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Japanese airmen continued their bombing campaign against Allied Southwest Pacific strongholds in the New Guinea area.

One hundred Jap planes attacked the important Allied supply base of Port Moresby, with 50 bombers protected by an equal number of fighters. Allied airmen arose to challenge the enemy and they were aided by heavy anti-aircraft fire.

In all, 37 Jap planes fell in flames, 29 in dog-fights and eight from accurate ack-ack.

Jap losses at Port Moresby raised to 76 the number of planes lost in two days.

Coming from down under, Australian Minister for External Affairs Dr. Herbert Evatt has come up with a plea for increased help to Allied forces in the Southwest Pacific.

Dr. Evatt's plea coincided with a warning from the Allies' two top Southwest Pacific commanders, Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Lieutenant General Blamey, that the Japs were massing planes and men north of Australia. General MacArthur said the enemy was seeking to re-establish his air superiority while Lieut. Gen. Blamey warned that the Japs had concentrated 200,000 men to capitalize on aerial advantage.

RUSSIA:

Lull Before Storm

The lull continued before the storm in Russia.

Both sides reported minor action. The Reds claimed to have thrown back small waves of German infantry that tried to run over Russian positions on the Volkhov river southeast of Leningrad.

The Reds also announced that artillery and machine gun fire was concentrated on German positions before Smolensk as part of a plan to reduce the outer defenses of the Nazi bastion.

For themselves, the Germans reported continued secondary action along the west bank of the Donets river below Kharkov. Here, they said, artillery fire raked the entrenched Russian forces. Neither side claimed major advances.

RUML PLAN:

Doughton Unforgiving

Pay-as-you-go but no forgiveness on taxes!

Doughty old Robert Doughton stood up in the house and told members pressing for reconsideration of the Ruml plan that his Ways and Means committee favored deducting 20 per cent from weekly payrolls but letting the question of forgiving any taxes go till study of a new tax bill.

Although backed by leaders of the majority party, Doughton failed to still opposition. Representative Joseph Martin served notice he would continue efforts to bring the Ruml plan back to the floor for further discussion.

With no tax forgiveness, the 20 per cent payroll deduction undoubtedly would apply to current taxes, with remaining payments on 1942 taxes being additional.

TUNISIA:

'Fox' in Corner

Ending one of the longest retreats in military history, Marshal Rommel's Axis Africa Korps hammered in its stakes in the triangular defense zone of northeastern Tunisia.

All around, Allied forces under supreme command of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower drew up for the final phase of the battle of North Africa. To the west stood the British First army; to the southwest, mixed Allied forces of French and American, and to the south the redoubtable British Eighth army, which had chased Rommel all the way in from Egypt.

Allied leaders estimated that the Axis had 210,000 men in the triangle, although reports reaching London from Switzerland stated that Italian troops were being pulled out of the box and sent to Sicily. Against this force the Allied leaders had almost a million men to hurl, besides enjoying numerical superiority in the air.

Jagged ridges and gulches distinguish the position Rommel has chosen for a last stand.

DRAFT:

You'll Be in the Army

With few exceptions, all physically able men between 18 and 37 years of age will be in the army by 1944!

So says Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commissioner, within whose office falls the National Selective Service board. Several months ago, McNutt announced that only employment in essential industry, and not dependency, would be basis for deferment.

Now, the Selective Service board has made it official. Heads of homes, childless married men, and married men with children will be called up for service unless they work in jobs deemed essential to the war effort. Exceptions will be made only if induction threatens to work hardship on a wife, child or parent.

To help solve the farm labor problem, broad exemption was given agricultural workers. The 2-C class will defer men engaged in farm labor while 3-C will exempt men with dependents in agriculture.

RECIPROCAL TRADE:

Show We Mean Business

Under fire of congressmen who expressed fear that the administration's reciprocal trade treaties tend toward a reduction in American living standards, Secretary of State Cordell Hull urged their renewal as a sign that the United States will promote a free development of commerce after the war.

Furthermore, Hull declared, renewal of the reciprocal trade treaties will place American industry in a position to bid for world trade after peace has closed many factories now working at capacity.

Under the present Reciprocal Trade act which expires June 12, the President is allowed to enter into agreements with foreign countries calling for mutual reductions in tariffs on different commodities for periods of three years. Opponents of the act would limit the life of these pacts to less than three years.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

HE-MEN: Noting that officers and enlisted men were losing too much time entering and leaving elevators, Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand of the Sixth Service command ordered that hereafter they stop giving preference to women entering or leaving elevators; shift around so officers and men leave elevators according to rank, and taking off hats in elevators.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS: The senate judiciary committee has approved a resolution for a constitutional amendment giving women equal rights throughout the United States.

FALSE ALARM: Appealing for recruits for the reserve army, a Toronto radio station broadcast an alleged report that Japs had landed in British Columbia. The broadcast threw the Toronto area into a furor.

WAGES:

Hold-the-Line

Accepting President Roosevelt's exhortation, the War Labor board will "hold-the-line."

In a unanimous decision, the WLB refused to grant cement workers a wage increase which would have brought their earnings up to the same level prevailing in other plants of the same company.

However, the workers were allowed a small boost—in line with the WLB's "Little Steel formula," which permits a general increase of 15 per cent in wages over those of January 1, 1941, as an offset for rise in living costs since then.

In its decision, WLB said that the President's order freezing wages allowed for increases only within the "Little Steel formula" or in cases where wages would remain substandard even after such an increase. Consequently, WLB said, it was powerless under the order to grant boosts merely on grounds of equalizing wages throughout certain industries.

The WLB's action will affect some 10,000 cases before it. Regional branches were instructed to immediately make studies within their districts of sub-standard conditions.

In a midwest regional war labor board the chairman said that approximately 2,500 of the 3,000 cases on file would be affected by the national board's order, which is being observed in the "literal meaning."

FREIGHT:

ICC Uses Ax

Heeding the OPA's plea that freight rate increases averaging 4½ per cent were inflationary, the Interstate Commerce commission voted to cancel the increases. A 10 per cent boost in passenger fares was allowed to stand.

Put into effect last year, the increases brought Class 1 carriers $308,997,000 in additional revenue. Of this amount, $226,445,000 was derived from freight; the rest, or $78,387,000, from passengers.

OPA had argued that the increases had resulted in higher costs to manufacturers and distributors, causing a serious strain against price ceilings. The reductions may bring cuts in the cost of many goods, OPA said.

The Interstate Commerce commission allowed the 10 per cent passenger increase for two reasons: (1) Passenger fares have not reflected costs, and (2) reduction in fares might now lead to greater use of passenger trains.

At the time the increases went into effect, railroads argued additional revenue was needed to meet the extra costs imposed by wage boosts to workers. These boosts were estimated to approximate $389,000,000. The Interstate Commerce commission felt that railroads were able to meet these extra costs out of increased revenues derived from war traffic.

BONDS:

To Shackle Axis

"The job of financing this war, like the job of producing weapons, is of such magnitude that it is necessary to enlist the support of the entire citizenry."

With these words, Jay N. Whipple, chairman of metropolitan Chicago's April War Bond committee, got the great war bond drive under way in his district. Within one day, residents of Cook, Lake and DuPage counties subscribed for $115,000,000 of treasury securities, one-third of their goal.

Response throughout the country was similarly enthusiastic. Indications were that the national goal of 13 billion dollars would be as readily met as last December's, when 9 billion dollars was called for and 13 billion dollars actually was raised.

SECRETARY MORGENTHAU
Government will borrow 70 billion.

Speaking in New York on the opening day of the bond drive, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau said the government will have to borrow 70 billion dollars this year, in addition to taxes. The Treasury expects to obtain 25 billion dollars from individuals, most within the income range from $1,000 to $5,000. Banks and insurance companies are to furnish 35 billion dollars.

PAN-AMERICANISM:

Blueprint for Future?

There was a new note in the celebrations that marked this year's Pan-American day as the 21 Western hemisphere republics took time out from vital war work to project a possible international relationship pattern when peace comes. This note indicated that the Pan-American Union, founded half a century ago, might become the blueprint for drawing up agreements which eventually lead to peaceful dealings.

Million Scouts Hail Him as 'Chief' and Now It's for Keeps

NEW YORK.—For many a long year if you'd asked any member of the Boy Scouts of America, who was the Chief Scout, he'd have told you, Dr. James E. West. Now the title has been made official, and Dr. West has been promoted to a rank held previously by only one man, Ernest Thompson Seton, another lover of the outdoors with a powerful interest in boys.

Dr. West joined the Boy Scout movement January 2, 1911. It was in its infancy in the United States then. He took the job of Executive Chief on a six months' trial basis. He stayed 32 years, finally relinquishing the post February 1 last. On Dr. West's 65th birthday in May, 1941, President Roosevelt told him: "To you belongs much of the credit for the effectiveness of Scouting in this country."

Dr. West's great interest in youngsters was spurred by the difficulties of his own boyhood. His father died when he was very young, and his mother, when he was six. There were no near relatives, and the boy grew up in an orphans' home in Washington, his native city. To add to his problems, he was crippled and on crutches. He saw to it that he had a good education, though, and he worked his way through the law school of National university. He was practicing in the capital when Scouting called him.

That wasn't his first task in behalf of youngsters, however. His efforts gave Washington its first juvenile court, and in 1909 he persuaded President Theodore Roosevelt to call a White House conference on the care of dependent children.

He has had four children of his own, two boys and two girls. Both boys became Eagle Scouts. While in command, he saw his beloved Scouts grow into an organization more than a million strong.

Turn About Fair Play—FDR Now Bosses a Daniels

FACT finding is the task assigned to Jonathan W. Daniels as he joins the staff of White House administrative assistants, and that will be an old story for him. He has been doing just that for 20 years now. His first stint in that line came as a cub reporter on the Louisville Times. There he harvested his initial facts from a police sergeant who had been a Confederate soldier. He had learned about newspapers long before that, however, from his father, Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer and secretary of the navy under Wilson.

Young Jonathan started out to be a lawyer. He even spent a year at the Columbia law school after graduating from the University of North Carolina. He never practiced, though. He had been rubbing elbows too long with printer's ink. After trying his wings in Louisville, he returned home to work for his dad.

Later he wrote a novel. "Clash of Angels" it was called, and it helped him win a Guggenheim Fellowship and a couple of years' study in Europe. When the elder Daniels shifted his activities to the United States embassy in Mexico City, his son moved into the editor's chair.

In World War I a Daniels gave the orders to a young assistant secretary of the navy named Franklin D. Roosevelt. Now it will be the other way around.

Through Whiskers He Advocates Five Wives Per Male

DR. C. E. M. JOAD used to be chairman of the National Peace Council (British) and a member of the Brains Trust, that London radio camarilla whose I. Q.s all came out of the top drawer, but here he is urging over the Atlantic cable that every man be allowed five wives. What peace is likely to come out of that idea, and who would expect a Brains Truster to trot it out!

Dr. Joad, who is also a philosopher and peddles long-haired notions from a chair in the University of London, argues the war will leave so many women without mates that they must be provided with substitutes, even piecemeal ones. Oldsters will remember that the same argument followed the last war but no substitute replaced the time-defying practice of pairing off.

Like Shaw, who goes along the same road far enough to insist that any woman should prefer a fifth share of a first rate man to a whole share of a fifth rate man, Joad throws off his recommendation from behind a barricade of whiskers. Grayish whiskers now, because he is 52.

This five-to-one scheme is just his latest explosive declaration. His many speeches, and his books of which he has written enough to supply a small army, all went boom under society, or science, or government, or something, or somebody.

New Pupil—All of them.

They're Even

"I'd fire you in a minute," cried the irascible manager, "if I thought I could get another man to fill your job."

"And I'd quit in a minute," sighed the weary bookkeeper, "if I was through with my night course in welding."

From an old French word "mes" derived from the Latin word "missus" meaning a course at a meal, comes the Army's name "mess" for its breakfast, dinner and supper. Favorite meal with the soldier is chicken dinner—his favorite cigarette, Camel. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) A carton of Camels, by the way, is a gift that's always welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. Manila has fallen, and our naval base at Cavite is gone. Lieut. Kelly has been in a hospital on Corregidor, but has finally persuaded the doctor to release him. He has gone out on patrol. They have broken up a Jap landing party and have now come alongside a landing barge which has surrendered after a heavy barrage.

CHAPTER VII

"She was empty except for three aps—must have discharged her anding party and been headed ome. One was dead, two were wounded, and one of these two was Jap officer.

"Bulkeley had his 45 in his hand when he jumped aboard, and immediately this Jap officer went to is knees and began to call, 'Me urrender!—Me surrender!'"

"He was talking fast," said Bulkeley a little grimly, "and he had is hands stuck up very high and tiff, and that ought to stop the nyth about how Japs are too noble ver to surrender. I put a line round his shoulders and we hoisted im aboard the 34 boat.

"Then I began rummaging around n that sludge for papers, brief cases nd knapsacks. I collected, among ther things, the muster list of the anding party and their operations lan, before the boat sank beneath ne—Kelly pulled me into his boat s the barge sank.

"The ambulance doctor, glancing t them, said he thought the Jap fficer would pull through, but that here wasn't much chance for the ittle private.

"You never know when you're going to run into something," said Bulkeley. "A couple of nights later, I was riding the 41 boat on routine patrol off the west coast of Bataan. When we began to get near to Biniptican Point, the entrance to Subic, we cut it down to one engine, to make the least possible noise. Just before ten o'clock, I spotted a Jap ship which seemed to be lying to, near shore. We called general quarters and began sneaking up on her—still using only one engine until we got within about twenty-five hundred yards. Then we gave everything the gun and roared in—but almost into a trap. Because the Japs had prepared a little welcome for us, and this ship was seemingly the bait to a trap—they had floating entanglements and wires in the water which might foul our propellers and leave us a dead target for their batteries. We saw them just in time, and now we saw they were trying to unbait the trap—because that big ship was showing a wake, trying to get under way.

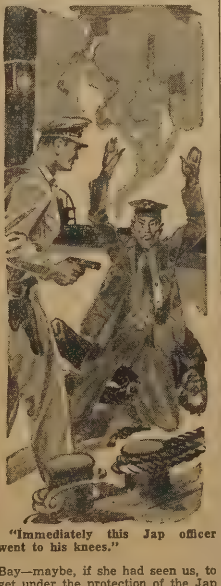
"At a thousand yards we fired our first torpedo, and it had hardly hit the water before the Jap ship opened up on us with a pom-pom. They'd been playing possum, waiting for us. But what the hell—we wanted to be sure we'd stolen the bait from the trap, so we went right on in, ahead of our own torpedo, and let her have another at four hundred yards. Then I gave hard rudder and as we turned abeam of her, we sprayed her decks with the 50's, and every man on board picked up a rifle and began pumping at her—just for the hell of it—and the Japs were dishing it right back, but not for many seconds. Because all of a sudden—Bam! It was our first torpedo striking home, and pieces of wreckage fell in the water all around us. The explosion gave us our first clear look at her. She was—or had been until then—a modern, streamlined 6,000-ton auxiliary aircraft carrier.

"But the Japs weren't through with us. A battery of about half a dozen 3-inch guns opened up on us from the shore—by the flashes we could see they were pumping it to us as fast as they could load, and they certainly took our minds off our other troubles. So with big splashes all around us, we executed that naval maneuver technically known as getting the hell out of there, swerving, weaving, avoiding those damned wire nets, and trying to figure out where the Japs would place their next artillery shots, to make sure we wouldn't be under them—giving her every ounce of gas we could stuff into those six thousand horses, until we were out of range. I think the Japs were getting tired of us MTB's, and risked exposing that ship to rid themselves of a nuisance."

"Early in February they started sending submarines up from Australia, and our boats would always meet them outside the mine fields and bring them in—Bulkeley getting aboard to ride as pilot. The subs had news. They said America was building a big Australian base—that supplies were rolling down there. The submarine Trout would bring in ammunition for army's 3-inch guns on Bataan and take out gold which had been brought over to Corregidor from Manila before it fell. The unloading, of course, would all be at night, and then Bulkeley would take them out and show them deep water, where they could submerge and hide from Jap bombers during the day. Quezon went out on one submarine to Cebu, and a week later High Commissioner Sayre left on a submarine. It seemed like a good many prominent people were leaving Corregidor. And the army had been pushed back to what we knew were its last and strongest defense positions on Bataan. None of it looked too good.

"Of our original six boats, two had already been lost, DeLong's over Subic Bay, and the 33 boat while I was in the hospital—she'd been going full speed ahead investigating what looked at night like the feather of a Japanese submarine's periscope, only it turned out to be a wave breaking over a little submerged and uncharted coral reef."

"We came close to losing the 32 boat about that time," said Bulkeley. "DeLong and I were riding her the night of February 8, patrolling up the west coast of Bataan as usual. A little before nine o'clock we saw gun blasts on up ahead of us in the neighborhood of Bagac Bay, so we put on what speed we could to find out who was shooting at what. Incidentally, the speed wasn't much. Because the 32 boat had had an explosion while they were cleaning that saboteur's wax out of her strainers and tanks, so that now she was held together with braces and wires, and running on only two engines. But pretty soon we sighted a ship dead-ahead about three miles away. I was maneuvering to put her in the path of the moonlight on the water so I could make out what she was. But now she seemed to put on speed, heading up in the direction of Subic Bay—maybe, if she had seen us, to get under the protection of the Jap shore batteries there.



"Immediately this Jap officer went to his knees."

"Why had she been firing near Bagac Bay? We learned that later. She was a 7,000-ton Jap cruiser covering a Jap landing party with her guns. We didn't know we'd broken up this party at the time. Following her, we seemed to be gaining because she had apparently slowed down, maybe thinking she had lost us. We were closing on her fast now, when suddenly a huge big searchlight came on, holding us directly in its beam, and a few seconds later two 6-inch shells came screaming over, landing just ahead of us with a terrific explosion and waterspout. Her searchlight was blinding us and we could only head directly into it, firing the starboard torpedo at that light at about four thousand yards' range. There was another flash of 6-inch guns from the cruiser, and this salvo dropped much closer to us—hardly two hundred yards ahead. A third two-gun salvo landed just astern of us, and then we let her have the port torpedo, figuring the range at a little over three thousand yards.

"Now we were empty, and the problem was to dodge that blinding searchlight. Before we veered off to the east, we tried to douse it with spray of 50-caliber bullets, but they did no good. We could hardly see where our tracers went for the glare. We could see now she was chasing us, firing salvoes in pairs from her four 6-inch guns, when suddenly there was a dull boom, and we could see debris and wreckage sailing up through that searchlight's beam. There was a pause in her firing—no doubt about it, one of our torpedoes had struck home, probably the second one. We knew she was crippled because she had slowed down—that light which was trying to hold us in its glare was getting farther and farther away, and about 10:[illegible] we lost it by making a hard turn to the right. Presently it went out. It came on again once or twice on the horizon, feeling for us over the waves, but never found us.

"The next day the army told us we'd broken up a 7,000-ton cruiser's landing party on Bataan near the village of Moron, which was then in no-man's land, and said their planes reported the Japs had had to beach her seventy-five miles up the coast. Still later the planes reported the Japs were breaking her up for scrap. But we brought the 32 boat back safe to the base at Sisiman Cove. Our headquarters there was a reformed goat slaughter-house, about one hundred feet long and thirty feet wide, with a concrete floor. We'd scrubbed it out with creosote. It still smelled some, but was habitable. We'd also acquired a tender—an old harbor tug called the Trabajador—and put her in charge of DeLong, who'd lost his ship."

"Then we all sat around envying him," said Kelly, "because here he was, living like an admiral—a cabin, a wardroom, a real galley (not just a hot plate, which was all we had on the MTB's), and even a mess boy who could bake pie. It was big-ship life, and Bulkeley and I used to find some excuse to go every night and eat his dessert and drink coffee. DeLong liked it so much he later decided to stay on Bataan rather than leave with the rest of us.

"Our plan for making a run for China when our gas was almost gone still stood, and Bulkeley had got hold of some landing-force gear which we knew might be useful on the Chinese coast if we missed connections with our Chungking friends and had to fight our way through the Japs. So we began drilling our men in landing-force procedure.

"This got them very curious. They knew our gas was running out, and we had almost no more torpedoes except the ones which were in the boats. So we told them we were thinking of going south to join the Moros if Bataan fell, and it satisfied them for a while. We let only two other persons in on the secret—Clark Lee and Nat Floyd, newspaper correspondents who had been authorized by the Admiral to make the trip with us.

"The food situation was getting tough. Our breakfast was always hot cakes made without eggs—just flour, water, and baking powder—and the syrup was sugar and water. We hadn't seen butter since the war started. Then for dinner, it was always canned salmon and rice, and you don't know tired you can get of canned salmon until you eat it regularly for a few months. We welcomed any change."

"The one high spot in our diet was the Canopus," said Kelly. "She was an old sub tender, so slow she'd been abandoned, but she had a fine machine shop. She was tied up at the dock and already had been hit twice by bombs, so they worked her at night and abandoned her by day. But among her stores were barrels and barrels of ice-cream mix and a freezer. And her skipper would let anyone in the navy who came aboard eat all the ice cream he wanted as long as those barrels lasted—they held out until the week we left.

"But what we wanted most of all was fresh meat and vegetables, and along about the second week in February the first blockade-runner arrived. We piloted her in at night—rendezvous twenty-five miles out—and as daylight came, our mouths watered as we saw her cargo, strings of bananas piled high on her decks, and below, fresh meat and fruit for Corregidor. That afternoon I went over to see Peggy, and they were all busy slicing steaks and candling eggs. By yelling, screaming, and haggling, I got enough fresh meat to serve our crews two meals that week. She was a welcome little ship, that blockade-runner—made two more trips before the Japs sank her.

"But because of Peggy, my diet was a little better than the others. Since she was on Corregidor, she was entitled, under their rationing system, to buy one item per day from the canteen—a package of gum, a candy bar maybe, from the little supply they had left.

"But Peggy pretended she never cared for them, and every time I came to see her, she'd slip me a pocketful. She bought and saved them every day—just something to nibble while I was out on patrol, she explained.

"I began to feel funny about that break-through to China we were planning. Of course the Admiral had ordered it, and of course it was the way we could be most useful. But here were all these brave people on Bataan and the Rock, Peggy among them, realizing more clearly every day that they would never get out. Doomed, but bracing themselves to look fate in the face as it drew nearer, knowing that they were expendable like ammunition, and that it was part of the war plan that they should sell themselves as dearly as possible before they were killed or captured by the Japs. But a handful of us secretly knew that we, and only we among these many brave thousands, would see home again, and soon.

"And the more I liked Peggy—she was a swell kid—the guiltier I felt. Furthermore, I knew if we ever left, it would have to be soon. Gas was getting dangerously low — barely enough to make the run for China. And so was our torpedo supply. We would have to leave with every tube full if we were to throw effective weight against Jap shipping on the China coast, and in addition to what we would need for this, we had only a few torpedoes left, enough for one good fight—and that was to come sooner than we knew."

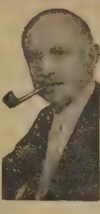
United Nations' Conferences First Real Test of Solidarity



Russia Seen as Vital Factor in World Organization or Disorganization; Mutual Understanding Essential to Worth-While Peace.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

This month will witness the first test of how united the United Nations are. The first of the conferences of representatives of the countries allied against the Axis are to meet and discuss food. On the success of that gathering, much will depend.

It may be just as well that the governments linked together under the very general and very idealistic statement of principles, the Atlantic Charter, are going to begin with a very material, a very down-to-earth and likewise a very vital question—food.

It would be too much to expect to begin at once to discuss the abstract subjects which are bound to arise when the larger implications of the philosophy of government are considered. People have to eat to live.

It seems reasonable to believe that the food question can be handled. Of course, it can easily be disposed of if the United States simply agrees to continue a lend-lease operation indefinitely with no demand for remuneration except vague promises. That, of course, is what the cynical say will happen.

And that brings me to the crux of the whole question of America's role in world affairs. If we go on the assumption as the isolationists do, that heads you win, tails we lose, and that America is going to be played for a sucker, we might as well throw up the whole idea of international co-operation now and put our heads back into the sand until the next Pearl Harbor.

On the other hand, the sincere proponents of international co-operation believe that America is smart enough and strong enough and wise enough and unselfish enough to help build the machinery which will at least make the world's wheels go around a little better than they have so far. We created a United States out of country with every geographical and political factor that exists anywhere. We welded into one a conglomerate people representing every race on the face of the globe.

Difficulties Ahead

However, it is only fair to look at some of the difficulties ahead.

Russia, if not an obstacle, is at least a problem for several reasons. With an Allied victory, Russia, both because of her contribution to the victory and because of her size, position and strength, is a vital factor in any world organization—or disorganization. She is not actually a member of the United Nations but rather an associated power as the United States was in the last war. She has not made a clear statement of her war or peace aims.

She is, at present, occupying territory of what was once free and independent nations; a part of Finland, all of the Baltic states, a part of Poland.

Recently, Gardner Cowles, presumably speaking as a member of the Office of War Information, said:

"If Americans don't make an effort to understand Russia and the Russian place in the scheme of things to follow this war, I fail to see how we can possibly hope to build a worth-while peace."

That, of course, is true. However, that is only half of the story. It is mutual understanding that is necessary. Mr. Cowles might have said:

"If the Russian government does not encourage the people to understand America, we can't build a worth-while peace."

It is a two-handled jug.

We do misunderstand much about Russia. We are misinformed on some points. The Russian government has failed to inform us on others. For instance, few people in this country know and many are probably unwilling to believe what Cowles, who ought to know what he is talking about, says about private property under the Soviets.

About Property

"Workers may acquire any amount of consumer goods," he tells us, "any amount of furniture, an auto, etc., for their own use. The distinction from our economy is that in Russia, an individual may not own income-producing property."

Well, what of it. California never threatened to secede because of New England's blue laws or New York state because of the way they turn out divorces in Nevada.

The important thing is, what are Russia's intentions concerning other nations? On my desk, there is beginning to accumulate the literature of the various little nations—Poland, Latvia, Finland, who are already starting to plead for the restoration of lost territory or sovereignty.

Anti-Communistic feeling is strong in America. You will hear tales of how Stalin expects to make a deal with Germany, how he expects to turn France communist the moment the country is freed from Germany. You will also hear the assurances of people like Mr. Cowles who say: "Stalin no longer feels that the survival and development of the Soviets depend on world revolution." That Russia wants to be allowed to go her own way, to work out her own salvation and once she has assurance that a combination of other nations will not arise against her, she will be only too content to live and let live.

I was talking with a seasoned and pretty cynical observer who has seen the seamy side of foreign relations at close range for many years. He is suspicious of Russia, equally suspicious of Britain. But even he said to me:

"Before we talk too much about the obstacles in the way of an international understanding, let's find out what the British and Russian and other statesmen really want."

The Goal

That is all the gentlemen in the senate are asking, who are working so arduously to obtain the passage of the Ball resolution which would put the United States government on record as favoring the creation of an international organization to keep the peace, of assuring United States' co-operation in policing the world against any aggressor.

There were few people who, when this United Nation was born, believed that it could live. It did. Norman Angell, in that exceedingly cogent book of his, "Let the People Know," concludes one chapter with these words:

"In the old days, we felt impelled to burn a man alive if he did not attend our church. Never, men were sure, could those of the true faith live at peace with heretics. But they found that men of different faiths could live together; that they could keep their differences, yet be loyal to each other in the achievement of their common purposes. Religion is not less than nationalism. What is possible in the one field is possible in the other."

Whether we agree with Mr. Angell or not, there seems to be no sensible reason why we shouldn't try to find out if he is right. Peace is worth the effort.

Broadcaster's Diary

The other day, I received a letter that shows that commentators are of some practical use in the world after all. It was from a lady from Long Beach, Calif., who wrote:

"I wanted to phone for a plumber one day last week. Each time I tried to use the phone, two women were talking (about nothing) on the '3-party' line. I tried every five minutes for nearly half an hour, never saying anything, only picking up the phone and having to hang up again.

"One of the times, I heard one of them say 'some woman wants the line but I pay for it just as much as she does'! You, Mr. Baukhage, were just about to finish your regular broadcast," my writer goes on, "and some imp of mischief from my youth returned to my 50-year-old heart as I suddenly connected that remark with the closing words of your program. You had about two minutes yet to go, so I hurriedly plugged my portable garden radio into the electric socket which is near the phone table and just at the right moment lifted the receiver off the phone. Yes . . . they were still talking . . . so—just as you said: 'That's all, and thanks very much,' I put the phone mouthpiece right next to the radio—snapping the latter off at the right second. Then, I listened on the phone and heard one woman say in an actually meek voice, 'I guess we have talked pretty long. See you later. Good-bye.'

"After I stopped laughing, I called the plumber but you helped me, so I do think you deserve to be thanked. Also for a real laugh."

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

French farmers have been ordered to plant grain on the same number of acres they had under cultivation in 1937-1938 or pay a fine.

A plan is being discussed in Latin America to make President Roosevelt "an honorary citizen of the Americas" in "recognition of his tremendous activity in favor of the salvation of America and humanity."

The Japanese government has advised the International Red Cross that it distributed 230,000 letters from home to American and United Nations prisoners of war in 1942. Five thousand four hundred letters were delivered to prisoners in the Philippines; 7,500 to Shanghai; 21,500 to Hong Kong, 600 to other parts of China; 4,500 to Zentsuji, and 800 to other parts of Japan.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

L. H. Reynolds, executive chairman of the Chilton County War Bond Committee; Frank Callen, Victory Bond chairman; Probate Judge J. Lee Smith, co-chairman, and Mayor Cohen E. Stapp, co-chairman, are urging the merchants and business men in the county to take four hours off next Wednesday afternoon and devote to the selling of War Bonds. It is the best idea that has been thought of during this campaign and if every man will feel that the success of the campaign rests upon his shoulders alone, he will get out and work and success is inevitable.

Reese Baker, the fancy penman who has been making pretty blue and red signs all over town for the past several months with the President's name listed, has now received his diploma from the Zaner Bloser School of Business Writing and there just ain't no telling what kind of signs we'll be seeing around town. He finished the prescribed course in record time and confidentially does swing a wicked pen.

We cannot understand the thoughtlessness in some people that would allow them to light up a cigarette in a picture show or other place. The other night over at the Wadesonian two young fellows did exactly that and but for the promptness in which the usher and ticket taker went over and called them down would have enjoyed their smoke as if they were out in the open air or in their own home. Not once, we imagine, did they take into consideration that they were taking the lives of hundreds of people in their hands by this carelessness. After the damage is done, it is too late to be sorry.

The time to THINK is before you strike the match. Hundreds upon hundreds of lives have been lost recently by just such thoughtlessness and carelessness.

We are indebted to Mrs. Mamie Smith for a jacking-up about our negligence in forgetting the forgotten woman. And after careful consideration we have to agree, as usual, with Mrs. Mamie. To her the forgotten woman is the lady who is giving her time each night working on sweaters bandages, and the like for the soldiers after spending all day in a field or a garden trying to do her bit for the war effort. And, as we said before we heartily agree. It seems everyone but she gets due credit for their every effort. They're not kicking, understand, they each have someone to work for and their reward is the return of this someone after this horrible nightmare is over. But just the same, here's to them. May their reward be his safe return.

In this day and time we often find people worrying over trivial things.

WHY WORRY?

I wonder why folks worry. There are only two reasons for worry: You are either successful or you are not successful. If you are successful there is nothing to worry about. If you are not successful there are only two things to worry about: Your health is either good or you are sick If your health is good, there is nothing to worry about. If you are sick there are only two things to worry about: Either you are going to get well or you are going to die. If you are going to get well, there is nothing to worry about. If you are going to die there are only two things to worry about: You are either going to heaven or you are not going to heaven. And if you are going to heaven there is nothing to worry about. If you are going to the other place, you'll be so busy shaking hands with old friends that you won't have time to worry—so—why worry?

JEMISON F. H. A.

The Jemison Chapter of F. H. A. held its monthly meeting April 7, 1943 The meeting was called to order by the president, Annie Joe Norwood. After the devotional the president proceeded with the business. The roll was called and the minutes read and approved.

There was no old business to come before the meeting so the club then discussed the trip. All plans for this were called off but the club decided to plan an unusually good program for the next meeting.

A nominating committee for the future officers was appointed. They were as follows: Mary Jo Thompson. Vernette Cost and Betty Ann Lenoir.

There being no other business the program committee then took charge Two readings, "Aunt Reavy at the Meat." and "Giving Up Slang," were given by Jimmie Ruth DuBose and Chilton County Abstract Co.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

There Is No Second Place In A War- It's Either Win Or Lose!

THE 2ND WAR LOAN DRIVE IS ON!

Come on, Let's WIN this war!

IF we should lose the war, life would not be worth living.

"But we won't lose it," you may say.

Listen, brother—in this world nothing's sure, unless you make it so.

This month it's up to us here at home to do our part, and then some, to make Victory surer—and quicker! To do it, we've got to lend Uncle Sam 13 billion extra dollars.

It isn't easy—but war isn't easy and Victory isn't cheap. It takes money—and more money—to buy planes, ships, tanks, guns and a million other things our boys must have to deliver that final, paralyzing knockout punch.

And it's a whale of a lot easier for us at home to lend our money than for our boys to fight through the hardships and dangers of deserts, swamps, jungles, ice-fields and sub-infested seas!

Just think! Every extra bond you buy will help provide the weapons to save the lives of many American boys! Isn't that alone worth every effort, every economy you can make? You bet it is!

There are 7 types of U. S. Government securities to meet the needs of every purse. They offer the finest investment in the world—liberal interest, plus securities guaranteed by Uncle Sam himself.

A volunteer worker for the 2nd War Loan Drive may visit you soon. Welcome this unselfish patroit—and buy all the bonds you can. But don't wait for that call. Go—today—to your bank, investment dealer, broker, post office or bond booth and invest to your uttermost limit. Even if it hurts, it's nothing compared to the agonizing impact of a bayonet thrust, a flesh-tearing torpedo fragment or a bone-crushing bullet.

DEMENTIA PRECOX

Dr. Barton

The difference between the patient who has dementia precox (schizophrenia) and a normal individual is that the normal individual is a part of everyday life in school, the home and the outside world affairs. The dementia precox individual on the other hand, whether he is naturally breezy or quiet, lives within himself and is satisfied with and believes that his way of life is the right way.

The quiet or sensitive type is serious, shy, easily embarrassed and without a sense of humor. In school or college he never takes part in "rough games." He may take refuge in books instead of the companionship of others. Dementia precox seems to run in some families.

Early symptoms are changes in the emotions and behavior, the patient gradually losing interest in the things that formerly interested him. Then may follow a loss of interest in family and friends, after which silly talk or laughter may occur. There is lack of concentration and the patient jumps from one subject to another without a stop.

In one case there will be delusions, in another hallucinations of hearing and of sight may be present.

In the treatment of dementia precox, patients not helped by the usual methods were often helped by treatment with insulin shock. Then followed treatment by metrazol shock, and, just a little later, electric shock.

As some physicians have been losing interest in the insulin shock method, it might be well to study the results of insulin shock in 45 cases of dementia precox of various forms reported in Argentine Review of Neurology and Psychiatry, by Dr. A. P. Quaranta. There were 16 cases in which the symptoms had been present for six months or less, one year or less in 12 cases, and more than a year and a half in 17 cases.

Of the entire number of cases in the three groups, 17 were cured. Of the first group (had disease less than six months), 10 of 17 were cured, three out of 12 in second group (had disease less than a year) and four of 17 of the third group (had disease more than a year and a half).

The lessons we learn from the above are, (a) insulin shock cures many cases of dementia precox, (b) the earlier the insulin shock treatment is given after the symptoms appear, the better are the chances of a cure.

Food Essentials For Growing Child

Some of the older men and women must look with astonishment at the increasing variety of medical specialists. In their youth a physician took care of the needs of his patients, even doing much of his own surgery unless it was surgery of the brain, the thyroid gland, or some other special organ. There were neurologists—nerve specialists—in those days but no psychiatrists (behavior specialists). Later came baby specialists — pediatricians, gland specialists—endocrinologists, then allergists (finding special substance causing hay fever, asthma, stomach upsetments) and lately geriatricians who treat the special ailments of elderly people.

Physicians have been apt to think little about children 5 to 15 years of age for statistics show that there is less sickness at this age than at any other period of years of life. However, physicians are finding that many boys and girls of this age, despite the fact that they are taller than their parents, grandparents and great-grandparents, are not as rugged as they should be despite the increase in height.

Why? Dr. Philip C. Jeans, Iowa City, in the Journal of the American Medical Association states, "We have done reasonably well in nutrition for our babies but not so well for children past infancy. We have not learned ourselves, nor taught parents, the proper nutrition to prevent dental decay."

That three food essentials are not being given to children in sufficient quantities may account for increase in the strength of body not being in proportion to the increase in height. These three essentials are (a) vitamin D, (b) proteins—meat, eggs and fish, and (c) calcium or lime.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Why, after retiring, would I have cramps in my toes and feet?

A.—Cramps in toes could be due to poor circulation, some low infection, some change in blood pressure, lack of lime in system and other causes.

Q.—Does tea contain caffeine? If so, how much per cup?

A.—The average cup of tea or coffee contains about two grains, more or less, of caffeine. If used to tea and coffee this much should do no harm.

THE RISEN LORD

LESSON TEXT—John 20:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—He is risen.—Mark 16:6.

"Christ is living! My people shall know it. I shall preach about it again and again until they believe as I do." So exclaimed Dr. Dale of London when the glory of Christ's resurrection laid hold of him as never before. There began that day the custom of singing an Easter hymn in his church every Sunday morning.

Easter has come again, and it ought to make us glad to recall the resurrection power of Christianity in the midst of the world's awful sorrow and death. Easter should mean more to us than ever this year, if we believe in Christ. If we do not, why not rid ourselves of the dark garments of unbelief, and put on the bright and beautiful garment of faith in a living Christ. Let us be clad in His righteousness.

The first Easter Sunday had scarcely dawned when the faithful Mary came to the tomb. Finding the stone rolled away from its entrance she ran to find Peter and John. What they came and saw, and what—or rather who—she remained and saw, make up our interesting lesson.

I. Peter and John Saw the Empty Tomb (vv. 1-10).

Peter, though he had denied his Lord, was not sent away by his brethren. They knew his true heart, and evidently the gentle and loving John had taken him to his home. Mary knew where to find him. What a tender incidental indication of the Christian spirit of the brethren of Peter.

John and Peter ran to the tomb. The unusual news so stirred them that John the younger did not think to await the slower steps of Peter. He came first, but when he did he only looked in. Peter had no hesitation, but went right in. What he found there was most significant.

Here was twofold evidence that the body of our Lord had not been stolen. The burial clothes were there. They had not been carried off by a thief. Nor had they been snatched aside by a deceiver. They lay in order. There off to one side, carefully folded, was the head covering. Jesus was gone, but He had left in all the dignity and majesty of a triumphant Lord.

What they saw caused John to believe. It appears (v. 9) that they had not yet understood the clear teachings of the Old Testament regarding the death and resurrection of Christ. They were slow to believe. Let not any in our day, with its greater light, fail to believe.

Peter and John came and saw—and then "they went away again unto their own home." And so they missed seeing Christ Himself.

II. Mary Met the Risen Christ (vv. 11-17).

The tears of Mary were the genuine expression of a devoted heart, but they were nevertheless mistaken tears. The question of the angel reveals that fact. Why weep because His body was gone, when that was the very thing which should give her joy? Why weep over a dead Christ when He was alive?

How often our discernment is dimmed by tears and our judgment warped by sorrow. We look on the wrong side of our circumstances and see only a tangle of threads and blurred colors. On the other side God is weaving a pattern of beauty and blessing, which will be our joy through all eternity. Why not remember that now?

Blinded with tears and troubled in heart, Mary did not even recognize the Lord when He spoke to her. But our Lord looking into her soul and knowing that it was her very love for Him which made it hard for her to think of anything but His death, gave to this true-hearted woman the privilege of first seeing Him after His resurrection.

As He spoke her name, she knew Him. We recall that Jesus Himself had said that He was the Good Shepherd who "calleth his own sheep by name" (John 10:3-14).

He knows your name and mine, fellow Christian, and one day we too shall hear His voice even as Mary did on that day. She believed and worshiped. Let us follow her example this Easter day.

There is a danger that the observance of Easter may lose its real significance in the empty incidentals which the world would have us believe make the day. It is a holiday. There is thought of new clothes, of formal church attendance, of family gatherings, of flowers and feasting. They are all right in their proper place. But let us be sure that no adult fails to meet the risen Christ today, and let us be sure that the smallest child knows that this is more than the day of bunnies and candy eggs. They will rejoice in the knowledge that a victorious Christ lives to give them eternal life.

Let us really "keep the feast" this year, purging out the leaven of hypocrisy and dead works, and remembering Christ (see I Cor. 5:7, 8).

Allied And Jap Rations Compared

What the Jap soldier uses for emergency rations is revealed in a report received at Headquarters, Fourth Service Command, and its comparison with the American soldier's famous Type-K Ration draws a sharp contrast.

The Jap ration, returned from the Southwest Pacific on an American transport and analyzed at a quartermaster depot, consisted of: Two bottles of lactic acid health drink, a small container of wheat germ vitamin pills, and, the main dsh, a No. 2½ sized can containing two layers of rice and bean curd mixture.

Each layer of the main dish, it was reported, was in four portions, and was made of cooked, partially polished rice with small pieces of a vegetable like a carrot. It was seasoned with a soy sauce. Each portion of rice was wrapped in a sort of casing of rubbery, tough batter probably made of curd. The can weighed 586 grams and each section of the rice food weighed 73 grams.

The health drink was described as "a thick, sticky, sirupy, opaque liquid of a pinkish light beige color and with a strong acid odor, resembling a mixture of pineapple and almond." Small particles sticking to the sides of the bottle were like the sediment found in canned pineapple.

The vitamin tablets came in a bottle of 300 and instructions, in English as to the dose, recommended from four to eight tablets three times a day.

The American soldier's Type-K emergency ration, weighs three and a quarter pounds. It is wrapped in three water, moisture and gas proof packages, one each for breakfast, dinner and supper.

Breakfast: Two packages of fortified biscuits, a can of chopped ham and eggs, one fruit bar, five grams of soluble coffee, three tables of sugar, one stick of chewing gum nd four cigarettes.

Dinner: Two packages of biscuits, a can of American cheddar cheese, a package of malted milk dextrose tablets with added nutrition, a package of lemon juice for lemonade, three tablets of sugar, a stick of chewing gum and four cigarettes.

Supper: Two packages of biscuits, a package of beef boullion powder, a can of beef and pork luncheon meat, a two-ounce bar of fortified chocolate, exceptionally rich in caloric value, a stick of chewing gum and four cigargettes.

When an American soldier eats the contents of the three packages he has consumed 4,200 calories ,against 3,600 calories, the average in the three meals he eats in his mess hall on an Army post.

UNIFIED DEFERMENT PLAN FOR ALABAMA

A unified program for helping farmers and farm workers in every Alabama county obtain deferment to produce essential war crops and livestock was formulated at a joint meeting of officials of the Alabama State Headquarters of the Selective Service and the Alabama USDA War Board here this week.

Unified forms for farmers to use in making applications for deferment were prepared and approved. These forms are at present being sent to county selective service boards and to county USDA war boards so that farmers may obtain copies to use in applying for deferment.

After the forms are filled out they will be given to the county war board for checking and certification. If approved by the war board the forms will be sent to the Selective Service Board for final approval.

At the meeting here the Selective Service was represented by Maj. J. T. Johnson and M. B. York, while the State USDA War Board was represented by A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator, J. L. Lawson, assistant director, extension service, Alabama Polytechnic Institute; O. C. Medlock, State coordnator, Soil Conservation Service; Charles R. Lee, Farm Security Administration; J. C. Garrett, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and William R. Sewell, Food Distribution Administraton.

Russia lost 40 per cent of its best food producing areas by German invasion, which could compare with the U S. losing the Middle-West; even if recaptured, this Russian land is useless for crops for another year or two.

The new quick-freeze plant at Georgiana, Butler County, will have a capacity of 50 tons a day.

Troy retail merchants are observing Thursday half-holidays during the summer, to aid Victory Garedns.

Top Meat Prices Listed By OPA

State OPA officials this week listed the top prices which housewives in South and Central Alabama will pay for principal cuts of beef, veal, lamb and mutton, under terms of the new regulation fixing specific ceiling prices for these products.

In chan stores and ndependents whose gross business is more than $250,00 annually, these retail ceiling prices will prevail in this district:

Leg of lamb, whole, half or short cut, 43 cents a pound; lamb rib chops, 50 cents; veal cutlets, 50 cents; roast beef (10-nch rib), 38 cents; round steak (bone in), 47 cents; sirloin steak (bone in), 45 cents; porterhouse steak, 60 cents; chuck roast (bone in) 34 cents; ground beef (hamburger) 31 cents.

Ceiling prices for these cuts in independents in South and Central Alabama whose gross is less than $250,000 annually: Leg of lamb, 45 cents a pound; lmb arib chops, 52 cents; veal cutlet, 52 cents; roast beef, 39 cents; round steak, 49 cents; sirloin steak, 47 cents; porterhouse steak, 63 cents; chuck roast, 36 cents, and ground beef (hamburger), 32 cents.

The new regulation, effective April 15, eliminates separate ceiling prices for each store. OPA officials emphasized that a retailer may charge less than the new ceilings for his meat cuts.

A carload of dehydrated onions shipped from California to New York will save 54,000 car-miles which would would otherwise be necessary in handling the useless water in fresh onions.

Jerry Streety, 5, of near Pell City, was struck and killed by a train in Ledds. A number of small children in Alabama have met tragic deaths this year.

Peanuts normally will yield three times as much oil per acre as cotton.

A FAITHFUL SAINT

Among the great and good women of Chilton County, there is an elderly woman of the Providence Community who. quite often, walks to church and who is among the first to get there. She has shown her faith by her good works, the equal of those who attended Christ and the desciples. This woman is known as Aunt Hale Robinson. She has pieced and quilted 125 quilts and gave them away, principally to her pastors. Besides these, she has quilted many more and given them to her children and grandchieldren. All this was done by lamplight.

We are reminded of what Jesus said about Mary, who broke the costly box and anointed the Lord. "Where the gospel shall be preached, this shall be told as a memorial of her."—A Minister.

ALABAMA TRAFFIC DEATHS CUT BY MORE THAN 50%

Alabama motor vehicle traffic deaths declined by more than 50 per cent in the first three months of this year, as compared with the first quarter of last year, according to word received from Chief Van Gilbert, director of the State Department of Public Safety.

Chief Gilbert said1942 first quarter traffic deaths totaled 191—January 68, February 56 and March 67—whereas preliminary reports list only 81 fatalities in the first quarter of this year: 29 in January, 27 in February and 25 in March.

At the request of the Army, USDA entomologists developed methods which can be used in highly mobile warfare to free clothing from lice in 30 minutes.

The Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station has found that poisoning due to gossypol in cottonseed meal can be alleviated by practical heat treatments.

FENCE WIRE NO LONGER RATIONED

Each county USDA War Board was notified early this week that rationing restrictions on fence wire had been lifted and that it would no longer be necessary to obtain a purchase certificate before buying wire fence [illegible] type normally used on the farm or in backyard gardening and poultry raising.

Regular farmers and 'Victory Farmers" may now purchase whatever fence is needed from their supply merchants or hardware dealers.

Notice of Government Restrictions Regarding Fishing and Use of Boats Above and Below Power Dams

Executive orders of the President of the United States and rules and regulations of the Navy Department make the following waters of the Coosa and Tallapoosa rivers restricted areas:

All waters within 2,500 feet above, and 1,250 feet below, each of the following river structures operated by the Alabama Power Company: Lay Dam, Mitchell Dam, Jordan Dam, on the Coosa River; Martin Dam, Tallassee Dam, Thurlow Dam, on the Tallapoosa River.

These areas may not be entered for any purpose without specific authority from the Captain of the Port of Mobile. Even our work boats must get such authority and our employees on them must carry official U. S. Coast Guard identification cards.

Under the regulations, guards at the dams are enlisted as civilian auxiliaries to the Military Police and are designated as enforcement officers who are directed to apprehend and detain violators. The regulations state that no boat of ANY KIND except vessels operated by the United States shall "enter, navigate, anchor, or moor" within the prohibited areas without permission from the Captain of the Port of Mobile. These regulations apply to all fishing boats and pleasure craft.

Penalties for violations of these rules and regulations, approved by the President of the United States on September 9, 1942, are forfeiture to the United States of the boat, together with tackle, apparel, furniture and equipment and, in the discretion of the court, fine and imprisonment.

Please observe this friendly warning and avoid embarrassment to yourself and us. The regulations are being rigidly enforced under direction of the Captain of the Port of Mobile, U. S. Coast Guard.

You may still fish in parts of the lakes not within the restricted areas. Signs prominently displayed on the banks show the limits of prohibited areas.

Strange! But the Jap's the Prisoner

This fine, young American was formerly employed by the L & N at Louisville, Kentucky . . . volunteered in 1941 . . . fought at Bataan . . . was captured by the Japanese.

Temporarily, a Little Jap with a Big Gun holds him in a concentration camp.

Physically confined? Yes! But his soul is free and his American Spirit soars back across the seas to his beloved homeland where . . .

men speak, live, plan, work, play and pray as they choose;
every person is master of his fate;
life and property are protected by law;
children laugh and grow up in freedom to reach high places in government or industry according to their merit.

Yes, the Jap's the real prisoner. He has never known the joys of individual freedom. His lot is to serve a master blindly. He has never known the glorious privilege of living under laws that he has had a part in making. He has never seen Free Men and Free Enterprise build a wonderful country like America where the comforts of the ordinary man are beyond his fondest dreams.

Ours is a great Country, made so under our form of government, by Free Men, by Free Enterprise. That's what we are fighting to preserve.

PRESIDENT
LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD

The immediate purpose of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and employees is to help win the war. This done, its energies will be again directed to the South's all-around development in which it has already played an important part. Despite much misunderstanding of the complicated freight rate structure, the average rates on actual movement from the South to the North are as low as, or lower than, from the North to the South. To encourage the free movement of goods manufactured in the South to consuming centers in the North and East, Southern railroads make rates necessary to accomplish that purpose.

ALABAMA SCHOOL FIRE LOSSES TOP $3,500,000 IN TEN YEARS

Fires destroyed more than $3,500,000 in school property in Alabama during the last 10 years, education officials pointed out today, appealing for greater cooperation of the general public in reducing these losses.

Losses for the fiscal years from 1931-32 to 1940-41 inclusive, totaled nearly $3,500.00 on county schools alone, according to Dr. E. B. Norton, State superintendent of education. During this period $2,205,739 in insurance claims were paid out to the 67 county school boards.

In the same period the boards paid $2,187,160 in insurance premiums, or $18,579 less than they collected in claims. Pratically all schools governed by county boards of education are insured through the State Insurance Fund, at 75 per cent of their value.

School fire insurance claims paid during the 10-year period ranged from $60 in Wilcox County to $131,240 in Blount County, which had the highest ratio of fire loss in proportion to in[illegible] premiums paid.

in [illegible] fires. Thus this county ranked 53rd in having the least school [illegible] in proportion to the insurance carried.

"In the judgment of local school superintendents, about a fifth of all school fires either were deliberately started or were caused accidentally by persons who illegally broke into the school buildings," said Dr. Norton.

Dr. Norton pointed out that periodic checks are required of all school principals, who are asked to watch for hazards in their heating and electric wiring systems and laboratories and home economics rooms, and to guard aganst accumulations of inflammable.

The goal of the Second War Loan drive is 13 billion dollars. That is just about one fifth of the estimated increase of the Public Debt for the fiscal year of 1943.

If every man, woman and child in the United States lays aside $100 the aggregate will be about $13,000,000,000 or the amount the Treasury must raise in its Second War Loan.

American People Face Acid Test in Treasury's 2nd War Loan To Raise 13 Billion Dollars in Three Weeks

The Nation Dare Not Fail in This Greatest Financing Task in History—"They Give Their Lives—You Lend Your Money."

Washington, D. C.—Coming as it does upon the heels of income tax payments, the people of America will face an acid test this month when the Treasury's Second War Loan drive opens April 12 with an objective of thirteen billion dollars to be raised through sale of Government securities.

A substantial part of this huge financing, the most stupendous ever undertaken by any government in the world's history, must be loaned by people in ordinary walks of life.

High Government officials have pointed out that the nation must not fail in this duty to our men on the battle fronts who are now carrying the offensive to the enemy at every stage. It is obvious to every thinking man and woman that as the United Nations take this offensive against the dictators, the cost of war operations increases in proportion.

The American people must no longer think of war costs in terms of equipping a soldier, building a tank or plane or a ship. We must now think in terms of the cost of battles, invasions and new offensives. Attacking armies cost more money than equipping that army and we must meet that increased cost by buying more War Bonds and Second War Loan Securities.

They Give Their Lives.

It is not only necessary that the American people left here at home assume this additional participation in the war effort—it is an honor to do so . . . for we here at home can do no less than attempt to approach the sacrifices of our brave men out on the fighting fronts to whom the last great measure of sacrifice is but a daily offering. They give their lives . . . we are asked only to lend our money.

And that is the theme of the Second War Loan, "They Give Their Lives—You Lend Your Money."

Financial experts who know monetary conditions in the nation point out that at the present time there is in liquid funds, cash and commercial bank deposits over and above taxes and present investment in Government Bonds, and over and above what can be bought this year because of restrictions and rationing . . . approximately 40 billions of dollars which should go into Government Bonds.

It should be the objective of every American to invest these loose dollars, idle dollars, in Government securities, not only from a patriotic standpoint, but from the standpoint of their own financial security. There is available during the Second War Loan a type of Security to fit every pocketbook.

Are Wild Dollars

Every dollar of these forty billions of dollars available, which is not invested in Government securities during this War Loan Drive is a "wild" dollar which, together with its mates, will tend to increase inflation. Uncontrolled inflation might raise the cost of living to a point where the dollar is worthless. It can happen. It happened in Germany after the last war when the price of a loaf of bread cost more than an annual wage.

Invested in Government securities, your dollar will work for you. It will hold down inflation because it is harnessed in war work; it will help buy food, transportation, munitions for our boys on the front lines and it will be earning interest that, together with your original loan, will come back to you later to help you buy the things you cannot buy today . . . to insure your peace of the future.

Remember those boys out there . . . in Tunisia . . . in the South Pacific . . . They give their lives—You lend your money.

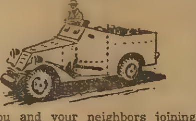
What You Buy With WAR BONDS

A scout car is a low-slung motor car armored with heavy steel plate, used to transport troops from one point to another. It is of low silhouette and gives protection against machine gun and other ground fire. A scout car costs $5,000.



You and your neighbors joining together can buy one of these vehicles for the Ordnance Department of our army with your purchase of War Bonds. We need hundreds of them and need them quickly. Put at least ten percent of your wages or income into War Bonds every pay day and help your fellow Americans top the War Bond quota in your county.

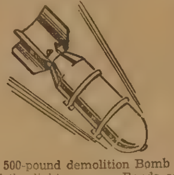
American flyers with the RAF are raining demolition bombs on Nazi cities today. These instruments of destruction so important in razing Nazi war plants, interrupting railroad transportation, and other war objectives, range now unto several tons.



The 500-pound demolition Bomb is one of the lighter ones. Bands are attached to facilitate handling and the fins are not attached until the Bomb reaches the airfield, because bending would injure accuracy. They cost up to $500. Your purchase of War Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan will help provide Bombs for our airmen. Let's "Top that Ten Percent."

"'U' Boats Are a Menace — Help Us Destroy Them"

"One of the biggest tasks facing our Navy in this war is the building of sufficient escort vessels to protect our ships in convoy, against the torpedoes of prowling 'U' boats.

"The long distance telephone plays a vital role in the building of these sturdy ships that help keep our shipping lanes clear. From keel to top deck and from bow to stern, thousands of telephone calls assist the speedy launching of each powerful vessel—calls to suppliers and shippers in all parts of the country.

"How important it is then, that long distance telephone lines to war-busy centers be kept free of unessential calls.

"Those who build the tools to destroy our enemies are counting on you to help free the lanes of communication, that the seas may be freed for safe shipping."

If You Have a Son or a Daughter in the Service You'll Buy War Bond

If you are not experiencing the pride, the fears, the hopes of those whose loved ones are in the service—if every night is not a prayerful one for you—then buy War Bonds because you love your country, because it's your DUTY to buy them and because those sons and daughters of your closest friends must have the support your dollars will give. And, should you need a further inducement, remember that losing this war means a loss—to you, personally—of ALL your savings. WINNING it means a continuing opportunity for you and yours to enjoy life in a nation where the blessings of freedom are still abundant, even under the necessary restrictions of war.

YOU can help win this war by LENDING, not giving, your money to our government. You do this by buying War Bonds. Buy the kind best suited to your circumstances, but BUY! You'll have the added satisfaction of knowing that no other form of saving can compare with them.

Chicken and Rice—Fine Favorite for Easter
(See Recipes Below)

Easter Essentials

How differently you will plan your Easter dinner this year! You may have to forget many of the traditional foods and use only what your ration points will allow you—or what you can obtain at the grocer's.

Many of you in former times had baked ham or leg of lamb, but perhaps this year it may be chicken, or whatever ration points will allow. So, get out your ration points and put on your thinking caps, ladies, and see what we can have to make this dinner a success.

Markets throughout the country will have different meats available for your selection. A lot will depend upon how well you have saved your points to splurge on this occasion.

If you plan chicken, stretch it with rice as we do in this recipe:

Fricassee of Chicken.
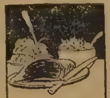
(Serves 6 to 8)
4-pound chicken
¼ cup flour
3 tablespoons chicken fat
2 teaspoons salt
Paprika
3½ cups boiling water
Freshly boiled rice

Clean chicken and cut into serving portions. Dredge with flour and brown in fat. Add seasonings and boiling water to half cover. Simmer, closely covered, until tender, about 1½ to 3 hours. If desired, place in oven to brown slightly after tender, and serve with boiled rice.



Some of you will perhaps be fortunate enough to obtain lamb. If you cannot obtain a leg of lamb, a shoulder cut will be nice to serve with this barbecue sauce:

Lamb Shoulder, Barbecued.
4 pounds shoulder of lamb
1 medium onion
½ cup chili sauce
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Dash of cayenne
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 cup water

Mix onion, chili sauce, seasonings with vinegar and water. Pour over lamb which has been wiped with a damp cloth and place in pan with tightly fitting cover. Cover. Bake at 350 degrees for 3½ hours.

Orange and Greens Salad.
(Serves 8)
4 cups coarsely shredded greens (lettuce, endive, watercress)
¼ cup sliced, stuffed green olives
½ cup diced orange sections
¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup salad oil
4 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon celery seed
½ teaspoon worcestershire sauce

Combine salad greens with oranges, olives, green pepper. Mix salad oil, lemon juice and seasonings. Just before serving toss lightly together, mixing well together.

Lynn Says:

How to Save Ration Points: If your old recipes call for tomato juice, tomato soup and other canned tomatoes, substitute brown gravy. In most cases, it will work quite well.

Substitute fresh fruits for canned and dried fruits in desserts and buy heavily of citrus fruits. Serve them sectioned or sliced. Use seasonal fruits generously, as applesauce and rhubarb.

Store any excess water from cooked vegetables, and have it well covered when stored. Use in soups, gravies and stews.

When cookie recipes call for dried fruits, omit them or use them sparingly.

Omit chili sauce, catsup and chow chow from menus. Use them for seasoning foods such as meat when cooking or for sandwiches when necessary.

Corn Bread.
2 cups yellow corn meal
2 cups sweet milk
4 teaspoons baking powder
3 tablespoons bacon drippings or shortening
1 tablespoon sugar
1¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg

Mix dry ingredients together. Beat egg, add milk and bacon drippings to it, then blend into dry ingredients. Pour into a well-greased shallow pan which has been heated. Bake in a 425 degree oven for 30 minutes.

An upside-down cake would make a lovely closing to an Easter dinner. What to make it with? There are several items, first of which is rhubarb — fresh and strawberry-colored. You could use apples, if you like, or fruit cocktail which does not take as many points as other canned fruits.

Rhubarb Upside-Down Cake.
(Serves 8)
4 cups cut rhubarb
1 cup sugar
1¾ cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
⅓ teaspoon almond extract
⅓ teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup milk

Cook rhubarb over low heat until juice begins to run. Add sugar and mix well. Simmer about 10 minutes and pour into a greased cake pan. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cream shortening, add sugar, and beat until fluffy. Add egg yolks and flavorings and beat thoroughly. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry and fold into mixture. Pour over rhubarb and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 40 to 50 minutes. Loosen cake from sides of pan and turn onto platter.

If you desire a simpler dessert, try these:

Lemon Sponge Cups.
(Serves 6)
2 tablespoons butter
¾ cup sugar
4 tablespoons all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
5 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
3 eggs, separated
1½ cups milk

Cream butter, add sugar, flour, salt, lemon juice and rind. Add well-beaten egg yolks which have been mixed with milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into greased custard cups. Set in a pan of hot water and bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Cool and unmold.

Table Decorations

If your food is simpler this year, don't feel that your table need lack festivity suitable for the Easter occasion. In many of your gardens daffodils or jonquils and tulips will be out—ready and waiting to do their nicest for your Easter dinner.

An effective centerpiece can be made from as few as a half dozen daffodils with their own green foliage in a shallow bowl. Have table accessories harmonize with this color scheme by using a pale yellow or white cloth with napkins.

If your taste—or your garden runs to tulips, try deep red tulips with white snapdragons.

ALL the Ameches aren't in the movies. Dark-eyed Jim, who looks enough like brother Don to be his twin, has made good on his own in radio by landing the master of ceremonies assignment on that new all-musical program, "Here's to Romance," on the Blue Network Sundays. Two movie personalities are featured—orchestra leader David Broekman, whose long-time association with Columbia pictures enabled him to score 60 films, and singer Buddy Clark; his latest picture is "Seven Days' Leave." Jim Ameche was born and educated at Kenosha, Wis., and was introduced to radio by his older brother, Don, who advised him to take an audition for Jack Armstrong—All American Boy. Jim landed the part and since has played the lead in several radio series.

Pat O'Brien, back at work—in RKO's "The Iron Major"—is still marveling over his trip home after eight weeks of entertaining at army camps overseas. He breakfasted at Trinidad, lunched at Haiti, dined at Miami, breakfasted the next morning in New York. He wants to make another army camp tour, but says next time he'll take his wife along; that two-months' separation was too long.

So Merle Oberon said she was retiring from the screen! As usual after such announcements, the star has signed a long-term contract; this one's with Metro, and she'll make pictures in Hollywood and in London. Seems as if, when a star wants to retire, the studios realize what they'll be missing and can't wait to make sure of keeping good box-office material.

Susan Hayward, who did an army camp tour after she visited New York when "Reap the Wild Wind" was released nationally, has been given the feminine lead in "The Man in Half Moon Street" by Paramount. Susan's on her way up, fast!

Judy Garland is proudly wearing a pair of silver wings, sent her by the young paratroopers of Fort Benning, Ga., who recently dubbed her "The Parabelle." You'll see her wearing them for a scene in "Girl Crazy," in which she stars with Mickey Rooney.

Joan Thorsen, famous as a model after she appeared on the covers of six national magazines in rapid succession, has been given her first movie role by Metro. She's beautiful and glamorous—so she'll portray a Russian girl guerrilla, and will make her screen debut wearing a peasant smock, and with her face blacked up, in "Russia," the Robert Taylor picture.

Mayo Methot — Mrs. Humphrey Bogart—is on location with her husband for "Somewhere in Sahara." The other day when they unpacked their lunch kits she spied three kegs, which they used as chairs and a table till the powder man approached. "Sorry, Mr. Bogart," said he, "But I'll have to move these dynamite kegs." Whereupon the Bogarts moved, fast and without argument.

Looks as if Helmut Dantine, who scored so heavily with his Nazi-aviator performance in "Mrs. Miniver," is headed for stardom. Seems he's turned in another grand performance in Warner's "The Edge of Darkness," and Jack L. Warner is looking for possible starring material for him. His fan mail has shown a 300 per cent increase during the past three months.

Half of World Doesn't Know What Other Thinks

A commercial traveler put up for the night at a small country inn. In the breakfast room the following morning he was asked by the landlord how he had enjoyed the cornet playing in the next bedroom during the night.

"Enjoyed it!" was the reply. "I should think not, indeed! Why, I spent half the night pounding on the wall to make that cornet player stop."

"I'm afraid there's been a misunderstanding," said the landlord, stiffly. "The cornet player told me that the person in the next room applauded so heartily that he played every piece he knew five times over."

High-Strung Goat Drops In Faint When Surprised

An odd kind of goat found in Tennessee, whose origin has never been determined, baffles scientists. A sudden clap of hands, a yell or the unexpected sight of a person will cause these goats to collapse in a faint! They roll over frozen in unconscious rigidity for 10 seconds to 1½ minutes. Then they arise and become their normal selves again.

But once these highly strung goats—victims, probably, of hereditary nervous abnormalities—have fallen into "trances," they cannot soon be frozen again.

APRIL 8th, 1943.

Julia Clecker, Complainant, vs. Ollie Clecker, Defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of Jula Cleckler that the Defendant is a non-resident, and that his place of residence and post-office address is unknown, and that such address cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort and, further, that, in the belief of said affiant, the Defendant is over the age of twenty-one years:

It is, therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the County of Chilton once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring him, the said Ollie Cleckler, to plead, answer, or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 8th day of May, 1943, or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against him.

Done at office in Clanton, Alabama, this 8th day of April, 1943.

M. D. FOSHEE,
Register.

SOLDIERS ON THE TRANSPORTATION FRONT

YOU'VE met a man in pre-war days whose stock in trade is Service to Travelers . . . courteous, efficient service, if you will. He's your Greyhound agent. He is still doing business at the same old stand, and today his experience and travel knowledge mean more than ever before.

His is a neighborly sort of job — helping others. You'll find him busy every day with his first duty — the helpful dispatch of our men in uniform — be it hurried leaves before the overseas adventure — or reporting to new camps. Sometimes you'll catch him figuring a honeymoon trail, or charting the course for a sweet old lady. His day is packed with action — and he tackles each assignment with enthusiasm.

That's why Greyhound has an abiding affection for its agents. They have won the confidence and gratitude of our patrons . . . maintained at all times the high traditions of our service, in days when war brings new responsibilities and complexities to travel.

NEWS OF OUR BOYS IN THE SERVICE

This letter was brought to us with request to print it, by the mother Pvt. James Wallace Dennis, who stationed somewhere in Michigan would like to hear from his friends.

TO MY MOTHER AND DAD
From Pvt. Dennis

hen other boys forsake me
And things have made me sad;
think of those at home,
My mother and dear dad.

know that you are lonely;
And our debt is hard to pay.
t I'm praying with you, mother,
And I long for you each day.

n faithful in my writing,
And darling you are too.
n fighting for my country
In which I'm proud to do.

ncle Sammie called so many Sometimes it seems unjust, ut then we stop and think
And put in God our trust.

o matter what you do mom,
No matter where I go.
he blood that courses in my veins,
Will stand by you, you know.

lets all be cheerful.
Start each day with a smile
d when I go to bed at night
I count each day quite worthwhile

r as God smiles upon me,
I cast the smile on to another.
t just around the coarner,
Is another lonely mother.

is old world isn't quite so bad
If we try to think that way.
s bring whatever enjoyment
To the others that we may.

I sit here all alone,
I thought, 'what shall I do?"
I've picked up my pen, you see,
And written this to you.

ope it finds you feeling well
As we boys are today.
d as I close these lines to you,
This, too, I wish to say:

ar folks, I do love you!
Of course you always knew.
ur laddie I will always be,
Faithful, kind and true.

ove the flag I'm fighting for,
And the country we protect.
just remember, "God is love,"
That is the thing that is correct.

Good will mother, pray for us,
Our sins be cast away.
y Old Glory wave forever
n the land where we now stay.

—Your Son.

About Canned Foods And Meat Rationing

A question and answer release, covering important points on the canned foods, meats and fats rationing regulations and the Department of Agriculture,s new meat control orders, was issued this week by the Office of War Information. The questions and answers follow:

Q. Must farmers who sell any of the rationed meats and fats collect ration stamps for such sales?

A. The answer is yes. Regardless of where the sale is made, be it on the farm or in a curb market, stamps must be collected. When a farmer makes sales of the ratoned meats and fats, he becomes a primary distributor and must register as such with his local War Price and Rationing Board. The stamps he collects must be turned in to the board once a month.

Q. How about a person who has one cow and sells a small quantity of surplus butter. Do these same rules apply?

A. Yes.

IT'S THE ZERO HOUR CHILTON COUNTY

Many Alabama Counties have reached their quota. Some have exceeded their quota, a few struggle along with scant hope of success. Chilton County is near the desired figure. We will win or we will fail and the result depends entirely on our people. If we are lax these last days, we will fail. If every one is up and going, buying as many bonds as possible and useing every effort to get others to buy we will meet the quota and we will have a just right to be proud of Chilton County.

Every Bond we buy is a bullet for Hitler and a Jap. American soldiers, Chilton rounty soldiers are reaching out their hands pleading with us to place the weapons in their hands, lets not fail them One big push and we are over the top. Buy Bonds, Sell Bonds.

Yours for Victory,

L. H. Reynolds, War Bond Chm.
F. J. Callen, Victory Fund Chm.

PET MOUSE KEEPS BUGS AWAY AT GUNTER FIELD

"Wimpy" a field mouse, is the only rodent in the world with the exception of Hitler who holds an army commission.

This mouse is the pet of the men in a squadron at Gunter Field and is especially useful in blitzing bugs that inhabit bedding when placed outdoors for a weekly airing.

Aside from his diet of bugs, "Wimpy" thrives on hamburger meat, thus the appropriate name.

As Wimpy is also apt to steal soda crackers and cheese that's left around the barracks, when he's off-duty, the men have awarded him an honorary commission of "4th LOOTenant."

Clanton Holds First Town Meeting For War In State

The first town meeting for war held in the State of Alabama was held at the Chilton County Courthouse in Clanton Monday night, when Judge J. E. Livingston, member of the Alabama Supreme Court, addressed several score of citizen. Although to the committee in charge the crowd was disappointing, nevertheless, according to reports from those who heard the speech, no more firey or inspiring speech has been delivered here since first the war began.

Chilton County High School's popular Band furnished the martail music and a patriotic atmosphere filled the courtroom as Mayor Cohen E. Stapp introduced the speakers.

A report from Judge L. H. Reynolds, Chairman of the County War Bond Committee, was well taken.

The meeting was closed with the Salute to the Flag, while the Band played The Star Spangled Banner.

It was voted by the meeting to hold such a gathering once each month to discuss problems concerning the war

COLORED PEOPLE BUY $500 IN BONDS SATURDAY

Reports from the office of County Supt. of Ed. show the colored folks of Clanton bought more than $500 in Bonds last Saturday at that office alone. A complete check of the county was not made.

The Georgia Mae Ogburn Circle met early Monday afternoon with Mrs. Flem Higgins. The devotional was led by Mrs. Horsley White. After the monthly business was completed, the meeting adjourned. The members went to the Red Cross work room, where they with other Red Cross workers, made surgical dressings. The Society business meeting will be held at the First Baptist Church May 3. The Ogburn Circle will meet with Mrs M. D. Foshee, May 10, at 3 o'clock.

FARMS STILL YIELD QUANTITIES OF SCRAP

Farmers who did a good job in collecting scrap metal during the 1942 drive are finding to their surprise that many odds and ends and some large items were overlooked, Leon Gilbert, executive secretry of the Alabama Salvage Committee, said today.

"Although the battles in Tunisia are requiring large quantities of munitions much more will be needed when the invasion of Europe starts," said Gilbert. "It's up to every one of us to get out the scrap in earnest this year."

Rationing News

All producers of meats and fats (including butter) should send in the red stamps which they have collected, on the sale of meats and butter, to the Local War Price and Rationing Board within 15 days after April 30. Be sure to put name and address in envelope with these stamps when they are sent in. When these stamps are received by the rationing office each person sending in these stamps will be mailed forms for making reports each month.

RETAILERS:

The chairman of the local War Price and Rationing Board today reminded retailers that this is the week in which they must establish their allowable inventories of rationed meats and fats To obtain a working inventory, retailers take three times the poin sales total of the April 25-Mayl week These inventories must then be reported to the board during the period of May 3 to 14. Retailers will use Form R 1601 for this report.

CANNING SUGAR:

Within the next ten days there will be distributed through the schools, retail stores, and the news papers application forms for obtaining sugar for canning purposes. When you get this form please fill it out and MAIL it to the Local Rationing Board, Clanton, Ala. DO NOT bring this form to the Rationing Board Office and ask for your sugar certificate, as all sugar certificates will be MAILED to those people asking for them within four days after application has been received in proper form.

Sugar certificates will be issued in units of 25 pounds or less. If you are making application for 50 pounds of sugar you will be issued two certificates of 25 pounds each. The reason for this is that you will be able to purchase all the sugar called for on one certificate at one time. The merchant has been given instructions NOT to split sugar certificates as was done last year.

The food panel of the ration board has given careful study to the canning sugar situation and with the cooperation of the county home demonstration agent has arrived at the basis for

LOCAL FARMER DOING BIT TO AID ALLIES

Dear Sir:

I am writing you concerning the things I have done, and will do to help win the war. $ itend to do more than ever before if possible.

Last year I made plenty of food stuff for my own use except flour. Last year we canned 400, quarts of fruits and vegetables and we expect to increase our canning at least 50 quarts this year. I am growing 1 acre of wheat this year. I sold on the market about 1000 bushels of peaches last year besides what we used at home and I expect to do the same this year. In the way of truck crops I sold 2 acres of vegetables such as tomatoes, peas, beans and corn. I erpect to grow 7 acres in the same mentioned above in 1943.

I am planting 2 acres in peanuts, I will use them for raising meat or either for oil. Last year I raised 12 hogs and sold them at about 100 lbs., each and killed one for home use weighing about 350 pounds. I expect to double this, this year. I milked 3 cows last year and will milk the same this year, I will also raise three calves.

I raised 100 chickens last year. I had about 65 laying hens. I expect to double this, this year.

There has been several hundred pounds of scrap iron and rubber collected on my farm, that went to the war effort.

I expect to pay all crops to treasury of the U. S. A., and to buy every war bond and stamp possible in 1943.

Yours truly,
R. L. HENLEY.

REV. FLOYD SMITH TO PREACH AT POPLAR SPRINGS

Boy Scouts To Hold Joint Meeting

Troop 57 Boy Scouts will be hosts to Troop 52 from the Alabama Mill at a combined meeting at the High School Thursday night, April 29th. John D. Mullins will preside and Field Executive Charles B. McKee will be present.

The Troop 57 charter will be presented and the membership cards given to the Scouts. Games and contests will be on the program and every Scout from both Troops should be in attendance.

The Clanton District Camporee planned for this week-end has been postponed until later in May. This Will give more time for the units to prepare for this Scouting and Camping demonstration and will be an impetus for summer camp plans.

SCHOOLS TO RUN NEXT TWO SATURDAYS; TO CLOSE NEXT TWO MONDAY'S

Upon request of the Berry Growers Association officials and the Manpower Commission, School officials have decided to run schools on Saturdays, May 1 and 8, and to close them on Mondays, May 3 and 10, so that children can pick berries on Monday. which is the biggest day of the week in the strawberry business. Berry Growers officials think that this new schedule will be of real help in gathering the crop of berries. Elementary schools will be affected next Saturday and Monday only, since they close on May 7. School officials emphasize the need for everyone doing his part toward harvesting the berry crop. Many people will be inconvenienced by this change of schedule, but it is felt that the benefits will justify the change.

SHOOT THE WORKS

The Senior Three Class of the Chilton High School is having their annual play Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock p. m. in the gymnasium of the high school.

The scene opens in the living room of a Restful Home for Restless People. Many strange and amusing incidents occur in this room. I'll let you find out for yourself what they are. Really, you'll laugh 'til your sides hurt !!

Kate Ashworth, played by Dorothy Nell Blalock, is the owner of the Home She is trying to find a husband for her young neice, Laura, played by Jean Waite—but, who has her own ideas. And what ideas they are.

The famous song writer, Jud Clarendon, his friend Max Neal, and the newspaper columnist, Guy Priest, and his body guard, Joke Moore, come to the house for a rest and that's where the excitement begins. There's a big mix-up. Lucinda Livermore is an old maid full of romantic ideas and who is always looking for "sweetie pie" and trying to protect him. She's a scream. And there's Homer Boylston who is interested in buying the Home. or rather was interested. He's deaf as a haddock.

Sally Hunt and Dex Newell are two newspaper reporters trying to get an interview with Jud Clarendon.

Does all this sound rather mixed up? Well, come to the play and see what it's all about and see how things get untangled.

The characters of the play according to their first appearance on the stage are:

Kate Ashworth	Dorothy Blalock
Laura Ashworth	Jean Waite
Lucinda Livermore	Nell Cooper
Lou Undine	Evelyn Wilson
Ruth Bright	Ruby Tippett
Jud Clarendon	Paul Smith
Max Neal	Loyd McGee
Homer Boylston	Ellis Stanley
Guy Priest	Elbert Griffin
Jake Moore	Lamar Teel
Sally Hunt	Katherine Bell
Dex Newall	James Dunlap
Joshaw Perkins	Oscar Jones
Bessie Perkins	Pattie Nell Plyler

SPEEDERS FACE CRACKDOWN BY RATION BOARDS

Developments came thick and fast this week, indicating that speeders who thus far have not been dealt with by their local rationing boards face drastic penalties in the near future. Among signs of the weather were:

1. OPA officials with jurisdiction over 37 counties in south and central Alabama urged all local ration boards to take "disciplinary acton" against convicted speeders. Last Sept. 1, the boards were simply advised that the names of such offenders would be forwarded to them and that they had the power to deny tires and gasoline to rubber-scorchers. Names of 1800 odd speeders have been given the OPA by the State Department of Public Safety.

2. The Montgomery County Rationing Board decided to call in the gas books of all convicted speeders in the jurisdiction and make them show cause why they shiuld not be diciplined.

Rommel's Southern Front Stronghold Captured in British Eighth Army Drive; FDR, Camacho Join in 'Neighbor' Plea; American Fliers Pound Japs in Pacific

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, U. S. A., head of the Allied forces in Africa, takes the salute of a sentry as he inspects front lines in Tunisia. Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton Jr., commander of American ground forces driving through Tunisia, follows him. The colonel commanding the unit being inspected returns the sentry's salute.

TUNISIA:
Nazis Run Gauntlet

Axis efforts to reinforce their embattled armies in Tunisia met strong Allied resistance as Gen. Bernard Montgomery's 8th army opened a successful assault on the Enfidaville passes on the southern front. Enfidaville, Rommel's coastal anchor, fell after furious fighting.

While British naval units charged an Italian convoy in the narrow channel separating Sicily from Tunisia, American and British fighter planes fell upon huge German Junkers transports and cargo planes crossing the straits.

While British Spitfires held off Axis fighter escorts, American Warhawks (P-40) dived to attack the giant Junkers, flying almost at water level.

Fifty-eight of the Junkers and 16 of the fighters were claimed shot down. That brought to 142 the number of Axis aircraft destroyed in a three-day period.

Gen. Montgomery's hardened infantry stormed initial Axis positions in the mountains after artillery had laid down a heavy barrage.

FARM MEASURE:
House Economy

In one of its sharpest economy moves to date, the house passed by a voice vote and sent to the senate an agriculture department appropriation bill allotting $715,099,622 for the fiscal year 1944 but abolishing the Farm Security administration and banning incentive payments to farmers.

In its budget request the department had asked for $947,134,491. The measure lopped $240,093,647 off the original request. The revised total was reached by adding $20,000,000 for the Rural Electrification administration and striking $12,000,000 sought by the FSA for rural rehabilitation loans.

In its final form the house bill abolishes the FSA, abolishes the federal crop insurance program for wheat and cotton, stipulates that none of the funds may be used for incentive payments to farmers producing war crops, sets aside $300,000,000 for the AAA conservation program, prohibits payment of more than $500 to any one person for soil conservation purposes, prevents restoration of the Regional Credit Agricultural corporation and allots $20,000,000 for REA.

Belief was expressed in some quarters that the senate committee would reinstate the FSA to prevent it from being snuffed out.

RUSSIA:
Scramble for Base

Portending possible large scale action in the Caucasus, German troops continued their pressure in the Novorossisk region.

While the Russians claimed to have beaten back Nazi efforts to prevent their forces from tightening their vise around Novorossisk, the Germans said the luftwaffe pounded Red positions and supply bases on the Black sea coast.

Novorossisk stands as the Germans' lone important base in the Caucasus. Situated across from the Crimea, it was the only major position retained by the Nazis during their retreat this winter. It is a relatively short distance to Novorossisk from the Russian mainland connecting with the Crimea.

GOOD NEIGHBORS:
Visit in Monterrey

"We have, all of us, recognized the privilege of interdependence—one upon another."—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"Good neighbors. Good friends. That is what we have always wished to be for all the peoples of the earth."—Manuel Avila Camacho.

With those words, spoken on Mexican soil, the President of the United States and the president of Mexico reaffirmed the unity of the Americas and offered the good-neighbor policy as a model for the world, once the "machinery of barbarism constructed by the dictators is completely destroyed."

President Roosevelt arrived in Monterrey, site of the historic meeting, following an extensive tour of inspection through war centers in the southern part of the United States. He was high in praise of the troops, which he compared with those he had seen on his trip last September. He told the press he had found morale very, very high and declared the men looked extremely fit.

PACIFIC:
Action at Both Ends

Giving the Japs no rest, American fliers pounded enemy air fields and shipping at both ends of the Pacific.

Flying Fortresses, Liberators and Avengers struck at the Jap air base of Kahili in the Solomons, starting big fires and pocking the runways with bomb craters. Other units attacked Munda farther to the west, also causing damage.

While the air fields were being raided, Avenger torpedo planes sailed into a cluster of Jap ships bearing reinforcements for enemy troops in the Shortland island area of the Solomons. Five hits were scored on a 10,000-ton vessel, which was left sinking, and two other ships were battered by hits and near misses (bombs exploding alongside the target).

In the Aleutians to the north, bombers and fighter planes swooped down on Attu and Kiska. Results were unobserved at Attu, but hangars and camps were blown up and grounded planes strafed at Kiska.

WAR MANPOWER:
27 Million Frozen

If you're an employee in an essential industry, you're as good as frozen for the duration.

That is the substance of the War Manpower commission's orders forbidding employees in essential industry from changing jobs except under especial conditions.

Under the WMC's order, a worker must be irregularly employed or not employed to his best ability in an essential industry before he can shift jobs. In regions in which the WMC has decreed no labor shortage exists, employees in essential industry can take higher paying jobs if the moves are approved by the WMC.

The WMC order does not affect employees in non-essential industry, who are free to switch positions. In all, some 27 million workers are affected by the WMC ruling.

Invoking provisions of the Economic Stabilization act, the WMC established a fine of $1,000 and a year's imprisonment for violation of the order.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

LEND-LEASE: Lend-lease shipments to North Africa during the first four months of Allied occupation reached $26,250,000. Shipments included flour, sugar, clothing, seed.

HONEST STEEL: In a special report, the Truman war investigating committee called upon steel producers to overhaul their inspection systems so as to assure the government of the highest grades

FOUR FREEDOMS: Speaking in Guayaquil, Ecuador, Henry Wallace said that unless the four freedoms were instituted after the war, democracy will have failed.

PRAYERS: Prayers for peace were asked as the Vatican inaugurated weekly broadcasts to Russia. The broadcast told the people not to give up hope for a peace despite the continuance of the war.

FOOD SUPPLY:
Another Pull on Belt

Following a statement of the Office of War Information that there would be a reduction of 6 per cent in the food supply for this year, the department of agriculture revised its previous production estimates downward.

The department said there would be about 12 pounds less meat, a pound less poultry and fish, 2½ pounds less lard, margarine and cooking compounds, and about 10½ pounds less citrus fruits per person than anticipated earlier. Fractional increases were reported for canned fruits, potatoes and rice.

Despite the cut, the department said that the food supply per capita would equal the 1935-'39 total, but that rationing would spread the amount more equitably. The department also revealed that food production in 1943 will be 3 per cent above last year, if favorable weather prevails, and 31 per cent above the 1935-'39 average.

Of the total supply of food available this year, however, the army, lend-lease and world relief will obtain 25 per cent. Army requirements are based on a force of 8,200,000 men, who eat twice as much as civilians.

In its report, the OWI declared that food shortages will bring "inconveniences" and "exasperations" to consumers, but will not affect their life or health.

TOKYO:
Stung From Hornet

Equipped with a 20-cent bombsight, 16 North American B-25 medium bombers used the flight deck of the aircraft carrier Hornet to take off for the historic raid on Tokyo.

The Hornet was 800 miles from Tokyo when the B-25s rose in the air and headed for the Japanese coast line. As they approached, the airmen flew in at low level to avoid detection, and then raised their planes to 1,500 feet as they plastered factories, railways and refineries in Tokyo, Nagoya, Osaka and Kobe.

The original plan was to alight at certain points in unoccupied China, but storms arose, exhausting the planes' ebbing fuel supplies. Of the 16 craft, 15 made crash landings or were lost as their crews bailed out. Major General Doolittle, who led the raid, was among those who parachuted to safety.

Of the 80 pilots, eight fell into Jap hands. One was killed and two are still missing. Sixty-four survived, many of them landing in occupied China, but working their way to the unoccupied zone with the help of friendly natives.

Weak fighter opposition was encountered and anti-aircraft fire was inaccurate as the Japs were caught completely by surprise.

GOEBBELS:
No End of Sufferings

"The war is in its fourth year and has reached its hardest stage so far, and the end or a way out of its burdens and sufferings is at present nowhere in sight."

Thus spoke Nazi Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels on the eve of Adolf Hitler's 54th birthday. Goebbels said the fuehrer would spend the day at field headquarters.

While Goebbels spoke, Marshal Herman Goering issued an order of the day to the German army, stressing the same foreboding note.

Said he: ". . . We will follow the glorious German flag in accordance with our oaths as brave soldiers—in any hours and in any fight on land and sea in any area with the greatest readiness to sacrifice."

Eulogizing Hitler as the "liberator of the fatherland," Goering also called him the "savior of western civilization from the Bolshevik menace."

SUBMARINES:
Planes vs. Wolves

Allied airplanes have joined in the battle of the Atlantic.

Manning American Flying Fortresses and Liberators and British Sunderlands, Allied airmen are ranging far into the North Atlantic to strike against packs of Nazi U-boats, attacking the east-bound convoys.

Attached to the British coastal command, these long-range heavy bombers are meeting the harassed convoys on the last leg of their journey. They are dumping thousands of depth charges on the wolf-packs they can spot from aloft.

In recent action, the bombers delivered 19 attacks in four days. Seeking to avoid the concussion of the depth charges, U-boats climbed to the surface and then engaged the airplanes with anti-aircraft fire from their decks. The British air ministry claimed no kills, but said there was evidence of at least five submarines destroyed.

The Allied planes were manned by British, Canadian, Rhodesian, Australian, New Zealand and Belgian aviators.

FOOD CONFERENCE:
U. S. Has No Scheme

Representatives of United Nations will crowd Hot Springs, Va., May 18, for the Allied food conference sponsored by the United States.

According to Sen. Alben Barkley, the conference will be chiefly exploratory, with the various delegates specifying the needs of conquered peoples, the means required to restore production in occupied countries and the mutual distribution of foodstuffs.

TO YOUR Good Health
by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

LIGHT EXERCISE

It is unfortunate that a couple of outstanding physicians should advise that exercise should not be taken by those past 40 years of age. They were so opposed to exercise that they suggested that lifting the little finger unnecessarily might cause harm.

Now these physicians had but the one thought in mind and that was to discourage those middle-aged individuals from taking exercise who thought that "strenuous" exercise was needed just as much, if not more, at middle age than for those under 40. The advice was given to prevent strain on heart and blood vessels. These physicians are aware that in the treatment of the middle aged or elderly of average health the last thing they would want them to do is to rest all the time, that is become bedridden. This is because the body needs to move itself to keep heart, blood vessels, lungs, appetite, digestion and bowel movement normal. To rest all the time would lower the health mentally and physically.

I have in mind particularly those who are overweight and among the methods of getting rid of excess fat are already taking exercise or have been planning to take some exercise. As a matter of fact exercise is the "natural" way to reduce weight because it creates extra heat thus melting away the fat tissue which is inactive and developing muscle tissue which is active and heat creating when it is active.

"Exercise improves the circulation, sweeps away the stagnant waste materials which collect in the body, creates a sense of well-being which lasts for a long time afterward and burns fat."

The overweight individual because he is overweight does not like exercise as every movement of his body means that he must do much more work than one of normal weight. But as he gradually removes the stored fat on his body and increases his muscular strength he gets a threefold benefit—(a) removes excess fat, (b) increases his muscular strength and (c) because of this increased muscular strength loses his dislike for exercise. The fact that exercise is now easier to take, that he can feel himself becoming lighter and more "limber" makes exercise actually "inviting" to him.

Dried Foods Aid To Victory Effort

One of the things learned during the war, which will mean health and happiness to many more thousands than before the war, is that water can be removed from food on one side of the ocean, the food shipped in a space many times smaller to the other side of the ocean, where by adding water to the amount previously removed makes the food as nourishing as when it was fresh.

The London correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association states that research work carried on at the Low Temperature Research station, Cambridge, in co-operation with other institutions in Britain, and in the United States and dominions, has made possible the following beneficial results:

"It is estimated that removing the water from foods, while maintaining their food value, has saved shipping to the extent of 3,000,000 tons of water annually. A quart of milk has a volume of 69 cubic inches and weighs 41 ounces. Condensed, it has a volume of 27 cubic inches and weighs 16¾ ounces. Reduced to a powder, it has a volume of 15½ cubic inches and weighs 5⅓ ounces. With the powder compressed into a block the volume is reduced to about 7¾ inches from 15½. The discovery that fresh milk can be reduced to such a small space makes the rich spring and summer milk available for use in the winter, when there is less sunshine for cows and for human beings. This is of considerable importance.

Great Britain will import 100,000 tons of dried eggs in 1943. If this amount of eggs were shipped in the usual way with water and shells it would weigh 500,000 tons and take six times the amount of shipping space. A similar saving is made by importation of dried meat. Another advantage is that dried eggs and meat do not require refrigeration for transport or storing.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Are the internal organs of pork and beef considered safe for consumption?

A.—The organs are a valuable food. Should be well cooked.

Q.—Would it be safe for a person subject to sharp, stabbing pains in the right side of the chest to drive a car?

A.—While those symptoms point to a muscular pain, one visit to your doctor will show whether it is more serious.

Who's News This Week

NEW YORK. — In army circles they rate Maj. Gen. Harold L. George as one of the best impromptu speakers in the service. He likes to talk, his colleagues will tell you, and does it easily and well. He's the chief of the air transport command of the army air corps, and has been ever since its formation last July.

His Air Transport Command Is Gen. George's Pet Topic

Out in Australia the other day he likened the feats of his fliers to the tales of Jules Verne, and it wasn't so long ago that he was picturing with delight how his men had flown the equipment for a 24-bed hospital to Nome, Alaska, after a fire had destroyed its lone hospital. Just a year ago when he was made head of the ferry command of the army air corps, his major task was getting new planes from the factories to wherever they were needed. Now he has that problem and a whole lot of others, such as flying troops and essential supplies overseas.

He first learned about flying in World War I. A native of Sonerville, Mass., he was a student in the law school at National university on April 6, 1917. A month later he was a second lieutenant of cavalry Fall found him training to be a flier, however. He won his wings in March, 1918, and the following September he was in France as a bombing instructor at Clermont. Before the Armistice, he had been assigned to the 163rd aero squadron. After the war, he resumed his studies and won his LL B in 1920. His heart was in the army, however, and in 1921, he went back, this time to stay.

Since his return he has been stationed at a lot of places, Kelly Field, Texas, the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, out in Hawaii, and down at Maxwell Field, Alabama. They made him a captain in '32 and a major in '39. Meanwhile he had done plenty of flying.

Fit and bronzed and with keen blue eyes, he looks every inch a flier. He'll be 50 this summer, but he seems a lot younger despite graying hair.

THE man who has been swinging Bolivia into war against Hitler & Co. is a fighter and a believer in orderly government. Enrique Penaranda won his way to the top as a military leader in the Chaco war against Paraguay. Today he is equally famous as an able president.

Bolivia's President Can Swing Mailed Fist When Needed

When General Penaranda was elected chief executive in March, 1940, he depended on the ballots of his countrymen, not the muskets of his troops. For some years before that the stylish way to land in the presidential palace was by coup d'etat. His political opponents, on hearing the returns from the polls, decided old methods were best. The general promptly showed them he was still a warrior, and inauguration day found him taking office as scheduled and expressing his faith in democracy.

Born in the La Paz district 50 years ago, he entered his country's West Point in 1907 and graduated a second lieutenant three years later. He became a captain in '17, a major in '21, and a colonel in '32. The start of the war with Paraguay shot him swiftly to the top and three months after hostilities began he was made commander-in-chief.

FREE FRENCH circles offer a double barreled explanation for the failure of the United States to clear up the muddle of Martinique and Vice Admiral George Robert. They say the vice admiral is pro-Robert, but anti-everything else save the Four Families. These, they explain, boast of being the only truly white families on the island.

Martinique's 'Four Families' Control All but Mt. Pele

The four families are in complete control, it is claimed, of 247,000 natives and Martinique's economic existence.

The vice admiral could, if he would, make any deal without consulting Vichy to which he still vows loyalty. Vichy gave him full power in the French Antilles and authority to conclude any arrangement with the United States. He entered the French navy 50 years ago.

The admiral, after an old French custom, has an assortment of names —George Achilla Marie-Joseph. He is 68 years old now, with a white, out-jutting spade beard, and a temper some describe as not unlike a hornet's.

Whether Martinique's Social Register is limited to a mere quartette of families is, probably, debatable, but independent reports of Vice Admiral Robert's speech made last year at Fort-de-France certainly made it and him anti-American. He gave the "greed of Americans" a fine going over.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox, Jr. During a raid against the Japs, the PT boats captured a landing barge and took prisoner a Jap captain and one of his men. But Squadron 3 had also suffered the loss of two of their original six boats, and they were planning to escape to China, when all of their torpedoes were gone, unless help arrived.

CHAPTER VIII

"When we went out that night," said Bulkeley, "we didn't dream we were to take our final crack at the Japs off Bataan. I took two boats—Kelly in the 34, riding myself with Akers in the 35—to see if we couldn't bag one of the Jap destroyers which the army could see in Subic Bay. They'd been driven far back, but from the highest ridge of the Bataan mountains they could still look down into Subic with their 20-power binoculars.

"But the admiral had said we weren't to go into the bay. We must coax them outside. The Japs had the bay's rim lined with guns, and it would be suicide. We got outside of Subic about eleven o'clock. All according to plan, Kelly hid his 34 boat in a cove just outside the bay, while I went into the entrance and raised a little hell—fired my machine guns so they could see the tracers, hoping a Jap destroyer would follow me out, whereupon Kelly was to come out of the cove and lam a couple of torpedoes into their engine room. It didn't work. The Japs had had all they wanted of us. But just as I was about to leave, I saw from the entrance the outline of a big ship—tied to Olongapo dock."

"She was a big one," said Akers, "maybe 10,000 tons. A tanker, we learned the next day. So we turned back, sneaked toward her—there was no fire on us yet—and cut loose two torpedoes. By the time they exploded, we had cleared the mouth of the bay. But from the mountains of Bataan the army watched her burn all night, and in the morning there she was, sunk at her dock."

"They were our last torpedoes fired in defense of Bataan," said Bulkeley. "Since December 7 we had probably sunk a hundred times our own combined tonnage in enemy warships. While we'd lost two of our six boats, neither had been hit by the enemy—both had gone aground in the dark.

"On the way back I realized that we had fired our last torpedoes, except those we would need to fill our tubes for the run to China. And we had just about enough gas to get us there, with hardly a barrel to spare. If we were ever to make the run, we must make it soon. And it was getting plain that we couldn't do much more for Bataan, which was on its last legs."

"I can tell you about the army," said Cox. "I used to get bored at Sisiman Cove and take trips to the front—sometimes up into the outposts. There were a lot of men in uniform on Bataan, but the front-line fighting soldiers consisted, first, of about two thousand Americans, well seasoned and good fighters. Then, about twelve hundred Filipino Scouts—equally well trained and equally good. Lastly, they had in the fighting line about twenty-seven thousand Filipino trainees—young kids who had never worn a uniform until a few weeks before the war started.

"Their officers were equally untrained. Toward the end, it was grotesque. Tough, experienced American Regular Army privates would be giving orders to Filipino generals.

"Those two thousand Americans and the twelve hundred Scouts were the only real fighting men on Bataan, and they were run ragged—every time the Japs punched a hole in the line, these experienced troops would have to be thrown in to plug it—everywhere at once.

"Then there was the item of equipment—no spare parts. They had a few tanks left, with their treads falling off. A missing fan belt would put an entire tractor out of the war—for want of a tread, a tank would be junk by the roadside.

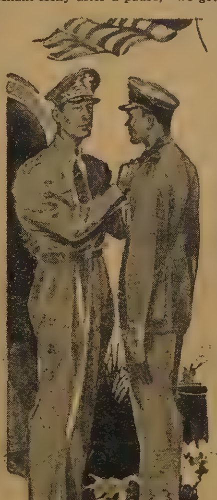
"That's more or less how it looked to us on March 1," said Kelly, "which is a day I'll never forget. It started off in a curious way—it seemed that General MacArthur wanted to take a ride on one of our boats with Bulkeley. We felt honored, but I couldn't just understand why the General would choose a time like this for a pleasure trip. Still, orders were orders, and even the air force got theirs—or rather, what was left of it, which was exactly four decrepit P-40's patched together from the pieces of many others.

"This proud American air force guaranteed us air superiority over that area of the bay while the General was out on the water. The area was only four square miles, and the time only half an hour—about all the superiority this pathetic air force was able to guarantee. While the General was having his ride I was worried—suppose something had come up which might upset our dash to China? I could see the men didn't understand it either, and were starting to speculate and gossip.

"But the General explained everything when he returned from the ride, by officially presenting Bulkeley with the order decorating him with the D.S.C. We'd known about it for weeks, but this, it seemed, was the official presentation. He also congratulated the men on the fine work they had done, and handed each a package of cigarettes. It wasn't until that night that Bulkeley told me all this had been camouflage. For that morning the General had called him in and told him of the new plan. China was out for us, all right. Because Washington had made MacArthur Commander in Chief for all the Pacific and ordered him to leave. A submarine had been suggested, but MacArthur had said Bulkeley was the only commanding officer he knew in whom he had complete confidence—he was sailing with Buck. But he'd wanted to make a trial run first, and so added the little ceremony to allay the suspicions of the men. Because we were leaving Bataan in absolute secrecy and very soon.

"Of course to us this means that the China trip—our last hope of seeing America and escaping death or a Japanese prison—was gone forever. Now the MTB's were like the rest here in the islands—the expendables who fight on without hope to the end. So far as we knew, we would now finish up the war in the southern islands, when the Japs got around to mopping up the last American resistance there.

"The minute we knew we were to leave Bataan soon," continued Lieutenant Kelly after a pause, "we got to work on the four boats. We knew the trip would be tough, and the boats were old now. The engines had had double the number of hours' service without their customary thorough overhaul and returning, so they were making half their original speed.



"But the General explained everything when he returned from the ride."

"We planned to scrape the bottoms and overhaul their struts, but this was done for only three. My boat's turn was last, and meanwhile it was used for patrol.

"Overhauling these motors without any replacement parts was a terrible job. For instance. Any tank-town garage which overhauls a flivver back in the States always replaces the gaskets with new ones. Only we didn't have any. Or any sealing compound. So those old gaskets had to be carefully removed, handled as gently as though they were precious lace, and laid back in place when the motors were reassembled.

"How much gas could we carry? We experimented—put down planks on those ⅝-inch plywood decks to strengthen them, and finally decided we could take a chance on piling twenty of those fifty-gallon drums on each boat.

"Naturally the crews got curious about all these preparations. Since we knew so much about what the Japanese were doing across the bay, we assumed their means for finding out about us were equally good. Anyway, Bulkeley and I had decided that there is only one way of keeping a valuable secret during a war: don't tell it yourself.

"But we had to tell the men something. So we said maybe, after we had exhausted all our gas here on Bataan, we would head down for Cebu in the southern islands. Cebu, where there was plenty of food and more torpedoes, and where they had the most beautiful and languorous girls on the islands, and plenty of gasoline.

"We painted it as a golden spot. Only Bulkeley and I knew that when we got to Cebu we would be doomed—there was no gasoline there and only a little in Mindanao. We could never hope to get to Australia.

"But then there were the two correspondents—Clark Lee and Nat Floyd of the New York Times, and also Colonel Wong. They knew about the Chinese trip because the Admiral had authorized them to go with us. So we told them yes, we were still going to China, but we didn't know when—maybe not for a long time—and advised them if they had any other chance to get out, by all means to take it. Meanwhile we kept on the boats all that landing-gear equipment we had assembled for the China trip—so if any hint of it had leaked out to the crew, they would think it was still on.

"Meanwhile MacArthur had told Bulkeley that Bataan would fall shortly, and Corregidor would go soon after—if it didn't get help from the States immediately. No help was being sent. Apparently it couldn't be gotten to us. Then the Japs could mop up the southern Philippines.

"It was a grim picture for us. But here was our last big job. MacArthur was the brains of the organization—the only general who could take that territory back. The whole allied defense depended on getting him to Australia.

"Bulkeley was reporting to him every other day, but MacArthur refused to set a date for leaving—he wanted to stay as long as he could. At this time the boys on Bataan were back in their strongest positions—also their last-ditch defense line—and the Japs had had about all they wanted monkeying with this line, and were waiting for reinforcements. But when news came that their General Yamashita was on his way with many transports, bragging he would capture MacArthur within a month, our departure date was set for March 15.

"But to keep the men occupied and also to keep our secret, we went right on with plans for developing our shore base at Sisiman Cove. We installed a good cook's galley, fixed up the mess hall, screened in everything, as though we hoped to live there for months.

"We even took all our clothes off the boats and moved them into the nipa huts ashore.

"On the fourth of March there came a nice break for me. Peggy got me word that she had been transferred to Little Baguio hospital on Bataan, relieving one of the girls who had been working too long under fire, and I got the idea of inviting her down to our base for chow and to spend the evening. Dr. Nelson, who had been looking after my hand, was also on Little Baguio, and I invited him and his girl friend, too.

"You should have seen my ship perk up when I told them. The skipper was going to bring a girl aboard! They had the ship all spit and polish, ready for the big event, My cook, Reynolds, and the Filipino mess boy were tickled pink. They were going to show the army!

"You see the week before I'd gone over to Little Baguio—I'd had only breakfast and arrived on foot late in the afternoon for my dressing, to spend the night and walk back. But they told me, regretfully of course, of a new ruling: rations were tightening—they were down to dried fish, plain rice, and one slice of bread—so absolutely no visitors could get food at the hospital. So I went to bed supperless, got up, watched them eat breakfast—they said how sorry they were they couldn't offer me any—hiked back all those miles over the hills, and at nine o'clock, sitting at our own mess table, ate seventeen hot cakes as fast as Reynolds could turn them out of the pan.

"Now their one idea was to show the army what real navy hospitality can be. It's true Peggy brought the coffee—we were out of that—but they rustled the rest. It started off with fruit cocktail, then a real pot roast of fresh meat with brown gravy, and in this a whole can of mushrooms, which they'd been hoarding for some big occasion. Then rice and canned peas and beans, a delicious apple pie, and then coffee like only we can make in the navy. There was never such a dinner. Then we sat and talked, while the little waves lapped along the cove.

"I told Peggy I wanted to see her again, and soon. She said they were keeping her very busy, but she might get a night off on the fifteenth or before. There was no way I could call her, so she said she'd get to the signal-corps field telephone and ring me up about six o'clock on the eleventh, when we could make a definite date.

"I asked her if she couldn't make it sooner, and she said of course she wanted to, but didn't see how she possibly could. I wanted to tell her why I wanted it sooner. Then I stopped myself. Because in a war you don't tell anybody. Not anybody. And if they have any sense, and Peggy had plenty, they understand this and don't want to be told.

"So instead we talked about the war, and how they were low on quinine now—just had enough to give the worst malaria cases a light slug which would last only a short time—and how tired the soldiers were, how uncertain everything looked.

"'It's uncertain for us in the navy, too,' I said. 'One of these days even I am liable to disappear, without telling you good-bye.'

Terrible Hatreds Kindled By 'Blood Revenge' Spirit

Rumors From Embattled Nations Hint of Plans For Organized Extermination of Enemy Peoples.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

It was a soft, Washington spring afternoon. The late shifts of government workers were hurrying home. The two guardian magnolias that stand on the White House lawn were tipped with the rays of the setting sun. My thoughts were neither on this blissful scene nor on the latest news of the battlefront which I had just finished broadcasting. Frankly, I was concerned chiefly with dinner.

The announcer was just finishing the "commercial" and I was picking my hat up from the sofa in the studio when I saw the engineer beckoning to me from behind the glass wall of his goldfish bowl. He held up a paper on which was printed "Stop in News Room—Important!"

I did. The atmosphere was tense as it is frequently these days. A notice had just appeared on the news ticker to the effect that the White House was about to release an important statement.

It is possible, but not probable, that the thing we were all thinking that statement was going to announce but didn't, will happen before these lines reach print—the invasion of Europe. Until it does, we shall continue to expect it and while the busy home front keeps our nose pretty well to the grindstone, one hint from overseas and an atmosphere of suspense envelops the Capitol.

Secrecy's Curtain

Meanwhile, there is the feeling that tremendous things are happening under a heavy curtain of secrecy in Europe even the hint of which does not reach the press or the public.

Russia, of course, is a mystery.

What is happening there? Is the remarkable Red army, which in the past has seemed to be able to draw endless men and supplies from nowhere after each crushing defeat, finally exhausted? Spring came early to the steppes this year and the Germans, if they are able, will launch their annual summer offensive a month earlier. They hope to be able to break the Red army this time and then hold back the remnants with a sparsely manned but intricate line of defense while they turn their attention to the Allies in the West.

No one knows what the strength of Russia is today. One does know that a terrible hate has been enkindled in the whole race against the Germans and it is reported that the Red army has threatened that if Soviet forces ever do reach German soil, they will leave no human being living. One story has been spread through Switzerland that if an Allies' army is on the continent when Russia breaks Germany's eastern frontiers—if she does—that the Germans will open their western front to the Allies and let them in rather than expose themselves to the Russians.

Plan for Prisoners

Another report has seeped out of Russia. It is continuously repeated that simply because of the inconvenience of caring for prisoners, both the Germans and Russians have been shooting men who are captured or who surrender. On the other hand, the Russians are said to be carefully preserving some of the men they take. Russian propaganda, dropped over the German lines, is very alluring. Some of the pamphlets instruct the German soldiers to surrender and bring with them the leaflet which acts as a passport.

Then, according to a report which has come in from a neutral country, the prisoners are carefully examined and a small percentage weeded out for Soviet indoctrination. They go through a long course of instruction so careful that it is said finally only 10 per cent are accepted as satisfactory. These elite are then trained to be used as the spearhead of a political invasion of Germany.

Hatred, like that in Russia, has poisoned all Europe. There is a belief now on the part of many of the conquered countries that the Germans, having given up hope of victory, intend to go forward with a systematic extermination of other races within their reach, as they have in Poland and with the Jews, so that regardless of what happens, the Teutonic stock will dominate numerically when the war is over. To meet this, the other nations are talking about turning the tables and beginning organized mass murder of Germans everywhere the moment the Nazi armies lay down their arms.

Only the other day, I talked with a widely traveled Russian newspaper man, who said frankly that he believed this was the proper course.

How powerful this spirit of blood revenge really is and whether it will be carried out, one can only guess.

Another mystery of which there are only tiny hints is the power and scope of the underground movements in the occupied countries and the extent to which Allied agents are now working hand-in-hand with the saboteurs in France and Belgium and particularly Holland. Hints leak out.

Saboteurs

A secret German report which reached Allied hands stated the following:

"Sometime ago, English parachutists landed near Prague. When they were held up by the local police, they obeyed the order, 'hands up.' But they carried a special device on their belts with a pistol from which cords ran to their hands. The latter fired the pistol. Thus they succeeded by a quick and appropriate movement in accounting for the policemen."

Here is a part of another enemy report, revealing the activities behind the lines. It came through Italian military channels:

"During the attack on the Fuka Aerdrome (Africa) the enemy Allied troops put up distress signals. They succeeded in enticing the sentries away from their posts for a time and successfully carried out their sabotage."

Reports have come of British saboteurs gaining entrance to factories in the daytime, planting time bombs and leaving. A device has been perfected which can be carried concealed in the hand—I have held one—attached by a clever means to a tank car or a locomotive, it would blow it to pieces. That is only one of hundreds of ingenious gadgets which have been perfected for this strange work of secret destruction that is going on everywhere. Even more ingenious are the methods which the underground organizations in France and Italy are using to obtain arms and supplies for the insurrection when the moment comes.

Some day, "an important statement from the White House" will come, heralding events many of which we have not even dreamed.

While the airplane factories turn out bombers and fighters, the air-minded leaders continue to make their air plans for peace. The latest scheme which has come to my attention is an announcement from the Northeast Airlines company which says this company has made application for a helicopter service to carry air mail and air express in New England.

These little planes that can rise straight up and hover, can land on a parlor rug. They would, in this proposed service, land on the roofs of post office buildings—provided, I take it, that the buildings are not of the rococo vintage with peaked and pointed and turreted roofs.

The service would carry first-class as well as air mail, according to the application filed with the Civil Aeronautics board. Four hundred points would be included. The little "flying automobiles" would not only fly between towns and cities but would carry mail from urban centers to the large airports where the mail would be transferred to the air liners.

A national labor service act still hovers just beyond the horizon. The chief purpose of Manpower Commissioner McNutt's intricate plans, including shifts of men from non-deferrable industry to war work is to build the machinery so that when the act is passed it can be put into effect at once.

Now that the farm labor problem has been taken off McNutt's doorstep, and with the definite "back-to-the-farm" trend, congress may ease up on McNutt and give him the money he needs to build his pre-national service machinery.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

TO THE LADIES OF CLANTON—

Now is the time for you to do your part—not when the blood is spilled in the street of Clanton. It will be to little and too late, then.

The Amercan Red Cross in your town has its job to do, and that job MUST BE DONE NOW. Boys at the battle fronts are being killed and wounded this very minute and in order to try and save the lives of those fine sons, fathers and brothers, there are necessary supplies that must be ready and unless these supplies are on hand, YOUR SON, OR HUSBAND OR NEIGHBORS BOY, may die for the lack of sanitary materials.

We have some very loyal workers in our Red Cross Room, they are working every day, but the demand for these supplies are getting larger and larger due to the many battle fronts we are now fighting on, and it is NECESSARY that each and every woman in this town give a day or two to help us produce these bandages and supplies that the Red Cross is calling for and which is urgently needed NOW. Not tomorrow or the next day but TODAY.

Must we wait until we see the battle in our very eyes: Can't you hear and see the necessity of giving to your country a days work that will help save the lives of many of our boys? Don't we owe these boys the backing that rightfully belongs to them? Can you sit and listen to the radio and read about Japan murdering some of our boys and then sit down and do nothing about it? WE MUST ACT NOW, go to the Red Cross room today, and tell them you are ready to join the Army of workers to bring us victory.

We are badly in need of field workers. Men or women to investigate soldiers requests to come home on account of family sickness or to satisfy that soldier that everyone in his family are allright and receiving his checks, etc. WONT SOME OF YOU PLEASE CONTACT LEROY MARTIN OR DOCK LEVINE AT ONCE We must give these boys immediate service and unless we can have a few more workers it will be impossible for us to carry on as we would like to.

Sit down for a moment and compose yourself. Is there anything more important at this time than to help the war effort? Act now while we still have time to act.

ALABAMA TOP IN IN PRODUCTION OF WAR MATERIALS

Two years ago (in May), the first complete aluminum plant in the world was placed in operation when Richard Samuel Reynolds, presdent of the Reynolds Metals Company, watched the first ingot of virgin aluminum poured in his vast new plant at Listerhill, Alabama, and then, in record time, milled into shining skin sheet for airplanes.

This second anniversary dramatically illustrates how the South leaped into the breach to answer war's insatiable call for material, overcoming the obstacles of shortages of raw materials, machinery, and overtaxed transportation, to wage a race against time.

There will be little time out for anniversary observances at Listerhill—already every minute of each day (and night) is consumed in production.

Today on the eve of its second "birthday" this unique plant, stretching over a square mile, is full of "Firsts:"

It was not only completed, but in full operation in five months and 28 days from the time turf was broken. Germany's best record from alumina to aluminum had been 12 months in construction of a plant—and this record had been regarded as a 'miracle' of construction."

It has the biggest open hearth oil-fired remelt furnace in the world.

It has the biggest hot roll mill in the world.

It has 42 acres of plant under roof.

It is the first aluminum plant to carry the entire process from bauxite to finished metal.

To feed the current from Wilson Dam into Reynold's pot rooms for the electrolyic reduction of alumina to aluminum, Listerhill has the largest rectifier station in the world. Current at five volts and 32,000 amperes is needed to change alumina to aluminum.

Actively assisting Mr. Reynolds in the best American tradition, are his four sons, each of whom holds an important company post: J. Louis Reynolds, R. S. Reynolds, Jr., David and William Reynolds.

Reynold's Listerhill plant has expanded this country's production of aluminum by 120 million pounds yearly. There are 37 other Reynold plants, spreading from Listerhill, Alabama, to Longview, Washington; to Louisville Richmond and New York.

The aim of the Reynolds Metal Company put into a single phrase, is: "Out of the ground—into the sky" and it is just that which their plant at Listerhill is doing.

After two years of incredible expansion, Reynolds Metal Company alone is making more aluminum than did France, England and Germany combined in 1934. Says Mr. Reynolds: "Aluminum will spell defeat or victory ni this war. It is a light metals war and all my efforts are towards winning it."

How important are Mr. Reynolds' efforts may be seen when it is realized that more than 80 percent of the weight of modern military aircraft is aluminum.

Future historians may record: "Hitler's doom was made in Dixie." This is not so far-fetched when it is realized that much of the high-grade bauxite which is converted into aircraft parts at Louisville, Ky.; after being milled at Listerhill, Alabama; comes from mines in Arkansas.

What's Doing At Isabella High

By Jesse Culp

This Friday night the Seniors present a three act comedy entitled "No Bride For The Groom." The story, as the title suggests, is very funny, and one that you'll sincerely like.

Don't fail to see Boots, a colored boy with plenty of feet and mouth who furnishes his part of the excitement, Joe James Wells; and Elizabeth Williams Culp as Salamandy, a colored girl in close touch with the spirits, and stands out in true negro fashion. You saw these two in similar roles last year and laughed until you hurt. It is again your privilege.

Other students starring in the production are Alma Tucker, Gordon Conway, Dorothy Oden, Louise Keen, Thomas Williams, Tomera Williams, Gertie Mae Mims, Quinton Cummings, Doris Gaydon, and Annie Laura Calfee.

Of course there will be the typical wedding scenes, made more interesting by the typical gossipy atmosphere furnished by Annie Laura Calfee, alias Belina Groot, a dressmaker with a wagging tongue.

Don't miss this very funny program at the school auditorium Friday night April 30th. The admission will be 10 & 20c.

The Grammar School, which closes May 7th is planning a very enjoyable program as its last dramatical contribution for this year. Each grade is planning a play ir skit for presentation.

The program will consist of the following:

1st, 2nd, and 3rd grades—"The Princess and Her Flower Garden." 4th grade—"The Census Man." 5th yrade —"Haysedd Drill." 6th grade— "No Shirt for Bill."

Normally the U. S. produces about one-third of its sugar supply.

It's A People's War

We are paying more in taxes than ever before . . . and likely will pay more. But we cannot rely on taxes to finance the war. It would not be fair to base a tax on the average single family income when many families have more than one income. We could borrow all the money from the banks, but for both economic and social reasons this is undesirable. The government would then sacrifice its greatest dam against inflation. This is a People's War and the people should finance it. The people WANT to finance it. Sale of War Bonds has mounted consistently since Pearl Harbor.

They give their lives . . . You lend your money.

ISN'T HE WORTH IT?

THIS message is written to you mothers—from your government.

It concerns the most precious thing in all the world to you—your child.

It asks you to help protect that child—from fear, from starvation, from death—the fate that has befallen millions of children under the rule of Nazi and Jap tyrants.

It asks you to urge your husband to join the Payroll Savings Plan—the easy way to buy War Bonds that will furnish the ships and guns and tanks and planes so desperately needed to guard you and yours from the horrors of defeat.

Or, if your husband is already buying War Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan—it asks you to urge him to buy more, to increase his savings to at least ten per cent of his salary or wages.

Remember. Millions of your brothers, husbands, sons, friends are risking everything. You are asked to risk nothing. War Bonds are the World's Safest Investment.

As you buy them through the Payroll Savings Plan—today, you are doing your part to help protect your child today! And at the same time setting up a savings fund to help bring up, educate, and develop that child—tomorrow.

Talk it over with your husband tonight. And resolve to put at least ten per cent—not 6%, or 7%, or 8%—into War Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan. Do it for that child of yours. Isn't he worth it?

* * * *

WHAT YOU SHOULD DO

If you are:

1. Already setting aside 10% of your pay in War Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan—boost that 10% if you can.
2. Working in a plant where the Plan is installed, but haven't signed up yet—sign up tomorrow.
3. Working in a plant where the Payroll Savings Plan hasn't been installed, talk to your union head, foreman or plant manager—and see if it can't be installed right away. The local bank will be glad to help.
4. Unable to get in on the Payroll Savings Plan for any reason go to your local bank or wherever bonds are sold. They will be glad to help you start a Plan of your own.

HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF '43

On September 9, 1940, twenty-one serious-minded -aged boys and girls began their Senior High ol preparations for the greatest success that might ccomplished. Each worked for the example we d every underclassman would follow. Even though were transferred to other schools, those who re- ed drew closer together and worked harder. Only of the original class came back to be in the nth grade, but with the addition of five new mem- we began another successful year. Still working ur goal, we finished our Junior year, hoping to the next year as Seniors.

n the morning of August 31, 1942, we met again. time, Seniors, ready and eager to meet the Senior and cooperate in every way possible to strengthen orale of our school, community and our nation. Without calm and dignity that have always characterized our actions, we elected our officers, selected our class colors, flowers and our motto, fitting to display our loyal and eager spirit.

Our officials are: President, Cleo Jones; vice president, Byrdie Lou Willis; secretary and treasurer, Harold Carter; sponsor, Miss Paralee Henson. Red and white were the class colors selected and red and white roses the class flowers. For our motto, we selected the marvelous words, "TO THINE OWN SELF BE TRUE."

This year has been one great gladness mingled with sorrow. Early in the year, Jack Deason answered the call of his country and enlisted. Later, Willie Clyde Hill went also.

One of the best loved girls of our class, Flora Belle Harris, left us on March 12 to finish at Childersburg High School. Flora Belle is greatly missed and everyone regretted to see her leave the class of '43.

As we come to the end of our high school days, we feel that we have at last reached the goal we have, for so long, been working for. Always remembering our motto, I'm sure each member of the class of '43 will become very successful men and women.

The book entitled, "HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF '43," begins to close and may we wish the class of '44 a most successful year. To you, class of '44, we leave you the Senior privileges of Maplesville High School, hoping that you will maintain and even add to the high standards and morale that have been established in our school through these twelve years of hard but successful work.

FOLKS AND THEM ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

This shortage of help don't mean a thing now to Esther and Melvin Mims. They just up and presented themselves with some new help. Course he's going to need a lot of coaching and other things before he's going to be able to wait on tables, but he'll get there alright. Exactly fourteen years to the day (that was Monday) we were passing out cigars too, celebrating the birth of our oldest daughter, June. But wait a minute, who said Melvin was passing out cigars. Anyway, the little tyke's name will be Micheal Roy, and of course congratulations and stuff.

Let us congratulate Maplesville High School on their first Year Book. It was a lot of hard work and the youngsters are deserving of praise for their efforts. It is something that they will enjoy in later years when their school days are but a memory, and their classmates have scattered to the four corners.

Now we'er getting [illegible]. What's this we hear about a H[illegible] Show for Chilton County? It's [illegible] thing that would take like [illegible] and we're for it 100 [illegible]. Dr. W[illegible] Parrish was kicking [illegible] in front of the Dixie [illegible] the [illegible] about automobile drivers not giving enough consideration to [illegible]. In fact he said that the [illegible] wasn't [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] ation to the horse [illegible] [illegible] but was [illegible] [illegible] the highway either [illegible] [illegible] that the horseman has to get his horse off in the ditch before the motorist is satisfied and claims that this isn't fair at all. Well, this is a good way to start getting the horse more recognition. Get behind the proposed Horse Show for Chilton County. Let's make it a colorful affair and an annual affair.

Doggone if we didn't put our foot in it last week when we let a story slip by with War Bonds selling at $17.75. Of course the copy read $18.75 but the proof reader missed it and it got into print $17.75. But what's a dollar amount to when it's going to be used by our Uncle to buy bombs to wipe off the face of the earth those responsible for the murder of the gallant fliers who bombed Tokyo last year.

And too, we apologize to Dr. R. J. Eiland for the terrible mistake we made last week in our Soldiers column. We had his son written up as the son of Dr. Jno. D. Eiland when it should have been R. J. Eiland. You will find more about Pfc J C. Eiland, his son, who received the appointment in our Soldier's Column today.

Last week a certain gentleman went into a certain store and asked for some tomato plants that he had ordered. He was informed that the plants had not arrived and that they were very sorry but it would probably be the next day before they would be delivered. Well, this didn't set very well so said gentleman preceeded to rave and rant, it is reported. The land was just right—the weather was just right—his labor was just right—etc., it seemed that everything was just right except the fact that the fellow couldn't get his tomato plants. He had ordered ten thousand. Anyway, he didn't get to put out his tomato plants that day. And to make a long story short there was a big frost next morning.

Just a thought—He has a better chance of coming back—if you buy War Bonds.

If you haven't gotten around to buying a Second War Loan Bond, stop and think what it would mean to you if our soldiers hadn't gotten round to the fight.

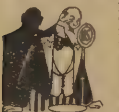
HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Neat Trick for Stretching Meat-Scrapple
(See Recipe Below)

Make Red Points Work!



Making red points fit your menus and still give you plenty of valuable proteins and fats on which to do a man-sized day's work is like working out a jig-saw puzzle. But you remember how they all can come out if you try hard enough? The answer is in budgeting your points before you spend them, getting meats with low point value, and extending flavor of meat as much as possible.

First of all, let's realize that meat is a high quality protein, and that the body needs it for repairing and building tissue—which is a full-time job. We designate proteins as complete and incomplete, the ones which are complete do a complete job of body building and repairing. Complete proteins are meat, cheese, fish, poultry, eggs and milk.

Incomplete proteins are those which can do just part of the job, and in this class we have breads, cereals, beans, peas and nuts. Of course we can use these foods alternately or in combination with meat, when we cannot get enough meat to fill our requirements. But, always, please bear the difference in mind.

Pork is our foremost source of thiamin or vitamin B_1—sometimes called the pep and energy vitamin because of its important contribution to mental health. Here pork sausage is combined with a cereal for a really delicious "stretched" dish:

All-Bran Scrapple.
(Serves 8)

1 pound fresh pork sausage
2 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon powdered sage
Few grains cayenne
⅔ cup cornmeal
⅔ cup bran cereal

Brown sausage in heavy skillet, stirring occasionally; pour off and save fat. Bring water to a boil, add salt, pepper, sage and cayenne. Stir in cornmeal gradually; cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add bran cereal and sausage and mix thoroughly. Pour into dampened loaf pan; chill until firm. Unmold. Cut into ½-inch slices and brown in sausage fat on hot griddle. Serve with maple syrup or apple butter.

Chicken is a complete protein—and goes a long way, nicely in this delightful fruity salad which you'll enjoy serving company or Sunday night supper guests:

Orange-Chicken Salad.
(Serves 6)

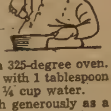
1½ cups orange sections
2 cups cooked chicken, minced
1 cup diced celery
½ cup lemon french dressing
Lettuce and other greens

Toss orange sections, chicken and celery together with the lemon french dressing. Arrange on six individual beds of greens or lettuce.

Kidney beans are a second-class or incomplete protein food, but they are fine to use on that extra day when there are no red points left over for meat. Dried peas and lentils have a low point value which makes them fine for tide-overs on meatless days: Grated cheese adds food value, takes only a few red points:

Kidney Bean Loaf.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups dry kidney beans
2 cups water
4 cups stale bread crumbs
2 cups grated cheese
½ cup chopped onion
⅓ cup shortening
1 egg
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper



Soak beans overnight in the 2 cups water. In the morning, bring to a boil in the same liquid and then simmer until beans are tender. Mash beans fine and add all other ingredients, mixing well. Pack into a loaf pan and bake 1½ hours in a 325-degree oven. Baste occasionally with 1 tablespoon melted butter and ¼ cup water.

You may use fish generously as a real menu aid during these days. Many types of fish are in season all the year round, and a great many other come in season during spring:

Fish Loaf.
(Serves 4)

2 cups flaked, steamed fish
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs, separated
1 cup medium white sauce

Combine, fish, salt, beaten egg yolks, white sauce and beaten egg whites. Pour into greased baking dish and bake in a moderate oven 20 to 30 minutes.

Stuffed Veal Hearts.
(Serves 5)

2 veal hearts
2 tablespoons chopped onion
¼ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons shortening
1½ cups fine bread crumbs
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup water
3 tablespoons shortening
2 cups stewed tomatoes
2 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Clean hearts by cutting through side to center, open with a sharp knife, cut out all veins and arteries. Wash well. Make a dressing by cooking onion and celery in shortening. Add crumbs, salt, pepper and water. Stuff the hearts with dressing and tie together with string. Roll hearts in flour, brown in shortening. Add tomatoes, cloves, bay leaf. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover with tight fitting lid and cook on low heat for 1½ hours.

The Score Card: With 35 million homemakers carrying ration books to the grocers, new ways for managing limited foods are the order of the day.

Many of these homemakers are accustomed to pulling off cans from their shelves, or taking quick-frozen food from their storage lockers. Now they will have to glean all possible facts from labels of these processed foods, budget their points carefully.

It's smart to buy the size of can most profitable for her own individual family. Keep a table of equivalents handy in your purse until you become proficient. Usually, 16 ounces or one fluid pint will fill two measuring cups. The 32-ounce size will fill four cups.

Remember canned vegetables are already cooked and need be brought only to boiling to be ready to serve.

Buying fresh fruits and vegetables relieves pressure on canned goods.

CHRIST'S CHARGE TO PETER

LESSON TEXT—John 21:15-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.—John 15:13.

Breakfast for a hungry fisherman—that is what our loving and thoughtful Lord had provided on the shore of Galilee. He wanted to talk to Peter, but He knew this was needful first. There are some folk who think that following Christ is a doleful matter, devoid of every pleasure. Jesus never taught any such thing. He attended weddings and dinners even in the homes of those despised by men. But remember that He always did it for their spiritual good, not merely for His own enjoyment; and that He always brought the gathering up to His own spiritual level, rather than stooping to any worldly or wicked standards.

Here we find Him with a glowing fire upon which fish is broiling, and with bread ready for these hungry men. It was just like Him thus to meet in most delightful and satisfying fellowship those who serve Him. Draw up to the fire, Christian friends who are standing afar off. You may be so timid that, like the disciples, you will not dare to call Him by name (v. 12), but if you will come, you will find that the precious fellowship will soon warm your heart.

With the meal over, Christ turned to Peter and in their conversation we find the latter required to

I. Face Responsibility (vv. 15-17).

With kindly persistence our Lord brought Peter face to face with his responsibility of full-hearted devotion to Him. Before service can be rendered there must be a right relationship to the Lord.

Three times Peter was asked to declare his love for Christ. Such a public confession was quite in place, before the man who had thrice denied his Lord was restored to a place of leadership. The words "more than these" (v. 15) indicate that Jesus was asking of him a high measure of devotion. It is no more than He has a right to expect of us.

The conversation after breakfast that morning was a very profitable one. One is reminded, by contrast, that few of our mealtime discussions are very useful. Many (perhaps most) after-dinner speeches and conversations yield little profit. Here is an occasion when such was not the case. One wonders whether we would not be wise to take the suggestion and turn our thoughts and those of our dinner guests to spiritual things. Surely it should be so among Christian friends and in a Christian home.

II. Feeding Christ's Flock (vv. 15-17).

We review the same verses to point out that an expression of love to Christ means nothing except as it manifests itself in service. Like Peter, we are to be diligent about feeding His flock, whether they be the young and inexperienced lambs, or the mature sheep of the fold.

We tend to specialize. Even in soul-winning some give themselves to child evangelism while others reach only adults, and would hardly think of dealing with a child. True it is that we have varying gifts, and one does one type of work better than another. But let us avoid overspecialization. Every needy soul is a challenge to us as we present the gospel.

The word "feed" should be stressed. Here again the church has frequently failed. Men and women are won to a decision for Christ, and then forgotten. Sheep must be fed if they are to grow. A teaching ministry must accompany the evangelistic effort. They belong together, and to neglect either is to fail, at least, in that measure.

III. Follow Him to the End (vv. 18-24).

Endlessly ingenious are the devices of Satan. He who had sifted Peter like wheat (Luke 22:31) and had rejoiced in the weakness of his denial of Christ, now saw him stepping out into victorious living. He heard the prophecy of the martyr death of Peter. So he put into his heart a question. Why should he suffer? What about John? What was the Lord going to do for him?

When our enemy cannot trip us up with temptation to personal sin, he resorts to the device of jealousy. Many promising Christian workers have become useless because they have taken their eyes off Jesus and put them on the persons and work of other Christians. Doing a work which was difficult and unnoticed but very important to God, they have felt the urge to quit because someone else seemed to have the easier task and receive more recognition.

The answer of Jesus in verse 22 plainly states that it is not the place of one disciple to judge the course of life of another, nor to gauge his own devotion to Christ by another's place or service.

The word of Christ to us is the same as to Peter: "Follow me." We have all we can do to live our own lives in a manner well-pleasing to our Lord.

Lend a Hand

The tiny jockey married a woman at least twice his weight. After the ceremony he asked some of the guests to drop over to his flat. The best man looked doubtful.

"Thanks, Sammy," he said, "but after all it's kind of late. Maybe your wife wouldn't approve of company at this hour."

The jockey shrugged.

"Oh, I don't expect you chaps to stay long," he explained. "All I want is for you to help me carry the bride across the threshold."

Just Dissolved

Two soldiers home on leave were having a chat.

"But weren't you engaged the last time we met?" asked one. "What happened? Did you break it off?"

"No, not exactly."

"Then she did?"

"No."

"Well, then—"

"You see, she told me what her clothes cost, and I told her what my pay was. Then our engagement sagged in the middle and gently dissolved."

No Compliment

Cooking was the young wife's hobby, and what she lacked in skill she made up in zeal.

One day, when a neighbor's small boy ran an errand for her, she rewarded him with a generous piece of jam tart which she had made with her own fair hands. The lad left, nibbling as he walked away.

A few minutes later the youngster was back again.

"Thank you very much for the jam," he said, with shy politeness. "Here's your bit of board back!"

STAGE ☆ SCREEN ☆ RADIO

THE Hollywood telephone repairman was phoning his report. "Yeah, I fixed it; cord was chewed." Pause. "Yeah, chewed. No, not a dog—a lion." Pause. "Sure I said lion." Pause. "Look, I haven't had a drink all day, and I said a lion chewed it. I'm at Jinx Falkenburg's house." He grinned. "Yeah, I knew you'd understand." The cub, a present to Jinx from her brother, Bob, has since then taken to sharpening his teeth on the piano legs. The Columbia star of "She Has What It Takes" says that's perfectly all right, if he sticks to piano legs.

Pola Negri, who years ago was one of the head glamour girls of the silent movies, is returning to the screen in the United Artists film, "Hi Diddle Diddle"; she'll play an operatic star, the wife of Adolphe Menjou, a role from which Menjou's real wife, Veree Teasdale, retired because of illness. Martha Scott has the leading role. Animated sequences by Leon Schlesinger, the film cartoon creator, will begin and end the picture.

POLA NEGRI

Nine-year-old John Donat, son of Robert Donat, makes his film debut in "This Land Is Mine," starring Charles Laughton and Maureen O'Hara. John breezed through his lines, and between takes sat high on a stepladder, reading a comic strip magazine—stayed there until Director Jean Renoir called him down from his perch to go to work again.

David Niven returns to the screen after a two-year absence in "Spitfire," the British-made Goldwyn production which will be released by RKO Radio. A major in the British army, he was given leave to co-star with Leslie Howard in this picture.

After testing Hollywood stars by the dozen King Vidor has selected an unknown for the important role of Brian Donlevy's wife in Metro's "America." She's Ann Richards, who arrived here from Australia on the last boat to leave after the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

Little Margaret O'Brien, who stole the honors in "Journey for Margaret" and did the same thing when the "Screen Guild Players" did a dramatized version of it on the air, won Jack Benny's heart when, asking him for an autograph, she said she'd seen him fall into a lake in a picture. "That was with Bob Hope," said he. And Margaret replied "Bob Hope? Is he a comedian, too?"

Red Skelton's been having a swell time, working at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn on "Whistling in Brooklyn"; every member of the famous Dodgers, including Manager Durocher, appears in the picture. Five hundred rabid Dodger fans sat in the bleachers for some sequences—and what's more, got paid for it!

The quickest way to become a star on your own program is to do a guest shot on Rudy Vallee's Thursday show. During the past year he's presented Groucho Marx, Billie Burke and Ransom Sherman, among others. Now Marx stars on his own Saturday night program, Sherman recently launched a new series, and Billie Burke will have two air shows going during the summer.

That new "Salute to Youth" program has just about everything radio fans can want. There's William L. White, war correspondent; Raymond Paige and an all-youth orchestra; Nadine Conner, Metropolitan Opera star; Berry Kroeger as narrator, and a guest war worker. With most of the cast in their 'teens or early twenties, the program—on NBC Tuesdays—is a salute to youth, by youth.

ODDS AND ENDS—Lesley Woods, "Bright Horizon" actress, has said good-by to her dog, Bouncer; he's joined the army as a buck private . . . Fred Allen will return to motion pictures this summer . . . They've found another road for Bing Crosby and Bob Hope, "Road to Utopia," to be made this summer, but probably without Dorothy Lamour . . . After five years, Phil Baker will return to the movies in 20th Century-Fox's "The Girls He Left Behind" . . . Ginny Simms, star of "Johnny Presents," has begun a tour of desert army camps within a day's distance of Hollywood; she offers a one-woman show and the entire expenses of the trip, including those of the orchestra.

Kaiser Appears Guilty Of Wasting 20 Minutes

The story about Mr. Henry Kaiser, who builds ships in record time—his shipyards are reported to have turned out 100 ships, each of 10,000 tons deadweight, in 422 days—is that he kept a group of Washington correspondents, with whom he had made an appointment, waiting for 30 minutes. When they asked him why he was so late, he replied that he had to wait half an hour for a taxi.

"Half an hour!" exclaimed one of the journalists. "Why on earth didn't you build one?"

When the soldier talks about "the skipper" he means his captain, the head of his company. And that's just what the title "captain" means. It comes from the Latin word "caput" meaning "head." Another leader high in the Army man's favor is Camel cigarettes—they're first choice with men in the Army. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) When you're sending gifts from home, keep in mind that a carton of cigarettes is always most welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. Keep the tops of your spice tins very secure as the air tends to make spices lose their flavor.

When the ironing board is folded up and stood away in the closet or corner of the kitchen until needed again, the end that rests on the floor becomes soiled. To prevent this, make a slip cover for the end.

A small piece of tin or a thin piece of wood is useful when washing the baseboard of a room. It can be slipped along as the woodwork is scrubbed and save many a nasty smear on the wallpaper.

A clean, well-kept iron gives efficient service. With a damp cloth, wipe off any starch marks. If the iron sticks while pressing, rub it over salt sprinkled on a paper. Once a month rub the warm iron with beeswax or paraffin and then rub over a clean cloth or paper until the excess wax is entirely removed.

Departments Whizz By It's Interesting to Watch

Desirous of bucking up business, the proprietor of a large department store engaged an "efficiency expert," whose chief delight was changing the departments round.

One day a section would be at the top of the building; the next it would be in the basement or where the restaurant used to be.

After three weeks of this an old lady approached a worried-looking shopwalker and asked if he could tell her where the hardware department was.

"No, madam," he replied wearily, "but if you'll stand here for a few minutes, I'm sure you'll see it go by."

KITCHEN CHAIR

HERE is how you can play Fairy Godmother to a kitchen chair. Pad the back as shown here, using at least three layers of cotton batting for the front of it and one for the back. Next, cut an 18-inch circle of cardboard and use it for a pattern for marking the shape of the round seat on boards or plywood. Cut out the wooden seat and screw it to the chair. Save the cardboard pattern.

Cover the front of the chair back next, tufting it with covered buttons sewn through the back with a long needle. Sew the back of the cover in place with stitches hidden under welting. Tack a strip of muslin around the seat, and sew the ruffles to it. Now, pad the round cardboard; stretch covering fabric over it; then sew it in place on the chair.

How the Joneses, Hansons And Smiths Were Named

Some family names grew out of first names. Thus, we have Johnson (son of John), Peterson (son of Peter), Hanson (son of Hans), and so on. The common name of Jones also came from a first name. Long ago in England, it was the custom to speak of a man by a single name—as John or Richard, or whatnot. Sometimes the members of his family were called "the John" of "the Johnses"—or "the Richards" in the case of a family with Richard as the father. The names "Johnses" seems to have been changed to "Jones," to make it short.

A great number of names sprang from occupations. The name of Smith became common in early days because there were so many smiths at work. Not only were there blacksmiths, but also goldsmiths, silversmiths, arrowsmiths and locksmiths.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Stout chains and padlocks bind each of the four wheels to the bumpers of a Trenton, N. J. woman's car when she parks it in the streets at night.

It was not until 1916 that the U. S. made its first annual appropriation for Federal aid highways. Good roads, good automobiles and good tires are companion necessities in modern motoring.

It is generally believed that at speeds below 35 mph, tire blowouts, whether front or rear, are not particularly dangerous for alert drivers, other things being equal. Another good reason for keeping to the rubber-saving 35 mph limit!

In return for their stimulated rubber growing and collecting activities the United States has agreed to pay South and Central American countries from 33 to 45 cents a pound for rubber until the end of 1946 at least. Before government price freezing, rubber was selling in the U. S. at 22½ cents a pound.

Q. Can any of the rationed meats and fats be given away?

A. No. The regulations do not allow the giving away of the stamps, nor the foods that may be purchased with them. Small quantities of the rationed meats and fats may be loaned, provided the lender is paid back in kind.

Q. What about the sale by farmers of the rationed foods to retailers? Does the farmer collect stamps on the basis of values lasted in the consumer point table?

A. Such sales are usually made on the basis of the "trade table" of point values. However, sales of less than 5 pounds of butter or lard would be at the regular consumer point value rate.

Q. What about sales of canned fruits and other processed foods? Must stamps be collected for home-canned varieties of these foods

A. Yes. And the seller must register with his local War Price and Rationing Board and arrange to turn in the stamps he collects once a month.

Q. May a person give away home-canned varieties of the rationed canned and processed foods

A. Yes. The home-canner is permitted to give away up to 50 quarts of home canned varieties of the rationed foods a year. But commercially canned varieties cannot be given away.

Q. Under the new Department of Agriculture orders, can anyone slaughter livestock without first obtaining a saughtering permit?

A. A resident farmer who is slaughtering for his own use does not have to have a permit. Permits are required when slaughtering is done under any other circumstances.

If a farmer is slaughtering meat for sale, is he required to have a permit?

A. Yes.

Q. Where can a farmer obtain a permit

A. His county USDA war board is the issuing agency. He may apply at AAA office.

(Watch next weeks News for more questions and answers about rationing.)

issuing canning sugar certificates this year. You are encouraged and requested to do all possible home canning this year. You will be allowed all the sugar you need for canning purposes Please do not ask for more than you will need for this purpose.

HOME CANNED GOODS FOR SALE

Forms are now available for registration for people who have home canned foods that they wish to sell Call by the rationing office and ask for these forms or write for them.

TIRES

Although the local rationing board has no official information, it is generally understood that after May1, all "B" book holders will be eligible for grade ONE tires. The local office hopes that the quota will be large enough to take care of the applications. However, everyone should remember that there is still an accute shortage of rubber in this country.

State inspectors are checking on turned in tires more closely than ever for abuses such as running on flats overloading, and driving at high rates of speed. When it is found that tires have been abused the local office is notifed that such people are no longer eligible for automobile and truck tires This also applies to running tires with wheels out of line, and running tires beyond the recapping stage.

TRUCK RECAPS:

After May 1, truck owners can get certificates for recaps without action of the rationing board, if the truck owner is eligible for such service. He will still have to get a certificate for recaps, but this certificate will be issued immediately upon the filing of the application along with the record of inspection at the rationing board office. There will be no waiting for certificates to have truck tires recapped

LET US SAVE OUR TIRES BY HAVING THEM RECAPPED AND THAT BEFORE THEY ARE TOO BADLY WORN.

MEATS AND FATS:

To purchasers of country butter and country grown meats REMEMBER you are guilty as the buyer if you do not give red stamp points when you buy rationed commodities. You are a good citizen and the seller will appreciate your cooperation.

CALENDAR AS TO DATES:

Coffee Stamp No. 23 good April 26.
Stamp E in meats and fats good this week.
Stamps G, H, J in blue good this week
Shoe stamp 17 expires June 15.
Gasoline stamp 5 expires May 22.

GET REFERRAL CARD BEFORE APPLYING FOR JOB AT MOBILE

Workers who go to the Mobile area in search of jobs in war industries without obtaining releases from present employers or referral cards from the local office of the United States Employment Service, War Manpower Commission, will simply be wasting time and money.

This information was conveyed today to Mr. S. C. Patton, manager of the Clanton office of the United States Employment Service, by C. F Andersin, director for Alabama. War industries in the Mobile area are employing their workers exclusively through the Mobile office of the United States Employment Service and no person can get a job without presenting a referral card from the Mobile office

Mr. Anderson said that hundreds of persons are appearing in Mobile almost every day believing that they can get war jobs after quitting jobs in other sections of the State. "Every person should be advised of the policy regarding employment in Mobile and other points of the Gulf Coast," said Mr. Anderson. 'Any person who is not employed in an essential war activity and wants a war job in Mobile should go to the nearest office of the United States Employment Service. If there is a job open and he is eligible for it the local office will issue a referral card which will be honored by the Mobile office. Those who are employed now and want jobs in Mobile should obtain certificates of release from their employers. These certificates may be presented to the Mobile office of the United States Employment Service which will determine whether or not they should be referred to Mobile war industries.

Persons who contemplate going to Mobile in search of work should keep this procedure in mind. Otherwise they will not be referred to war jobs in the Mobile area and the cost of the trip will be useless expense."

PLENTY OF METAL FOR FRUIT JAR LIDS

Housewives who plan to expand their home-canning program this year are assured that a plentiful supply of metal lids for glass containers will be on the market, the Office of War Information stated this week.

OWI said the War Production Board has removed all quota restrictions on the manufacture of several types of metal lids used to seal home-canning jars. The decision to make more metals available for home-canning came as a result of a survey indicating housewives would increase their canning operations by 51 per cent this year.

One of the new types of jar closures now in quantity production, said OWI consists of a three-piece unit—a heat-resisting glass lid, a rubber ring making a snug seal at the mouth of the jar and a metal screw band to hold the lid in place.

This closure is so constructed that the metal band may be used on the next day's canning after the food has been processed and cooled.

American - Egyptian cotton 1 1-2 inches long or longer is needed in aircraft construction, balloon fabrics, machine - gun belts, parachutes, inflatable life rafts, and other military equipment.

Where Will Money Come From?

People ask: "Where will the money come from?" to reach the thirteen-billion dollar objective of the Second War Loan. The answer is simple. The people HAVE the income.

When we produce munitions or peacetime goods, or anything else, we likewise produce income. For every dollar of production, there is a dollar of income.

The problem of war finance boils down to this—if individuals and businesses receive more income after taxes than there are things produced for them to buy, then excess funds arise. The government deficit is matched by the combined surplus of everybody else. This surplus should be put into Government securities to wipe out that deficit.

They give their lives . . . You lend your money.

What Is Inflation?

Do you have excess cash?

You will answer, "No." But the fact remains that you do. For almost every wage earner these days has an income, in checkbook or pocketbook, well above the cost of his living, taxes, insurance and debt repayments.

You never actually "bid" against anybody for a porterhouse steak, but when you take the spending of all average Americans as a group, it's a different story. So it is important that excess money be saved rather than used collectively to bid up prices. If it is spent, instead of saved, prices soar. . . That's inflation.

Ideally, it should be invested in Government securities during the Second War Loan.

"They give their lives . . . You lend your money."

Millions of acres of over-flow and bottom lands might become some of our best farmland, if properly drained.

The goal of the Second War Loan drive is 13 billion dollars. That is just about one fifth of the estimated increase of the Public Debt for the fiscal year of 1943.

WORTHWHILE OCCUPATIONS TAUGHT STUDENTS AT ISABELLA

The program of vocational agriculture at the Isabella High School is playing an important part in this great war effort.

During the past winter four rural war production training courses on repair, operation and construction of farm machinery and equipment were taught in the vocational agriculture shop. A total of 72 farmers were enrolled in these classes.

Farm machinery and equipment that was made or repaired include 227 plows sharpened, 62 singletrees, 16 doubltrees 27 steelbeams, 8 singlestocks, 5 scratchers, 2 section, harrows, 4 planters, 8 fertilizer distributors, 7 wagons, 3 stalkcutters, 15 nail bars, 5 punches, 19 clevisis, 19 cold chisels, 25 axes, 6 bee gums, 2 hoes, 3 wire stretchers, 5 staple pullers, 1 truck bed, 1 colter, 2 iron cutters, 2 tool boxes, 4 sets of firedogs, 5 pokers, 8 breast yokes, 1 post hole digger, 1 hay rake, 3 middlebusters and 1 ground slide.

Many farmers who did not take part in the night classes came to the shop during the day and repaired their tools. It is every farmers duty to keep his tools in good condition in order to get the maximum good for them.—J. H Camp.

MILLS BEGIN TO RUN SHORT OF SCRAP METAL

"Many steel mills are beginning to run short of scrap metal," was the warning voiced today by Tom Bragg chairman of the Alabama Salvage Committee.

"The war is not over yet by a long shot," said Mr. Bragg. "We are looking to all county salvage committees to bring in piles of scrap metal this year. It is the scrap still lying idle which may supply enough war material to turn the tide at some crucial moment in the coming Battle of Europe."

THE 2ND WAR LOAN DRIVE IS ON!

The Command has Come—

"Attack!"

THE big push is on! This is the fateful summer that we have been waiting for. Hitler knows he must win before another winter rolls around, or face inevitable annihilation. And you can be sure that he will hurl everything he has—every gun, plane, soldier and tank—into the summer struggle that is even now rising in tempo on every front.

And when the command goes out to our fighting men to ATTACK—you can be sure they don't look for excuses. They don't hesitate. They strike fast and hard—as they did at Guadalcanal, in Tunisia and in the skies over Europe.

NOW the command has come on the home front to attack! To attack with the dollars that buy the weapons of war our boys must have to meet the last desperate assaults of Hitler. Your government asks you to lend it 13 billion dollars during this drive. And this historic 2nd War Loan Drive, which started April 12th, is the most urgent appeal America has ever made!

The time is short—act now!

When you attack with War Bonds you don't suffer pain or anguish—you don't risk your limbs or your life as millions of our boys are doing every day. All you do is make an investment—the safest in the world. You help to secure Victory now—and your own financial security.

During this drive if you are visited by a volunteer War Bond worker, welcome him. He will explain the 7 different types of U. S. Government obligations you may choose from. But don't wait for his call—go at once to your nearest bank or Post Office or place where they sell War Bonds. And answer the command to ATTACK by buying more War Bonds—and still more War Bonds!

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

First in order of importance this ek is the fact that Chilton County exceeded her quota in the Victory nd Drive just completed. Every izen who took part in this camign should be congratulated on the y in which they got behind the boy hind the gun. Chilton County told e world in no uncertain terms that was backing her men in the Ser e, all the way. Especially to Judge H. Reynolds and Frank J. Callen, ders in this drive go a world of dit. They worked early and late make it the success that it was. But member this: the fight has only rted—YOU HAVE DONE YOUR T, NOW DO YOUR BEST.

We admire Marvin Marcus who is guard, or whatever it is you call , out at Gragg Field. Seems that fellow who contracts for that job to stay on duty for 24 hours each . Now as you can see, that doesn't e much time for frolicing around ell, Marvin, not being one to sit wn and twiddle his thumbs, decidto do something about it. He could come to town so he is bringing the to him. He has started a recrean center and play ground out there has encouraged the business men town to donate benches and games . You know what the fellow said ut the mousetrap and the woods? ell Marvin hasn't got a mousetrap there, but the place is looking da snappy.

We forgot to tell you last week t Rev. Ed Wilkins killed a dear, exe us, it was a deer, while he was his trip to the Gulf. Seems the deer into the car while he was driving killed itself. Had it been a buck r. Wilkins would have brought it with him, but not knowing what to uder the circumstances he just kept driving.

had a most interesting talk the t Saturday afternoon with J. W. k of route 3. Mr. Sisk is nearing three score years and ten, and has red in two wars. He was telling us ong other things, of talking to a veller from the north the other day e "furerner" asked how the South taking the war rationing and the . He said that in the North they re getting tired of it. Mr. Sisk told that down here we were trying make a little bread for ourselves ugh cotton for gun-powder for the diers and that if there was anyng left we would send it to them.

eard someone say the other day the street that what the President ded to do to John L. Lewis was turn him over to about a dozen of Clanton "fellers" for awhile.

We made application to the Ration Board this week for a little more oline to operate our business. At ent we'er just trying to run a ily of seven and also a business requires a good bit of running nd, on four gallons. The 'Powers Be' at the Board said, Nay! The conclusion that we could reach that, "If you're running all the the paper will hold free, it don't any gasoline, and if you're tryto get business to make a living, re ineligible.

is with regret that we learn of e L. H. Reynolds resignation as cutive Chairman of the War Bond mittee in this County. True, it is b that would tax the energy of a ng man, and Judge Reynolds is ting along in years. He has done a wonderful job of placing our nty at the head of the list each that our government called, that are selfish enough to be sorry that is resigning. We know that he dees a rest. Frankly, we would enrage them to name another, that might "take it a little easier" for le The man who is named to fill shoes will have a mighty big job g up to his record in selling War ds. There may be a better man the job, though we doubt it, but e are none who will take their work more seriously or would devote more time to it. Chilton County owes Judge Reynolds a debt of gratitude she will never be able to pay for services rendered.

Hit-Run Driver Kills Prominent Verbena Resident Saturday

A hit and run driver killed Tom Howard, 76 year old Verbena resident late Saturday afternoon about 5:15.

Mr. Howard was standing on the curve, just off the Montgomery Highway, at the fork south of Verbena, where the road leads up to the Bird Sanctuary, when the driver of the death car lost control in making the turn and hit the victim.

Mr. Howard lived only about 20 minutes after a Spigener ambulance brought him to Central Alabama Hospital.

Highway Patrolmen, Propst and Kendrick, shortly thereafter, picked up J. T. Bullard, 38, also of Verbena and lodged him in County jail, held in the death of the aged man.

Thanks To You, And You And You

L. H. Reynolds F. J. Callen

To every man, woman and child, to every business firm and especially to the newspapers we offer our thanks for your splendid work in the April campaign to meet the County quota in the Second War Loan Drive. The outstanding work by all of you is directly responsible for Chilton having been able to meet and exceed its quota. The work of each and every committee member was outstanding.

Your War Saving Committee Chairman and your Victory Fund Chairman feel that the success of this campaign is very much like the answer a great American once gave to one who asked what his rule for success was. The answer was "I have succeeded because I have surrounded myself with men and women who know more than I do." So it is with your chairmen, We have succeeded because we were assisted by the good people of Chilton County who ralized the importance of this drive and who wanted to cooperate with their government in its effort to forever crush the forces of barbarism which seek to destroy the American way of life and freedom.

2500 Acres Set In Sweet Potatoes Goal In County

By P. H. Smith, County Agent

Chilton County farmers have been assigned a sweet potato goal of not less than 2500 acres. The sweet potato's value as a food crop is just being recognized.

Probably more food of its type can be produced on an acre with potatoes than with any other crop that will grow in Chilton county. Present indications are that only about 1800 acres of sweet potatoes will be planted in Chilton County or that we will fall short of our goal by 700 acres in 1943.

The sweet potato is a crop that does not require much labor except at planting and harvesting time There is still time for farmers to plant this important food crop.

Our government is guaranteeing a fair price for sweet potatoes produced in 1943. This price will range from $1.15 to $1.45 per bushel of U. S. No. 1 potatoes. If sold to the government, the sweet potatoes would have to be cleaned, graded, packed in bushel containers, and sold under U. S. Inspection. This would be at the growers expense.

It is expected that an incentive payment of $37.50 per acre will be paid on that acreage of sweet potatoes between 90 and 110 percent of the sweet potato goal. No incentive payment will be made where less than 1.8 acres of sweet potatoes are planted. Sweet potato goals were mailed to farmers last week. This goal may still be increased if desired by notifying the AAA office in Clanton. If any farmer did not get a sweet potato goal and wants one, notify the AAA office in Clanton of the acreage of sweet potatoes that are to be planted. Regardless of goals it is hoped that every farmer will plant as many sweet potatoes as possible.

Crippled Children's Drive Nets $738.14

At noon Tuesday a total of $738.14 had been reported raised in the Easter Seal Campaign for Crippled Children. This is more than twice as much as has been raised in previous years and officials estimate complete returns at $800. The amount already reported will insure treatment for many Chilton County children who cannot walk.

The school children of this county accepted a 10c per child quota and reached this goal with few exceptions Many school rooms reported more than 100 percent of their goal.

State and Federal funds will be used to match the money raised in the county so that more than $2,000 will be availaple for hospitalization of Chilton County crippled children.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The Sabbath School will meet at 10 a. m., Mr. Robert Oglesby, Supt.

The regular preaching service at 11 a. m.; the theme for the morning will be: CONTENTMENT, A FINE ART The evening service that was to have started this Sabbath evening will not begin until the Fifth Sabbath evening On account of the Pastor's continued weakness from a recent illness, he has been able to have but one service on the Sabbath. The Japs were starved out at Guadalcanal; hunger in the German ranks finally caused their fall at Stalengrd; lack of food was a major cause of our loss of Bataan. No wonder President Roosevelt said: "Food is no less a weapon than tanks, guns, and planes."

Legislature Meets In Regular Session At Montgomery

MONTGOMERY—The regular session of the 1943 Legislature got down to work this week on a broad program submitted by Governor Sparks, calling for war-time emergency ligislation measures to prepare Alabama for postwar conditions and recommendations in behalf of education, agriculture public welfare and many other important phases of the state governmental concern.

The governor reported "all departments of our state government functioning well," urged retention of the merit system and asked the Legislature to consider establishing a retirement system for state employes.

Alabama has dedicated herself to help win the war, Governor Sparks said, but at the same time: "We must not forget our internal needs ... to keep Alabama a democracy, and serving a democracy."

Praising the work performed by the interim committees, the governor's message called for:

1. Creation of an emergency fund, for the dual purpose of assuring conduct of "all services of our state government when funds begin to sag" and "post-war construction and rehabilitation," establishment of a state corporation which would carry on post-war public works and a state Planning Board to map out development and use of Alabama's resources; development of a statewide aviation system to foster air commerce; planning for post-war highway building and present road maintenance.

2. Maintenance of present educational standards, with improvements "if our revenues permit," but no vacuum which must be filled by an incoming administration." The governor pointed out: "Alabama is spending about 33c out of every dollar which comes into the general treasury of the state for education ... For the school year 1942-43, education will receive from state monies $3,835,901 more than it has ever received before." He recommended restriction of use of the present $8,587,654 special educational trust fund "so that no more than 1-4 of it can be used in any one of the next four years." He urged an appropriation from the fund "of sufficient amount to place the teacher retirement fund on a safe and sound basis." He asked an $100,000 appropriation for Tuskegee Institute.

3. Building up of the present $39,000,000 surplus in the unemployment compensation fund, through a rate increase, to cushion "the impact of unemployment following peace."

4. Appropriation of $650,000 each from sales tax and the state general fund for old age assistance, with the "hope that we shall some day attain a worthy goal of not less than $30 per month to all needy aged people in Alabama." (At a press conference prior to the convening of the Legislature, the governor explained that such appropriations, plus additional funds from liquor revenue, when matched by federal funds might result in raising the present average $10 pension to a figure close to $20 a month.)

5. Consideration by the Legislature of statewide referendum on retention of the present liquor laws. The governor said: "The ABC Board has gone far toward accomplishing a cleanup program. Honky-tonks have, in a large measure, been controlled. What are known as "juke-joints" have been outlawed and the present dispositon of liquor has been cleansed of some of its objectional features. We propose to go further in this cleanup program under the present statute."

6. Appropriation of $75,000 for production and marketing studies by Auburn; creation of an Alabama State Market Board; establishment of a Piedmont soil study station to serve 13 eastern and northeastern counties; appropriation of $40,000 to eradicate Bangs disease ... "More than one-third of our people actually live on the farm."

7. Creation of a Department of Labor to settle industrial disputes by arbitration ... "No one denies the right of labor to organize, collectively bargain and to strike when necessary. but our laws should protect property and life and the rights of the public."

8. Additional public health money for: better facilities at the state asylums; establishment of a four-year medical school; control of tuberculosis cancer and venereal diseases.

9. Retention of the county equalization boards "until some better method is devised than the old method, which relegated such matters to the Courts of County Commissioners."

10. Appointment of a committee or commission to study the problem of legislative reapportionment and, at the next session, possibly submit a constitutional amendment .... "Population should not be the sole standard for fixing representation."

11. Refunding of the $4,365,500 bridge bonds to save the state "many hundred thousand of dollars."

12. Appropriation of additional funds for the state's parole system; "adequate support" for the state's conservation program.

"We are all learning,' said the governor. "We shall have much more to learn."

Glee Club In Concert High School Fri. Night

The Chilton County High School Glee Club will be in concert at the High School Auditorum, Friday night at 8:15 p. m.

The program will be a varid one consisting of popular, semi-classica and classical songs. These will be presented in an entertaining manner.

More than 100 voices will be heard throughout the program. The public is cirdially invited to attend. Admission will be 10c and 15c.

Reynolds Resigns As Executive Chairman War Bond Committee

Clanton, Alabama
April 20th, 1943

Mr. Marc Ray Clement,
Associate State Administrator,
Comer Building,
Birmingham, Alabama

Dear Marc Ray;

As you know, I have been Executive Chairman of the bond drive in Chilton County for about a year, when the present Victory Bond Drive is closed on April 30th, and while the job has been a great deal more extensive and heavier than I anticipated when I accepted it, still I have struggled through with it to the best of my ability, but I will be 79 years of age next October, and I am afraid on account of my age and physical condition, that I will not be able to meet the strenous requirements from now on.

While I would not say that I have neglected my private business, yet there are many times that my business has needed my attention and which I would not give, as I felt the bond program took priority. It is almost impossible to get efficient office help and the duties of a bond chairman require a great deal of driving throughout the county and while I do drive but I always try to get some one to drive for me, which is very hard to do, under present conditions.

I have found too, that a change of personnel gives any drive a fresh impetus, and it might boost the bond program in our county to change personnel and have new thought and new ideas before the people.

I do want to say that I have enjoyed the work immensely and was glad that the opportunity to serve my nation in a time of distress, in a small measure at least, and I have enjoyed the association with you and Mr Gewin and the other state officers and I want to say too, that my interest in the bond program will not falter in the least, but as stated, on account of my advanced age, I feel that it might be detrimental to me to assume the responsibility for any longer period of time.

We have between $210,000.00 and $220,000.00 toward our quota of $311,000.00 and we hope to reach our quota and I am going to make every effort possible between now and April 30th, and I feel like a new Executive Chairman, commencing after this big drive will not have such a tremendous task on his hands to begin with.

I thought I had better write you this at this time, in order that you and Mr. Gewin, or whoever the proper party might be, can be looking around for someone in my place, commencing May 1st.

I think though, that it would be better that this be kept secret until our victory drive is over, as it might cause some confusion among our workers.

This does not mean, as I stated that my interest ceases, by any means but I am still ready to do whatever you gentlemen call upon me to do within my ability.

Respectfully yours,

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Executive Chairman

District Administrator,

SCHOOLS OF COUNTY ASKED TO AID RUSSIA

Alabama is asked to collect through the schools this week 500,000 pounds of clothing for the aid of the people of Russia who have lost their homes, furniture, clothing, and all necessities of life as a result of their country being invaded by Germany. It is estimated that there are over 60,000,000 women and children in Russia who are in desperate need of clothing.

The school children are asked to bring the following materials to school underwear, socks, stockings, girdles suspenders, belts, vests, trousers wool or felt hats, caps, dresses, skirts, blouses, jackets, top coats, overcoats, rain coats, capes, hoods, and shoes. All garments must be clean, in good conditon, and ready to wear. Each school child has been asked to bring four pounds of clothing and a pair of shoes for this drive.

The parent-teachers association and all the other clubs of Clanton are behind this drive. The citizens of Clanton are urged to look into their closets and other places where discarded clothing is stored and denate what ever garments they have that they do not need.

One high school girl who has an only brother in the Navy is giving all his clothing to this cause. She says when he returns he will be much too large to wear any of his clothing he left at home. This is a very fine spirit and it is this kind of cooperation that will get the much needed clothing to these people.

If you have anything to give, call the high school and a student will be sent to collect your donation.

SOUND FARMING CAN BE ACHIEVED BY GROUP ACTION IN SOIL CONSERVATON

By R. W. Williamson

Most of this work is now being undertaken through the Community group approach. We have found that the leaders in the local communities are interested, not only in their own soil conservation problems, but in those of their neighbors as well, and that they are willing to encourage action in helping to solve them.

Let us take the Thomas Jr. Community as an example:

The twelve farmers who made application for assistance met at the schoolhouse at the agreed time. There the Soil Conservation Service Representatives, with the assistance of the County Agent, showed slides pertaining to perennial kudzu for field planting and water disposal, it's part in conserving the soil and use as a hay crop; lespedeza sericea as a soil building plant, and it's use on the farm; water disposal system, with terraces running water into kudzu and sericea meadows; strip rotation; methods of pasture improvement; and care for woodland.

After the slides were shown, the group went to the farm of R. D. Popwell where a study of actual conditions was made.

Each farmer was given a conservation survey map and a land-use-capability-map for his farm, and was asked to take his map home, go over his farm, and prepare a farm plan using the information gained at the meeting.

Out of this meeting the farmers gained many soil conserving practices in common, and where they should be established, and when.

Those who have made application and started recommended practices in Thomas Jr. Community are: W. B. Cox; R. D. Popwell; Alvin Davis; Ed M. Giles; Morris M. Gray; W. C. Moore and F. M. Guy.

HOMECOMING AT WALNUT CREEK CHURCH MAY 9TH

Sunday, May 9, is the annual homecoming for the Walnut Creek Church. Plans are under way for many people from many places to be welcomed on that day. Singing and several favored quartettes and soloists have been asked to come. The Rev. Dr. A. B. Carlton and others will be the speakers for the morning hours. Please come and bring your dinner and be prepared to sing and renew old friends and acquantances. Your presence is to be appreciated.

My week-end schedule of preaching services are as follows, Antioch Church at 8 p. m. Saturday night. Again the next day on Sunday at 9:30 a. m. Walnut Creek at 11 a. m., and at Lime Springs about the hour of 4 or 4:30. This preacher will be with you folks at Lime Springs, but just give him time to attend to the duties of Homecoming at Walnut Creek.—Rev Reese Farnell.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS

Put Health Into Menus With Vitamins Plus

Crisp greens give you plenty of vitamin A, B and C. Assemble them in your salads and get plenty of health insurance—you don't need points to shop for these.

What's the pep appeal of your meals these days? It should be better than ever before with spring vegetables dotting the markets colorfully in greens, yellows and reds. Many vitamin and mineral laden fruits are just coming into season so you homemakers should have no trouble getting your quota of two fruits, two vegetables and a citrus fruit into your family's diets.

In winter it is sometimes extremely difficult to meet that nutrition requirement because of the scarcity of vegetables and fruits and their consequent high prices. Now, though prices are higher than last year at this time, they are abundant, and most of us can afford to spend the extra money required to buy them.

Perhaps, you have a garden this year. You're probably planning to put up most of the produce, but you always have some crops available for immediate consumption such as lettuce, tender green shoots of onions, etc. In some parts of the country it's a bit early for some of these to make their appearance, but when they do, up and at them!

Homemakers are fortunately becoming more and more conscious of the importance of fruits and vegetables in the diet, and the more so they become, the more healthy will become each generation of Americans. Even those of you who have been deficient in these foods during the growing years will get much benefit from including these foods in your diet. A heavy meal calls for the light, crisp, "just right" feeling which fruits and vegetables supply.

Remember vitamins and minerals work hand in hand to give your body health and to keep it in good workable order. Most vegetables have many of both minerals and vitamins. It is interesting to know that greens (lettuce, parsley, watercress, turnip greens, etc.) are rich not only in iron that makes for good, rich blood, but also in vitamin A which promotes good health of skin, eyes, and keeps you buoyant and full of energy. The greens get a nice big star for being rich in Vitamin C, necessary for health of teeth and bones, and for quick healing of wounds.

Don't be surprised when the greens come in for a nice share of honors for vitamin B_2 also. That's the vitamin necessary for normal nutrition.

Easiest way to keep most of the vitamins intact is to serve the vegetables raw—as you would in a salad. The same goes for fruits. Don't let either of them soak in water or stand uncovered in the refrigerator—the vitamins seem to evaporate quickly, especially in the case of vitamin C, so easily lost by cooking or leaving exposed to air.

Lynn Says:

Fresh as a Day in May: So will be your foods if you keep them properly refrigerated. Desserts to cool you off and keep your appetites unjaded, if they're to be frozen, belong right in the freezer. Meats and fish are safest kept right under the freezer in a meat-keeper if you have one.

Milk, cream and beverages are stood alongside the freezer unit. Custards, puddings, butter and staples fill the middle section nicely, are easy to get at.

Leftovers, foods prepared ahead, salads, some fruits and berries are well refrigerated when kept on one of the lower shelves. The humidor or crisper means just that for it keeps those fresh fruits and vegetables crisp and well refrigerated.

The storage bin at the bottom of the refrigerator is usually nonrefrigerated, and gives splendid storage to cereals, crackers and extra beverages.

Keeping vegetables well refrigerated insures at least a good degree of vitamin preservation. Keep them covered, too!

Arrange your crisp raw fruits and vegetables attractively. If you'd like to have some fun, really, then take out the old geometry text, and follow some patterns you find therein—they're fine inspiration for attractive appearing vegetable and fruit dishes.

Cottage Cheese-Vegetable Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups cottage cheese
1 garlic clove (optional)
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons chopped chives or green onion
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
¼ cup chopped celery
Paprika
2 cucumbers
1 medium sized onion
2 large tomatoes
2 carrots
French dressing
Salad greens

Rub mixing bowl with clove of garlic. Add cottage cheese, salt, and paprika. Fold in chopped chives, pimiento, celery. Turn into a bowl that has been rinsed with cold water. Chill in refrigerator. Unmold on center of large salad plate, surround with watercress, thin cucumber slices, onion rings, carrot flowers, tomato wedges. Serve with french dressing.

A salad bowl that's popping full of health with its tomato slices (vitamin C) lettuce (vitamins A and C), bananas (A, B, C), green peppers (A and very much C).

Here's a vegetable that makes a main dish when combined with macaroni:

Green Pepper Stuffed With Macaroni.
(Serves 6)

6 green peppers
1 cup cooked, elbow macaroni
⅓ pound grated American cheese
1 cup soft bread crumbs
¼ teaspoon worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon salt

Cut a slice from top of green pepper, scoop out, and cook in boiling salted water for 5 minutes. Drain. Mix remaining ingredients, saving ⅓ of cheese for top. Fill peppers with mixture, stand upright in pan and sprinkle remaining cheese over top. Bake in a moderate oven 25 minutes.

Jaded appetites will respond quickly if you serve this delectable cool pudding:

Orangeade Refrigerator Pudding.
(Serves 9)

1 tablespoon gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1½ cups orange juice
⅓ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 egg whites
¼ cup sugar
4 cups oven popped rice cereal
⅓ cup melted butter
¼ cup sugar

Soften gelatin in cold water. Heat orange juice, sugar and salt to boiling point. Add softened gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add lemon juice and cool. When mixture begins to thicken, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites to which sugar has been added.

Crush cereal crumbs fine and mix with melted butter and sugar. Distribute evenly in bottom of a square pan and press down firmly. Pour in orange mixture. Chill in refrigerator. Cut in squares when firm, and serve with whole orange slices and whipped cream, if desired.

PETER AND JOHN LEADERS IN THE EARLY CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 2:37-41; 3:1-8; 4:13; 18-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marveled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.—Acts 4:13.

Does the Church have a message for our day? Sometimes one wonders a bit, but a little thought indicates that if it does not, it is not because Christianity has failed, but because Christian people have failed to declare the eternal and powerful truth of God. The primary responsibility for any such failure must rest upon the leaders of the Church.

It is instructive to see the qualities which made the leaders of the early Church effective for the Lord. In our lesson we find Peter and John doing three things.

I. Declaring God's Word (Acts 2:37-41).

Peter had just finished the first sermon preached in the Church, which was delivered at Pentecost. The declaration of God's truth in the power of the Holy Spirit brought conviction of sin. It always does, although the outward indication of its working may not be as marked as it was on that day. Three thousand souls were under conviction and asking what to do to be saved.

What an opportunity for the preacher and his fellow worker, John. How did they meet it? By faithfully declaring the need of repentance and faith, and then of fellowship with others in the Church.

One mark of a real leader for God will always be that he preaches and teaches the message of God without adulteration, without modification, and with plainness and simplicity.

The kind of leadership which is often magnified in the Church today and which is largely made up of personal magnetism, "pep" and fast talk, is not real leadership at all. Test your leaders by their faithful and intelligent declaration of God's Word.

II. Conveying God's Power (Acts 3:1-8).

"Channels only"—that is the function of the worker for Christ, the leader in His Church. As Mary Maxwell well put it:

Channels only, blessed Master,
But with all Thy wondrous power
Flowing through us, Thou canst use us
Every day and every hour.

Silver and gold was a scarce commodity with Peter and John, as it has been with many, yes most, of God's servants through the centuries. But they did have the blessed privilege of being channels through which the healing, cleansing, redeeming power of God could flow—and that was infinitely better.

The lame man had long since given up hope of anything better than the few coins he could beg at the temple gate. He was like many in our hard and practical age who see only the values that money can give, and thus miss the real blessing of God.

God has for men today, as He had for this beggar, that which is far better than gold—deliverance from sin and liberation from the limitations of spirit which make them content with the paltry alms of men.

Peter and John were ready to be used of God because they were men who were not too busy to pray (v. 1). Knowing the compassion of God they sought out the one in need, and by faith put the unlimited power of God to work on his behalf.

God healed this man's body, but what is more important, He healed his spirit (v. 8). We need that kind of healing for the weak-kneed, lame-ankled, spirit-darkened individuals in our communities and our churches. We will have it only as our leaders are men and women who are cleansed—ready to be channels for the conveying of God's power to a needy world.

III. Doing God's Will (Acts 4:13, 18-21).

The way of life of God's leaders is not an easy one, but it is a simple one. They do God's will—nothing less, nothing more, and nothing else. What could be more delightful?

Peter and John had spoken the truth and declared salvation to be only in the name of Jesus (v. 12). Certain easy talkers within the Church who tell us that we must not be narrow but broad enough to see salvation in all religions, had better read that verse again.

Because they had preached Christ, and for no other reason, they were imprisoned, then released on condition that they would not mention Him again. What a splendid opportunity for a smooth and comfortable compromise! They could preach but just leave out Christ. Did they do it? No! (vv. 19, 20).

Obedience to God was paramount with them, and it must be with every genuinely Christian leader in the Church. Nothing else will do, nor will it have the blessing and approval of God.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Chewing gum and rubber tires have something in common. They both are the products of latex-bearing trees. The chicle latex, from which chewing gum is made, has a high resin and low rubber content. Rubber latex has the reverse characteristics. Chicle and Castilloa rubber trees are found in much the same areas in Central America.

Synthetic rubber tractor tires have been under tests by B. F. Goodrich engineers for close to a year. When synthetic rubber becomes available in sufficient quantities, farmers may expect such tires on their tractors.

A Russian rubber-bearing plant is now being successfully grown in the United States. Its value in the American rubber program, however, is still undetermined.

Tire recapping has proved its wartime value. But the recapping should be done before the tread rubber of the tire is completely worn.

"PRAYER BAND" TO BE ORGANIZED AT ROCKY MOUNT

We are organizing "A Prayer Band' at the Church of the Nazarene at Rocky Mount, the 3rd Sunday of May from 2 until 5 p. m.

We are having a dedication and prayer service for our boys in the service who have left our Sunday School.

We have 24 boys who attended our Sunday School who are now in the service.

The mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters of these boys are epecially invited.

We are not only inviting the Rocky Mount people but the mothers and fathers from other churches and other communities to come and be with us on the 3rd Sunday.

"Prayer is the key to Heaven," so come and let's pray for our Country and our boys in Service.

What's Doing At Isabella High

By Jesse Culp

The title of Isabella's personality of the week rightfully belongs to Miss Pauline Williams, a Senior II student at Isabella. Pauline was elected to the honor of "Miss Isabella" in the contest finals last Friday night. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Williams of Pleasant Grove Community. We wish to congratulate Pauline Williams on this honor, and it does indeed prove that she is a very popular young lady around I.H.S.

A close runner-up for the title was Miss Imogene Williams, a Junior II student. She furnished almost too much competition for the winner, and so we must also congratulate her.

The Senior play, "No Bride for the Groom," which was presented last Friday night was a success, as will testify any member of the large audience which was present. Miss Hamer who directed the play, and all the players, stage managers, and everyone who helped put the play over did not work in vain.

It looks like the baseball team's luck has kind of reversed to begin with. They have lost all of four games this year. The last was to Jemison last Friday afternoon. Jemison won 20-4. ... A visiaor at I.H.S. last week was Miss Katherine Sue Farmer of Titus Alabama . . . The Grammar School department is looking forward to its dramatical program Friday night .... A marvelous attendance record was broken here last week. Walter Kendrick, a junior this year had never missed a day in all his eleven years in school.

Monday of last week, he came to school with a very good case of mumps This marked the last day of his perfect record in attendance. Anyway, we are inclined to believe that Walter has set a record that has never been excelled in Chilton County.

The semi-finals for this section in the F. F. A. public speaking contest will be held at Autaugaville, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Competing in the contest will be contestants from Ramer High, and Isabella High.

These boys have been good enough to win the chapter, district and the quarter-finals contests, so this should be a tough race. Jesse Culp is the representative from Isabella.

More food will be available for civilian consumption in 1943 than in the years 1935-39, but tremendously increased demands, due to much higher incomes, would wreck the nation's food supply if it were not for rationing.

Wartime use has served to popularize dehydrated eggs to such an extent that the Government has reserved the entire 1943 production of spray-dried whole eggs, leaving civilians the same amount of other dehydrated products as in 1942.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Tin Cans And Old Hose Vital To War Effort

Has it occurred to you that you have failed to help the Allied cause if you do not save your old tin cans? Tin is vitally needed in the war effort. Did you know that 168 average cans provide tin for a trench Mortar 2000 for a light bomber, and 9000 are required to supply tin for a light tank

Old silk and nylon hose are needed for reclaiming so the fiber can be used for making powder bags. These powder bags hold the ammunition made from the waste fats that housewives save and contribute to the salvage program. Your old hose and waste fats are badly needed too.

The Boy Scouts have helped in the collection of tin cans and the G. A's have collected old hose in Clanton. Have yours ready next time they call at your home.

Above all, see that your cans, old hose, and waste fats go into the War Effort. See that they get in.

BUG TIME IS HERE
Defend that Victory Garden!

THERE'S an army as stealthy as the Japs and as ruthless as the Nazis preparing for an assault to conquer your Victory Garden. It's the bug army. Let that army beat you to the punch and you won't save those ration points and you won't can much from your Victory Garden. It's a voracious army, and only strong-arm methods will stop it.

START NOW WITH SPRAYING AND DUSTING

HELPFUL, too, in keeping certain insects under control, is the insect trap pictured here and which you can make yourself if you have enough insulated wire for an extension to your garden spot. All you need is a lamp bulb with a reflector made of an old can lid or other sheet metal. Beneath it suspend a pan of water with a film of kerosene or old motor oil on it. This trap will catch and kill thousands of night-flying moths and beetles, and is particularly effective against the tomato fruit worm which often damages as much as 35 per cent of the tomato crop. (It is not effective against aphids—plant lice—the cabbage worm and other worms which hatch from butterfly eggs, because butterflies do not fly at night.) It is not a kill-all, but will help materially in keeping the insect army under control.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Final Battle in Campaign for Tunisia Marked by Fierce Enemy Resistance; Allies Strive to Reunite Reds, Poles; Labor Front Studies Coal Mine Issues

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Wearing the uniform of a division general of the French army, Governor Jean Rapenne of French Guiana poses on the portico of the governor's mansion in Cayenne with two members of the U. S. military mission. At left is Lieut. Com. J. Marvin Krause. Right: Col. Paul L. Singer. Governor Rapenne assumed political leadership following the ouster of the pre-Axis regime of former Governor Rene Veber.

TUNISIA:
Slow but Sure

Meeting fierce fire, Allied troops fought methodically to the approaches of the Axis' final two bastions in Tunisia. Tunis and Bizerte.

While French and American forces pressed against rocky Axis entrenchments in the north, and British units contained the enemy in the mountains in the south, the Allied First army's armored columns fought German tanks in the plains in the central sector.

Driving the Axis from Long Stop hill, the First army cleared the road leading to the Tunis plain to the east. A little to the south, First army formations shot it out with German tanks in flat country, then swung off toward the Axis' vital central sector base of Pont du Fahs, which was rapidly encircled.

Resisting bitterly, the Axis was giving up territory by the foot only, relying on mortar and machine gun fire to stop Allied infantry advancing under cover of massed artillery barrage. Using freighters and motor barges, the Axis continued to run the gantlet of scathing Allied bombers in the Sicilian straits in an effort to keep their embattled troops supplied.

Helmet Saves General

Only a helmet saved the life of Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, leader of American ground forces, as shell fragmentation struck him down while on observation on the Tunisian front during the bitter fighting. Although fragmentation glanced off the helmet, particles ripped into the general's shoulder, injuring him painfully. Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear has assumed his position pending his recovery.

RUSSIA:
Break With Poles

Charging that the Polish government in exile was using Nazi propaganda in order to force territorial concessions from the Russians, the Reds formally broke diplomatic relations with the Poles. In consultation with the United States, British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden immediately got to work patching up the rupture.

Immediate cause of the break was centered around the Nazi charge that they had uncovered the graves of 10,000 Polish army officers near Smolensk, allegedly murdered by the Reds before they were driven from the area. The Poles asked the International Red Cross to investigate the charge. Polish officials said that they have been unable to locate the officers despite a general amnesty granted Polish prisoners of war by the Russian government.

At the same time there were indications of another diplomatic break, this one between the United States and Finland. Withdrawal of American embassy officials from Helsingfors reputedly followed Finland's declination of a U. S. offer to mediate her war with Russia.

Catch Breath

Russian troops held against Nazi attacks in the Leningrad area and Red airmen continued to pepper German supply lines along the whole front. Minor action was reported above Kursk, where the Reds are wedged into Nazi lines, and at Novorossisk, the Germans' big base on the Black sea shore in the Caucasus.

POISON GAS:
Nazis Prepare

For the last two months, the German people have been drilled against poison gas attacks.

This information reached Allied sources in the wake of Great Britain's warning that she would use poison gas against Germany should the Nazis start such warfare in Russia.

According to reports, fire fighting squadrons in Germany were instructed on the effects of gas.

SOFT COAL:
Labor Showdown

John L. Lewis forced a showdown on the government's war labor policies.

Backed up by approximately 450,000 members of the United Mine Workers, Big John demanded a $2 a day raise; an $8 minimum wage for all employees, and portal-to-portal pay, or, pay from the time a worker enters a mine to the time he leaves.

At stake was the President's "hold-the-line" order, based on the WLB's policy of granting a 15 per cent wage increase over January, 1941, rates. Lewis has opposed this formula from the beginning.

Although the UMW was committed to continue working until the end of last month many mines reported stoppages and slowdowns during the week preceding the deadline. UMW did not authorize the disruptions, but neither did officials order the workers to return to their jobs.

PRODUCTION:
Ships and Planes

Stating that American shipyards could produce 20 million tons of shipping a year, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission, has revealed that yards are constructing five vessels a day.

Land's announcement coincided with one made by Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson, in which he told the Atlanta War Effort committee that American aircraft manufacturers turned out 6,200 airplanes in March. Like Land, Patterson declared that many more planes could be produced if critical materials and men were available.

Deriding Nazi claims that they have sunk 30 million tons of Allied shipping since the start of the war, Land said our shipyards will produce almost 19 million tons this year. This will be greater than the rest of the world combined.

Patterson revealed that production of major items in the army supply program exclusive of aircraft will approximate $1,600,000,000 in April. This will be about 15 per cent greater than the January total.

ALEUTIANS:
No Picnic

Swirling mists and rains continued to hold up American bombings in the Aleutians. Although prepared to dump 50 tons of explosives on each trip over Attu and Kiska, weather has held U. S. fliers to a mere handful of raids.

Meanwhile, pilots report the Japs have succeeded in heavily fortifying the Aleutians. On recent flights over the islands, they have encountered strong anti-aircraft bursts, and airmen believe the Japs have deliberately withheld some of their fire.

Both Attu and Kiska have few suitable beaches upon which American troops could land, most of the shoreline being steep and craggy. The Japs have these few beaches thickly covered and aptly manned, remembering the Yanks' successful surprise landings at Guadalcanal.

Eight months ago, the army said the Japs probably had 10,000 men stationed in the Aleutians. Airmen believe that these troops have since been strongly reinforced. Summed up: American observers believe the battle of the Aleutians will be a big one, and no picnic.

RAF:
Bombs Rip Duisberg

Seventeen bombers failed to return following the RAF's heavy raid on the important German industrial center of Duisberg.

Over 1,000 tons of explosives were dumped on Duisberg, famous for its engine works, as the RAF returned to the wars after bombing Stettin, Rostock and Berlin.

Meanwhile, RAF bombers continued to attack Nazi communications centers.

RATIONING:
More Tires, More Gas

Because of the increased quota of tires for civilians, OPA has amended its gas rationing regulations outside of the 17 eastern seaboard states and the District of Columbia.

Following Rubber Administrator William Jeffers' announcement that more Grade A tires would be available for essential use, the OPA boosted the maximum allotment of gas for occupational driving from 470 to 720 gallons per month. The figure is based on an average of 15 miles per gallon of gas.

Formerly, only doctors, ministers and some classes of salesmen received the cherished "C" card allowing 720 miles for occupational driving. Average allotments on "B" cards approximated 470 miles. Now "C" cards will be available on application, showing all traveling will be done on jobs, or the car is being used to transport three or more persons to war industry.

The OPA also ruled that rationing certificates for replacing tires on farm tractors may be issued by local boards in areas where recapping facilities are inadequate.

SHIPPING:
Allied Losses

The Allies suffered a net loss of one million tons of merchant shipping in 1942, the navy department reported.

The "net" figure was arrived at after deducting losses from existing fleets and new construction during the year. The navy declared, however, that figures were incomplete, since building records were not received from some of the Allied nations.

In announcing the losses, the navy pointed out that they included submarine sinkings, mines, airplanes, capture and otherwise. According to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, submarines accounted for 50 per cent of the losses.

The navy's statement followed a report by the Truman defense investigating committee that 12 million tons of Allied merchant shipping had been sunk during the year.

CHINA:
Fight in Mountains

Forty thousand Japanese assaulted the Chinese army's positions in the mountain range flanking the Pieping-Hankow railroad.

Both sides suffered heavy losses as the Chinese resisted fiercely in the passes and on the heights.

The Chinese also reported throwing back two Japanese attempts to land along the China sea coast. The first attempt found troops trying to reach the beach under cover of a lone warship's fire. But when Chinese cannon forced a withdrawal, the Japs returned the next day with four warships. Again heavy fire frustrated a landing.

Meanwhile, American airmen were active over China, combatting Japanese fighter planes from an advanced Allied base in Hunan province.

NEW HORIZON:
'Old Capitalism Dead'

"The capitalism of complete laissez-faire which thrived on low wages and maximum profits for minimum turnover, which rejected collective bargaining and fought against justified public regulation of the competitive process is a thing of the past."

No words of a soap-box orator these, but rather the keynote of an address made by Eric A. Johnston, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, at the initial session of the chamber's 31st annual meeting.

Continuing, Johnston said: "Political and economic freedom are integrated, and that what impairs one also hampers the other in like measure. The horizons of opportunity being opened up are larger than ever before."

WHEN Director King Vidor began telling Brian Donlevy about Ellis Island, the day Brian did his first scenes for "America," he replied "Bet I know more about Ellis Island than you do." Seems that in 1911 he returned to the United States from Ireland with his mother; unaware that she had to pay a head tax before being re-admitted, she'd spent all her money. A phone call to her husband in Sheboygan Falls, Wis., would have settled the matter. But as she had a hot Irish temper, she insisted on arguing with all the officials. "So they put us in a corner and ignored us until Mother cooled off," said Donlevy. "That was two days later!"

ANY pretty flowered print may be combined with the side strips of sheets that are good after the center part has worn out. A good section may be cut from the center bottom too. The diagram at the left gives all the dimensions you need for making a spread for a double bed from the good parts of three old sheets put together with six-inch strips flowered cotton material of about the same weight.

Here, the figured goods is in a pink and white pattern that is especially effective with the white muslin. It is also used to trim the curtains made from old sheets. Another interesting color note is the mats of the pink and white material used for the row of framed photographs over the bed. It also edges the full white lamp shades.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox, Jr. Manila had fallen and our naval base at Cavite had been wiped out, when the PT boats took their final crack at the Japs off Bataan. March first General MacArthur took a ride in one of the boats, and everyone knew something was up, because the Philippines couldn't hold out much longer. Lieut. Kelly is speaking.

CHAPTER IX

"On March 10 Bulkeley made his usual trip to see MacArthur; this time he brought along all his plans and charts for the trip. The General went over and approved them, and also told Admiral Rockwell and his chief of staff that they were going along, which was the first they had known of the trip—they had thought we were going to China. There was also an ominous bit of news—some big Jap formation was reported coming down the west coast of Luzon in our direction. If it was true, it could only be the convoy bringing General Yamashita and his reinforcements. General MacArthur told Bulkeley we might be leaving very soon, and to come back the next day.

"That would be the eleventh of March. Bulkeley went over early in the morning and returned to us at noon. He called in not only me but the other officers, Akers, Cox, and Schumacher, and for the first time showed them copies of our secret orders and the charts he had worked out for our route. He made the point that we should all keep together, but if one broke down, the rest would go on, leaving it to make its way the best it could."

"If we met the enemy, we were to avoid them if possible. But if they gave chase and were gaining on us so that an attack was necessary, the 41 boat, in which he would carry the General, his wife, and his son, would turn and run, and my boat, since I was second in command, would lead the attack to give the others time to escape.

"The last thing he told us was that we were leaving that very night. He left us hard at work on last-minute preparations but would return soon to complete his own.

"We didn't tell the men what we were up to or where we were leaving Corregidor," continued Lieutenant Kelly, but they got their orders to dump that landing-force equipment, to load all spare parts on the boats, move the crew's mess gear back into the ship's galley, and pile the decks with drums of gas.

"And while we were doing it, who should walk in but Nat Floyd of the New York Times, exactly the last guy in the world we wanted to see. Sure we liked him. He said he'd been up to the lines with the army, and then on a hunch, no particular reason, thought he'd drop in on us and see if we had any news.

"Then Bulkeley and I went into a huddle. Here Nat was. And bound to get suspicious of the activity. After we'd gone, the story would be almost sure to get out.

" 'He's a pretty nice guy,' I said. 'Don't suppose we could take him with us, do you?'

" 'Well,' said Bulkeley. 'I've got to go along now. But if Nat should happen to stow away in the lazaret, and we didn't find him until we were out to sea, why then the story certainly wouldn't get out, would it?'

"And do you know, that's just what happened. But in the meantime there were other things on my mind. Mostly it was how I was going to get hold of Peggy. There was no telephone at the hospital. She'd said she would phone me sometime between six and seven o'clock today about that date of ours on the fifteenth.

"But there was a lot of traffic over the signal-corps field telephone, and she might not get to use it until almost seven. And I was due to pick up my passengers and be gone forever by 6:30 tonight. And I'd never get to say how much I liked her and what a swell, brave kid she was, and good-by.

"So I sat down and tried to write it in a letter, which I could leave at Corregidor on my way out, and which she would get when she got back from duty in the lines, and then at least would understand.

"I had just finished it about 2:30 and put it in my pocket when they came paging me for a telephone call on that signal-corps phone. It was Peggy—her duty hours had been changed, and she was afraid if she waited until seven to call I might be out on patrol, and she might miss me. She just wanted to tell me she'd been able to fix everything for our date on the fifteenth, and was that date all right with me, could I make it?

" 'No,' I said. The phone was on the wall in the Philippine army shack, and the shack was crowded with soldiers—in addition to all the guys probably listening in on the line.

"Well, she said, maybe she could change it for the sixteenth, if that would be better for me.

" 'It wouldn't be any better,' I said. 'Nothing would be any better.'

" 'Well,' she said, and she sounded a little mad, 'what is this, anyway?'

" 'I guess it's good-by, Peggy,' I said.

"Then there was a long silence, and when she spoke again I almost thought it was someone else, her voice was so changed. 'Where are you going?' she asked, very low. 'Can you tell me?'

" 'No,' I said.

" 'Can you tell me if you're coming back?'

" 'No,' I said. 'I can't tell you that.'

" 'Then I guess it's really good-by,' she said, and her voice sounded flat and a long way off. 'But it's been awfully nice, hasn't it?'

" 'Listen, Peggy, I've written you a letter—' only just then I heard the connection break. It seemed a couple of generals wanted to talk to each other. It was quite a while before I got it back again, and they told me she had waited fifteen minutes and had then gone. I've always hoped what the generals had to say to each other was important.

"Of course we weren't engaged. I didn't have a picture of her. In fact, the only thing I had was a few lines she'd scribbled on a piece of paper a few weeks before. We'd been idly talking about how we hoped to get out of the islands and agreed, half in joke, that whichever of us got out first would write the family of the other one of those reassuring letters about how wonderful life was on Bataan and how well and happy the other one had looked.

"So, half in joke, she'd scratched the address of her married sister in San Francisco on the back of an old envelope. This I still had, and I intended to write her, and send it out by the plane which took MacArthur, telling her what a swell girl her kid sister was.

" 'Then I guess it's really good-by,' she said."

"Kelly's 34 boat was right on time," said Bulkeley. "We in the 41 boat picked up our passengers at Corregidor and met him and the other two boys at the turning light just outside the mine field at seven o'clock to the minute. We had twenty passengers in all in our four boats. With me in the 41 boat were General and Mrs. MacArthur, their little boy, and his nurse and a few generals. Kelly in the 34 boat had, to start with, Admiral Rockwell, two colonels, and an army aviation captain. When one of the other boats later broke down, Kelly picked up a few more generals.

"But rank made no difference. Washington had ordered MacArthur to bring out the most valuable of his men, and so they were all specialists—there was even a staff sergeant, who was a technician, along with us, while thirty-odd generals were left behind on Bataan.

"We started out single file, my boat as flagship setting the pace for the other three. First we went fifty miles straight out to sea in the deepening twilight. We'd hoped to get out unnoticed, but suddenly we saw a light glimmer and glow on one of the Japanese islands. It was a signal fire-warning to the mainland that they'd seen us pass. If they had seen it on Luzon, that meant trouble for us—maybe bombers at dawn, maybe destroyers later on in the day. By eleven o'clock we made out the outline of Apo Island against the stars (there was no moon) and checked our navigation, which we were doing entirely by compass and chart. MacArthur and General Sutherland were pleased with the way it was going."

"I can't say that Admiral Rockwell was," said Kelly—"maybe because he knew more about the sea than the generals did. I hadn't wanted to worry him, so I hadn't mentioned the fact that ours was the only one of the four boats which hadn't been overhauled, and was so full of carbon that we couldn't make much speed until the carbon was burned out.

"As you know, we'd intended to make a good speed, but I found my boat wouldn't quite do it. Pretty soon we were lagging fifty yards behind, then, after a while, two hundred. The Admiral didn't mention this for some time. But finally he said:

" 'Don't you think we're getting a little far apart?'

" 'We'll close in gradually,' I said. And I tried to, but finally we were so far behind Bulkeley's flagship we couldn't see it with the naked eye.

"I sent a whispered message to the engine room, ordering them to disconnect the throttle, and to push the carburetors up with their hands as far as they would go. We now had on every possible ounce of power, but the Admiral still wasn't satisfied.

" 'We're closing pretty slowly,' he complained.

"Privately, I doubted that we were closing at all, but I only said, 'No use pushing her too hard, sir.'

"But about five minutes later we really were closing. Bulkeley, noticing we were pretty far behind, had reduced his speed. But, with my throttle disconnected, I couldn't reduce mine, and it took me about a minute to get a message down there telling the engineers to take their hands off the carburetor levers and reconnect them with the controls on the bridge. During this minute we not only gained on Bulkeley's boat, but overtook it and went roaring madly past.

"In the darkness I could see the Admiral had squared around and was giving me a doubtful look. I could tell he thought he was riding with a madman, and I decided he would worry less if I told him the truth—that our maximum speed in this boat was something under forty knots. Any Japanese destroyer could easily make this maximum of ours, as the Admiral very well knew. But all he said was 'My God!' very softly to himself.

"It happened that we were just passing an island. The Admiral glanced over.

" 'How far are we from shore, Kelly?'

" 'About four miles, sir.'

"Looks farther than that to me. Take a bow-and-beam bearing.'

" 'Aye, aye, sir,' I said. But of course I didn't have any instruments. So, making the 45-degree angle with two fingers, I sighted along them to a point ahead. When we came just abeam of this point, since we knew our own speed, it would give us roughly our distance from shore—very roughly. The Admiral noticed me sighting along my fingers.

" 'Don't you have a pelorus?' he said, sharply.

" 'No, sir,' I said.

" 'H-m-m—. I suppose the flagship has better means?'

" 'No, sir,' I said. 'They don't.'

" 'How in hell do you navigate?'

" 'By guess and by God, sir,' I said.

" 'My God!" said the Admiral, and this time he didn't say it so softly. 'I hope,' he added wistfully, 'that we get there.' "

"At four o'clock in the morning, my engines suddenly stopped," recalled Lieutenant Kelly. "I knew the strainers were clogged with wax and rust, and it would take half an hour to clean them, which I explained to the Admiral, who was watching the other three boats disappear over the horizon.

" 'What time will we get to the rendezvous?'

"I made a fast mental calculation. 'About 8:30, sir.'

"Dawn, as we both knew, would come at seven, and with it—if the mainland had seen that island signal fire—Japanese planes, looking for us.

" 'That's an hour and a half later than I like to be out,' said the Admiral. Our plans, of course, called for running only at night, and laying up by day in the Cuyo Island group, with a general rendezvous in a harbor of one of the central islands for our start at sunset.

"There are thirty or forty islands in the Cuyo group, and just before dawn we began to make out the first ones—tiny mounds on the horizon ahead and around us. The flagship had the only detailed chart of them; all I had was a large-sized map of the Philippines, and on this the Cuyos looked like a cluster of some forty-odd flyspecks.

"When the Admiral asked how in the world we—without navigation instruments or chart—expected to make a proper landfall on the particular flyspeck that we all had selected as rendezvous, I explained we had provided for that; I knew its general location, and from Bulkeley's chart I had drawn a pencil sketch of this island. But again he was skeptical.

"It was eight o'clock (no planes as yet) before we saw what we thought might be the right one; as we drew nearer, the Admiral agreed that the hills and cove were exactly like my sketch, but when we entered the cove, it was empty. We circled the island—no sign of the other three boats.

" 'My God,' said the Admiral, 'what's happened to the General? We arrive, limping in late, and the others aren't here! Where can they be?'

Nation's Railroads Move 50,000 Troops Each Day

Special Surveys Decrease Cross Hauling; Developments Abroad May Force Unexpected Shifting of Troops.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

Recently I had to make seven consecutive week-end trips between Washington and New York—I left Washington after a late Friday broadcast and had to return Monday for one at noon. Not once was I able to get reservations for the return trip until at the last minute when some unused space was turned in.

If I groused a little too loudly over this, it may have been because I didn't know then what I learned officially only the other day; namely, that "if the war department insisted in having all the Pullman equipment it could use, all the Pullman cars of the country would be carrying troops."

In other words, if Johnny Doughboy didn't step aside occasionally, we'd all use coaches or walk.

Compromise

The present arrangement is said to be a compromise in recognition of essential civilian needs. At present, a million and three-quarter soldiers are being moved a month—that is 50,000 a day—in America's trains in official troop movements. This does not include the many men on leave.

There are, of course, movements of whole divisions with full equipment but these are the exceptions. As you have probably noticed if you travel very much, there are usually a few cars containing troops attached to your passenger train. This is the way most of the troops are transported—in small groups of 250 or less. However, that is a considerable addition to the regular passenger traffic.

It's said a soldier eats twice as much as he did in civilian life and that is one reason why food has to be rationed to civilians. But he travels a lot more in proportion to his normal civilian peregrinations. Many a man saw his first big city when he reached London or Cairo or New Delhi. I know a pilot who dropped in at the airport here recently and had several hours waitover. When he was asked why he didn't cross the bridge and look the capital over, he said he'd never been in a big city and didn't want to get lost. The next thing heard from this particular was that he was in Calcutta.

Average Number

In the last war, the average number of moves made by a soldier were three. Here is a list of typical moves he makes in this war, drawn up by the Office of War Information:

1. To the induction center
2. To reception center
3. To replacement training center
4. To his particular branch of service
5. To big maneuvers
6. Return
7. To special training areas
8. To port of embarkation

Special studies are made to cut down unnecessary cross-hauling but sudden developments abroad may force soldiers who are located near one port to be shifted to another far away. Or a special need for particularized training may arise and that may force men to be doubled back to desert or mountain for the specialized practice in snow or under a hot sun that new requirements make necessary.

Maneuvers in the southeast and southwest, including the desert training areas of California, have sometimes required the moving in of as many as 300,000 men within a few weeks, equipment and all. Naturally, that disrupted a large part of passenger traffic for several weeks at a time.

Unessential Travel

Efforts are being made to cut down extra passenger travel by discouraging conventions, trade shows, big sports contests and other gatherings. One exception has been made, and that is the lecturer. Even the President saw fit to come out with a statement encouraging the continuation of the work of lecture bureaus. He expressed himself to Lowell Thomas, who traveled to Washington, on that subject—the plea for a good word for the speaker. Thomas represented many people who do considerable public speaking. I know how difficult it is. I, myself, have been unable to accept lecture dates because it is so difficult to be certain of connections and a broadcaster has to move with the regularity of a train schedule—a train schedule in peace time—the microphone waits for no man.

There have been rumors of late that transportation was snagged; that because of the U-boats, supplies were piling up on the docks and loaded freight cars were jamming the yards and causing congestion. But the Office of War Information says that latest advices indicate that congestion is being lessened. In fact, the official word is: "The battle of transportation . . . at a crisis at Pearl Harbor time . . . is now being won."

Nearing Limit

I hope that this statement isn't over-optimistic. As a matter of fact, the reservation is noted that "the victories are not necessarily permanent. Our transportation equipment, with few exceptions, is being used close to its limits"—and there remain two situations which are not satisfactory, one is movement of oil and the other is the problem of getting the war workers to and from work.

The latter difficulty is responsible, according to some investigators, for much of the recently decried absenteeism.

To get an idea of what the traffic has to bear in a city where war industries are concentrated, there has been an increase of use of the Detroit street railway systems of 76.9 per cent. The Baltimore transit line is up 90 per cent and the Washington, 131 per cent. I know what these figures mean as does anyone who has to make his way to and from work in the capital. I have also seen that fabulous city of San Diego, once a pleasant, sleepy town which seemed to move lazily with the pelicans that flew over the bay or the whispering palms. The pelicans have been replaced by planes and it's a 24-hour town, with a 336 per cent increase in the use of its busses and trolley cars.

Diary of a Broadcaster

Today I made it from bedside to desk in one hour and 18 minutes, including the time to make my own breakfast of coffee, poached eggs, grapefruit and zwieback (my wife is away) also to traverse on foot some 13 Washington blocks. I think that this record is not bad considering the variety of activities included. I managed to hear the early five-minute newscast and scanned the headlines which told me whether the news wind was blowing in the same direction this morning that it was last night when the newspapers went to bed—in other words, was I to plow fresh fields or harvest what I could from the old ones.

I also removed the blanket that shields our three parakeets from northern drafts and waited for the welcoming chirrup that one, the least snobbish of the three, condescends to give me before I leave the room. As soon as I do, they all burst into song.

Walking to work in Washington these days is like reviewing the armies of the United Nations for one can spot almost any uniform between Dupont Circle and Pennsylvania avenue. But it seems that the WAVES are in the preponderance. The WAACs are smart but the navy has a uniform that is a little bit less drab than the olive. It is surprising how an elderly matron turns out in that navy blue-and-gold as smart as a midshipman.

Washington's springtime, one of its two beautiful seasons, is here in April—gone in May. First, the forsythia burns with its yellow flame; then the magnolias blush and fade, and the dogwoods raise their sweet ghostliness among their darker sisters; then the cherry blossoms come—and there are many of them scattered over the city as well as the better advertised ones along the lagoon. Soon they are followed by leaves on the oaks and the elms and the maples. Then backyards are brilliant with the rambler roses and you know that spring is done.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

IN MEMORIAM

WHEREAS: It has pleased almighty God in His infinite wisdom to take from us our friend and brother, Brother John Douthit Griffin who was born into this world in Talladega County, July 23, 1875. He married Miss Mary Whittle and to this union were born eight children, Bonnie Clyde Griffin, Robert Lee Griffin, James Whittle Griffin, deceased, Mrs. Imogene G. Glasscock, Sidney L. Griffin, Louise Griffin deceased, John D Griffin, Jr., and David Reese Griffin

Brother Griffin was made a mason at Thomasville, Alabama in Clarke County in 1909. He was elected Master of Duke Lodge in Calhoun County in 1912. In later years he served as Master at Marbury, Billingsley and Thorsby. At the time of his death he was a member of Clanton No. 423.

WHEREAS: Being a true and faithful brother among us, and his presence will be missed at Clanton Lodge and also over the state as he was a good mason and a good man.

1. That we the masons of Clanton Lodge No. 423 extend our sincere sympathy to his family, and

2. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of Clanton Lodge No. 423 A. F. & A. M. and copies be sent to the family and to the local newspapers.

JAMES W. COX

On April 23, the Lord called from us our dear father. He was 72 years of age. He leaves to mourn his death a wife, Mrs. Sarah Cox; 4 sons and 6 daughters. The sons are Litt and John of Billingsley, Route 1 and Willie and Oscar of Clanton Route 3. The daughters were Mrs. Eva Henly, Verbena Route 1; Mrs. Agnes Baker and Mrs Ila Mae Johnson of Billingsley Route 1; Mrs. Lake Owen, Clanton Route 3; Mrs. O. N. Williams, Clanton; Mrs Vera Barrett of Birmingham. We loved Dady but the Lord loved him best and said "Jim, you have suffered enough so come on home where there is no pain or sorrow." We know Heaven is brighter since Dady got in there. It will be a great reunion when we all meet him on the golden streets of Heaven. We can never gather around and sing for him in this world again but we will all sing together some day. May God help each one of us to do like he wanted us to do. The Lord givith and the Lord has taken away; Blessed be the name of the Lord. We are praying to meet you some day Dear Dady, where there is no more goodbye.

Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Williams.

WOMEN AT WAR

Sophia

Mrs. Kimball and Mrs. Worthington, dressed soberly and wearing their best black gloves, walked along the stony country road back toward Sophia Hardy's farm, to pay their visit of condolence.

"How do you reckon she'll be bearing up?" Mrs. Kimball asked Mrs. Worthington. Both ladies wore their most solemn, funereal expressions.

"A mighty severe blow," Mrs. Worthington said. "Mighty severe. To lose your only son, the mainstay of your declining years. And such a dreadful death, too—to go down with a ship. Mercy!"

"The first of our boys from Hand County to go, too," Mrs. Kimball said, mournfully. "I wouldn't blame Sophia Hardy for feeling right bitter."

They stood on the simple stone doorstep, with downcast eyes, getting themselves into the proper commiserative mood.

"Come in!"

The voice was brisk and cordial. They looked up in surprise. Sophia herself had come to the door. As they followed her into the parlor they exchanged glances, with eyebrows lifted. Sophia was not even in mourning. The parlor shades were not even drawn.

"It's nice of you to come," Sophia said. "Do sit down."

"We came," Mrs. Kimball said almost reprovingly, "to tell you that our hearts are bleeding for you in your great loss."

"We know how lonely you must be out here," Mrs. Worthington said. "With nothing to take your mind off . . . off . . . ." She sniffed and reached in her purse for a handkerchief.

"Oh, I keep busy," Sophia said. "I've just finished applying for the Government insurance on Tom's life."

The visiting ladies could not resist a shocked glance at one another.

"I want to get it right away," Sophia said. "So I can put it into War Bonds. My boy hasn't finished fighting yet, not by a long shot."

The ladies were so occupied with feeling horrified, so titillated by this callous behaviour in a bereaved mother—that neither of them noticed Sophia's hands. Under the folds of her clean print dress, against the seat of her chair, they were tightly clenched.

Rosebud

Rosebud is eight, and the most beautiful shade of caramel fudge. To her loving Mammy and Pappy she is known, on approximately alternate days, as "Angel" and "You devil child". It was on her devil-child days that Rosebud tied the knots in the shirts that Mammy had taken in for washing, and poured the whole of the vanilla bottle into the lamb stew, just, she said later through bitter tears, to "flavor it up some".

On her angel days Rosebud is equally imaginative even if a more restful occupant of the little shack down on Vinegar Hill. Once when Mammy was out doing day work, Rosebud got a wave of cleaning fever and scoured every pot and pan in the kitchen so that they literally glistened. Another day, left alone, she tidied up Mammy's and Pappy's room to such a point of apple-pie order that it was a week before Pappy could find an undershirt.

Rosebud is a great reader of the newspapers. Mammy and Pappy don't take one, but there are plenty of perfectly good newspapers blowing round Vinegar Hill. It was out of one of them that Rosebud got her idea for spending the ten cents the Bunny had put under her pillow the night her tooth came out. After breakfast Rosebud disappeared down the Hill and reappeared soon after with a beautiful ten-cent War Stamp pasted firmly into a brand-new book with neat little squares for more stamps. She displayed her investment to Mammy. "I declare you're an angel child," Mammy said. Rosebud went on sitting on the kitchen floor staring with large brown eyes at the empty squares in her book. From time to time she took hold of one or another of her teeth and wiggled it, gently.

Mammy was engrossed in a particularly big washing. Rosebud was as quiet as a mouse and Mammy forgot about her until, coming in from the yard with her arms full of dry sheets, she encountered her child with a large hammer in her hand. Scenting the devil in her angel child, Mammy shouted at her, "Rosebud! Come yere with that hammer! What you planning on doing?"

But what was done was done. In Rosebud's other hand was another tooth. Her mouth was stretched in a broad if slightly bloody smile. "I ain't doing nothing, Mammy," she said. "I'm just filling up my stamp book."

Just fun, Just laughter, Just a scream!! DON'T MISS IT!

LETTER T OTHE EDITOR

Editor Chilton County News:

Will you please allow me a small space in the News to express, in a meager way, my sincere appreciation to all who so generously and lovingly gave toward the nice offering in behalf of myself and four children whose husband and father died nearly three years ago.

The contribution was made during the Easter singing at Poplar Springs last Sunday, April 25th. The Rev. M. Lockhart of Maple Spring made a brief talk in our behalf, followed by a suggestion for the offering, which revealed when counted, $66.45.

We do not have words to express our feelings at this time for this act of kindness. I sincerely trust that none of you will ever have any regrets for having responding to a cause that only the Lord knows how much it will mean to myself and the four little girls. There is much more involved in this for us, than dollars and cents. It gives us encouragement to keep on keeping on.

Lend your prayers this way, that we may always stay humble and ready to do what the Lord would have us do.

But—Sacrificing Non-Essential Calls Helps Clear Lines for Vital War Calls

You bet it's pleasant to talk with friends over the telephone, just as it was pleasant to take those long Sunday afternoon rides when we had plenty of tires and gasoline.

But social calls must be handled over the same local telephone facilities as war calls. There is a definite limit to the number of calls these facilities can handle at the same time, and when more calls are made, some must wait.

With telephone equipment already burdened with war calls, non-essential calls may delay necessary calls, so we are requesting your voluntary co-operation to reduce unnecessary calling.

Under normal conditions we would expand our facilities to care for the increased volume of calls, but we cannot do that now because the needed materials are going into war weapons.

So won't you help by making fewer local calls? And when you must make a call, won't you please try to make it as short as possible?

Now Is Time To Protect Peach Crop

A recent check revealed that there are about ten times a normal crop of peach curculio this year. This curculio is the insect that causes wormy peaches.

There are many orchards in this county with a short peach crop. This means that the spray problem will be harder than usual this year because a peach lost now will be a greater loss than in past years. Prospects are good for a strong demand for peaches this year. For the above reasons it is felt that farmers are justified in taking extra precautions to see that they produce a marketable peach,

THINNING

There are some orchards and some trees in almost every orchard that should be thinned if fruit is to grow large. This is especially true of the Mayflower and Hiley varieties this year. There are 383 peaches per bushel when the diameter per peach is 1 3-4 inches, and 98 peaches per bushel when the diameter is 3 inches. Size is a very important factor in selling peaches. Peaches should be thinned to from 4 to 6 inches between each individual peach.

SPRAYS

Caution should be taken to see that all peaches receive a complete coverage of arsenic spray to prevent wormy peaches.

Brown rot is a disease of peaches in this county that is controlled by sulfur sprays.

Many growers have indicated that they have been getting some burning from their commercial spray mix. If this is true in your case, it is suggested that you add additional zinc sulphate and lime. This should be at the rate of 2 lbs. zinc sulphate mixed with 2 lbs. lime and added to each 50 gallon of spray. Add the zinc and lime to the 50 gallons of water and then add the commercial spray mixture.

Many growers have indicated that more sulfur is needed in their spray mixture to effectively control brown rot. When this is the case add wettable sulfur at the rate of 2 lbs. per 5C gallons of spray.

When zinc or sulfur is added to a commercial spray mixture CARE SHOULD BE TAKEN TO SEE THAT THE STRENGTH SPRAY IS NOT MADE TOO STRONG AND THAT THE FORMULA IS STILL BALANCED. By increasing zinc and sulfur according to the suggestions above no harm should be done.

For further information contact your County Agent.

High School Glee Club Entertains

Last Friday evening Mrs. Erle Ellis presented her vocal pupils and the High School Glee Club in a musical that was beautifully presented and enjoyed by a very large audience. The gym of the high school was decorated bounteously in roses and greenery with the wall behind the group covered with blue paper, sprinkled with stars to represent tre sky and the moon was cleverly placed so as to make it appear they were singing in the moonlight. The girls dresses were pastel colored evening dresses with each girl wearing a shoulder corsage and all of them looking very lovely and singing even lovelier.

For the closing number the girls changed to dresses of red white and blue and the boys joined them in rendering several patriotic numbers.

The whole musical was excellent and Mrs. Erle Ellis and everyone who helped with this May Festival at the closing of the school year are to be congratulated.

Home Of Ben Sessions Destroyed by Fire

Shortly after midnight last Wednesday night a disastrious fire enveloped the home of B. J. Sessions and completely distroyed the inside of the house. The walls and furnishing that was not burned was ruined by smoke and water. Mr. and Mrs. Sessions and and their daughter Ruth Sessions Waters, only occupants of the house barely escaped being burned to death. Mrs. Sessions and Ruth were burned sc badly about the face and arms that they were removed to the Central Alabama Hospital, after receiving first aid at one of the neighbors. Mrs Sessions remained in the hospital until Tuesday of this week when she was removed to the home of Mrs. W. G. Culp. Mrs. Waters burns seemed more serious and it is not known just when she will be allowed to leave the hospital.

According to Mr. Sessions the home was a complete loss and he is thankful that he did not lose his family.

Miss Mary Nell Sessions who is attending teachers college at Troy, was called home and remained here with her family until they were out of danger.

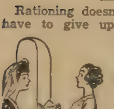
HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Tulip-Shaped Tomatoes Are Welcome for Luncheon
(See Recipes Below)

Spring Luncheon



Rationing doesn't mean that you have to give up entertaining entirely. True, you may be serving dishes you've never served before, but if you've tucked your thinking cap at the right angle, you'll find many things with company manners which won't take too many ration points.

Be clever with your knives in shaping fruits and vegetables into attractive shapes and sizes for your guests, and use bright colors for garnishes and table accessories. Add a good portion of your own charm to make your guests feel at ease, and Madame, your entertaining will be a success!

Tulip-like tomatoes are a picture on any spring luncheon table.

Tulip Tomatoes Filled With Shrimp.
(Serves 6)

6 tomatoes
1 cup finely diced celery
2 cups canned shrimp
¼ cup french dressing
⅓ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Dash of cayenne pepper

Cut tomatoes in sixths with sharp knife, cutting through outside of tomatoes, and just enough so that each section can be pulled back to form a petal. Marinate shrimp in french dressing for ½ hour. Drain, then combine with celery, mayonnaise, lemon juice and cayenne pepper. Chill. Sprinkle inside of tomatoes with salt, then fill with shrimp mixture. Garnish with whole shrimp.

Smart idea for salad plates is to include a small scoop of two or three different kinds of salad to make a picture plate. Here are two splendid ideas:

Lemon Sunshine Salad.
(Serves 6)

1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice or diluted vinegar
1 cup cold water
1 cup finely shredded cabbage
½ cup finely grated raw carrot
1 tablespoon minced onion

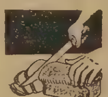
Dissolve lemon-flavored gelatin in boiling water. Add salt and lemon juice or diluted vinegar and cold water. Chill until mixture begins to thicken, then add remaining ingredients. Do not shred vegetables until just before using or a large loss of vitamins will result.

Pineapple-Cottage Cheese Salad.
(Serves 6)

¾ cup cottage cheese
¼ cup nuts, chopped
1 tablespoon pineapple juice
1 teaspoon sugar
6 slices pineapple, fresh or canned
Green or red pepper
Lettuce
¾ cup salad dressing

Lynn Chambers' Point-Saving Luncheon Menu
*Tulip-Tomato Salad
Brown Bread-Cream Cheese Sandwiches
Lemon Sherbet Tea
*Recipe Given

Combine cottage cheese, pineapple juice and sugar. Add salt to taste. Place a mound of cheese on top of each slice of pineapple, then garnish with diamond shapes from green and red pepper. Serve on crisp lettuce with dressing.



A dark brown bread, fruity and tasty is excellent to serve with salad luncheons. If your salad does not include cheese, serve its fragrant slices spread thinly with cream cheese and jam or make dainty little sandwiches with butter spread thinly, add a bit of lettuce for crispness.

Baked Brown Bread.
(Makes 1 14x9x2-inch loaf)

1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2½ teaspoons soda
1½ teaspoons salt
½ cup sugar
2 cups graham or whole wheat flour
⅓ cup shortening
1 cup seedless raisins
2 eggs, beaten
2 cups sour milk
½ cup molasses

Sift flour, salt, soda and sugar together. Add graham or whole wheat flour, mix well. Cut in shortening until mixture is like meal. Add raisins and mix. Beat eggs, add sour milk and molasses. Add dry ingredients and blend together thoroughly. Pour batter into a well-greased pan. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven.

A lot of good quality protein, vitamins and minerals come in that neat little package, the egg! Right now you'll be finding they're plentiful, so make good use of them:

Eggs Creole.
(Serves 4)

2½ cups tomatoes
1 small onion, chopped fine
½ green pepper, chopped
1 teaspoon green pepper
¾ cup fine bread crumbs
½ cup celery
4 eggs
¼ cup grated American cheese
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 bay leaf

Cook tomatoes, pepper, onion, celery and seasonings together with bay leaf for 10 minutes. Strain, add bread crumbs. Place sauce in individual casserole dishes. Break eggs on top and sprinkle with salt, pepper and grated cheese. Bake in a moderate oven until eggs have set and cheese is melted.

Oatmeal puts plenty of vitamin B_1 into diets and keeps you stepping with pep and energy the day long. Try these delicious cookies:

Honey Oatmeal Hermits.

2 eggs
⅔ cup lard or other fat
½ cup warm water
2 cups quick-cooking oatmeal
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup raisins or chopped dates

Cream honey and fat until smooth and creamy. Add well beaten eggs and oatmeal. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with warm water, saving only a small amount of flour to dredge raisins or dates. Blend in fruit and mix thoroughly. Drop by spoonfuls, 3 inches apart on a greased baking sheet. Bake 15 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 15 minutes.

Lynn Chambers welcomes you to submit your household queries to her problem clinic. Send your letters to her at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Don't forget to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Lynn Says:

Nice to Know: Waxed paper wrappers from bread are good for wiping the top of the lid top range.

Use grapefruit shells for serving fruit or seafood cocktail if you don't have enough dishes.

Iron rust may be quickly removed from white clothes if you squeeze lemon juice on the spot, sprinkle salt over it and place it in the sun. Repeat if the first application does not work.

Use warm water instead of cold for mixing flour for gravy. The use of a rotary egg beater helps smooth out lumps if they should occur.

You'll save time if you have an extra set of measuring spoons in the coffee container, and to keep a measuring cup in each container of flour, oatmeal and sugar. It saves time and encourages accuracy in measurements.

PETER AND JOHN PREACH TO SAMARITANS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:14-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest.—John 4:35.

The Church as it grows has problems, and so God calls leaders to serve Him in meeting and settling them for His glory and the good of the Church.

Philip had gone to Samaria (as a result of the first persecution of the Church) and there he had been used of God to bring many to faith in Christ. Now that the new groups of believers needed guidance and instruction, Peter and John were sent to help them (v. 14).

A proper understanding of, and attitude toward, God's gracious gift of salvation is of first importance. New converts must recognize that it is a gift: that it cannot be earned or bought, and that it issues in a life of service and testimony.

All three of these matters are covered in our lesson.

I. Spiritual Life and Power Is God's Gift to Believers (vv. 14-17).

The Holy Spirit was received by these early members of the Church by the laying on of the apostles' hands, but later He came directly into the believer's heart the moment he had faith in God. This is now our blessed privilege, and the provision for our every need as followers of Christ, to recognize the indwelling Holy Spirit.

What a glorious truth it is that the believer is indwelt by the Holy Spirit, He who is a divine person, not just a power or influence (I Cor. 6:19). Thus every believer, including the humblest as well as the greatest, has in him the One who gives spiritual life and power, who gives grace for holy living, and empowers for service.

The greatest power in all the world—the power of the infinite God—is thus available to every true and yielded believer, as God's free gift.

Gone then is all boasting of our own strength, and gone are all excuses for weak and careless living. The power and grace are His, and He gives them to us as His gift. Christian friend, are you allowing the Holy Spirit who dwells in you, to infill and use you as He will?

II. Spiritual Life and Power Cannot Be Bought by Works or Money (vv. 18-24).

Men of this world are so used to putting their trust in money that they come to think that one can buy anything. To them every man and every desirable thing must have its price. Let us be clear that there are men who cannot be bought, and that the best things in life bear no price tag. A mother's love, friendship, fellowship with God—priceless they are, but not for sale.

Above all let it be clear that eternal life, and the power of God the Holy Spirit, cannot be gained by piling up good works, nor by payment in the coin of this world.

Simon Magus wanted this power to improve his business as a magician. He made a very gross proposal, but one wonders whether he was any more to be censured than many in the Church today who are doing the same thing, though by more cultured and skillful methods.

Not only are there those who are trying to buy their own way into heaven, but also those who by holding the purse strings, try to control the message of the preacher. What about those who by their financial gifts seek to gain control of church organizations?

Their efforts are doomed to ultimate failure—God will see to that! —but in the meantime they do much harm to the cause of Christ. Many a church and pastor would like to rise up and say with Peter, "Thy money perish with thee."

III. Spiritual Life and Power Should Result in Testimony (v. 25).

Peter and John set the Samaritan Christians a good example as they went back to Jerusalem, by permitting the Holy Spirit to use them to testify and to teach the Word of the Lord in many of their villages.

One of the great hindrances to the carrying out of the great commission has been that Christians have received spiritual life, and even spiritual power, as though it were something for their own gratification or comfort. God saves us to serve Him in testimony and in life.

The Holy Spirit does not speak of Himself. He guides the believer in all truth (John 16:13), particularly the truth regarding Christ. The Spirit's primary interest is to glorify Christ (John 16:14).

It follows then that the Spirit-filled believer will be busy about speaking for Christ and glorifying His name. The Holy Spirit is ready to teach even the words to say that Christ may be lifted up and men be saved.

Peter and John, as good leaders of these new Samaritan believers, gave them by word and example a good foundation for growth in grace and usefulness to Christ.

Salvager — Any old rags, Mr. Smith?

Mr. Smith—Sorry, my wife is away in the country.

Salvager—Ah! Any empty bottles?

MEANEST PERSON

For three days, or rather nights, the cinema attendant had gone about her work gloomily. Then suddenly her companions were surprised to see her smiling cheerfully.

"What's happened?" they asked in surprise.

"Well, it's like this," she replied, with a chuckle, "that boy who chucked me has just come in with his new girl—one of those bottle blondes!—and I've put 'em in separate seats!"

Faith He's Right

"Drink," said the Irish preacher, "is the greatest curse of our country. It makes you quarrel with your neighbor. It makes you shoot at your landlord, and it makes you miss him."

Cuttin' the Rug

Mr. Smith—How come you're a musician?

Mr. Jones—Well, you see when I was about two years old I played on the rug.

BETTY HUTTON picked up a new honor the other day; the committee in charge of Dartmouth's spring party week asked her to attend as guest of honor, and told her that she'd been elected "the girl we would like to have Dartmouth co-eds resemble—if we had co-eds. You'll probably refuse the invitation," they added, "so will you kindly send us a dozen autographed pictures of yourself?" Betty certainly had to refuse; she's booked way ahead for pictures. The latest announcement is that she'll be teamed with Diana Lynn in "The Well-Groomed Bride."

A lot of people talk about doing something for American youth; Raymond Paige has gone ahead and done the young people a tremendous service by organizing the orchestra which you hear on the swell new radio program, "Salute to Youth," heard Tuesday evenings, on NBC. He has been working to assemble that orchestra for the last two years, and has done wonders with his young musicians.

There'll be a water ballet, staged by John Murray Anderson, in "Mr. Co-ed," so that Esther Williams can do her stuff. She's the former swimming champion who made her movie debut in "Andy Hardy's Double Life," with Mickey Rooney.

If you're interested in the radio actors who appear in the popular "Mr. District Attorney," you'll have a chance to see three of them in "Journey Into Fear"—Stefan Schnabel, who plays the ship's purser; Frank Readick, the henpecked husband, and Everett Sloane, the Turkish agent. In the radio serial they play practically everything.

Jon Hall, who has worn almost as many sarongs as Dorothy Lamour in pictures, gets a chance at a complete wardrobe, from polo outfit to white tie and tails, in "Lady in the Dark." He plays the movie star, the role Victor Mature did on the stage.

Every so often comes the report that a potential successor to Rudolph Valentino's fame as a romantic star has been discovered. The latest candidate is Arturo de Cordova, already a star in his native Mexico and in Latin America. You'll see him in "For Whom the Bell Tolls," when it's finally released, and C. B. DeMille is holding "Rurales" up till the public gets to know him.

Director Robert Z. Leonard has a "baby brigade" working for him in "The Man From Down Under"; there are 80 infants, who work in two shifts, which means that there are always 40 mothers, eight nurses and half a dozen supervisors from the board of education on hand. One end of the stage had been turned into a nursery. Charles Laughton, Binnie Barnes, Richard Carlson and Donna Reed find it a bit confusing. Leonard doesn't; he worked with 20 babies when he was making "Stand By for Action."

Six years ago Charles Bickford bought a South Sea island. He was telling Laraine Day about it—she's Cary Grant's leading lady in "Mr. Lucky," in which Bickford appears—and said that it's now in Japanese hands. So she suggested that he raffle it off and buy a war bond with the proceeds. A studio electrician won the island, gave it to his daughter as a wedding present.

Her Own Bolero

IT'S true, not every little girl can boast a bolero dress of her own! This one is something very special with its heart-shaped neck, huge pockets and bow-tied belt. The bolero itself might be worn with other dresses.

Pattern No. 8207c is in sizes 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 years. Size 4 bolero and dress take 2⅛ yards 35-inch material; 4 yards rick-rack.

Width Whittler

HERE is a real irresistible—a beautifully cut princess that whittles your width down to the minimum. It has such charm, too, with its neck-to-hem parade of bright rick-rack. Many a girl won't be able to put it down once she starts sewing on it! Sew and Save.

Pattern No. 8368 is in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 12 takes, with short sleeves, 3¾ yards 39-inch material; 12 yards rick-rack trimming.

Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

WHAT thou wilt, thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile, than hew to it with thy sword.—Shakespeare.

Education makes a people easy to lead, but difficult to drive; easy to govern, but impossible to enslave. — Lord Brougham.

Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.
—Henry W. Longfellow.

JUST JESTING

So Consistent!

"Does your husband always live up to his promise of his courtship days?"

"Always. In those days he said he was not good enough for me, and he has been proving it ever since."

Relapse Coming

Young man in hospital—Nurse, I've fallen in love with you. If I get well I'll have to leave, so I don't want to get well.

Pretty young nurse—Don't worry, you won't. The doctor's in love with me, too, and he saw you kissing me this morning.

Quite Doubtful

"What is political economy, dad?"

"To be perfectly candid, son I can't tell you. Sometimes I think there isn't any such thing."

Convinced Him

Jim was accused of stealing a pig. He secured the services of a lawyer and was acquitted. Later the lawyer seeing him alone, said, "Come, Jim, tell the truth. You did steal that pig, didn't you?" "Well," replied Jim, "I thought I stole dat pig, but after hearing you talk, I don't believe I did, sah."

Compensating

Doctor (after examining patient): "I don't like the looks of your husband, Mrs. Brown."

Mrs. Brown: "Neither do I, Doctor, but he's good to our children."

Fair Question

"I say, waiter, is this peach or apple pie?"

"Can't you tell by the taste?"

"No."

"Then what difference does it make?"

When armored knights met, it was customary for each knight to raise the visor of his helmet as a means of identification. This gesture has come down through all armies in the form of the salute. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. With men in the Army, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard, actual sales records in their service stores show that Camel is the favorite. It's one of the favorite gifts with service men. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Washington, D. C.

May I express to newspaper publishers our thanks and appreciation for the truly remarkable contribution they are making to the Second War Loan. We feel quite certain that never before has any cause received such complete and effective support from the newspapers of the country, and we are grateful for it.

H MORGENTHAU, JR
Secretary of the Treas

. Washington, D C

Dear Friend Tucker:

I will appreciate the use of your excellent paper as a medium to sincerely thank and heartily congratulate not only County Chairman Reynolds and his associate. F J Callen, but all of the fine people of Chilton who cooperated with them and contributed towards this great success of the Bond campaign .

All concerned should be proud indeed, and I want them to know that their Congressman is very proud of them.

Thanking you in advance, and with kind personal regards to you and yours, I am,

Yours sincerely,
PETE JARMAN

Birmingham, Ala

Dear Mr. Tucker:

I wish to use this means to express to you and all employees of ahe Chilton County News my warm and sincere appreciation for the splendid cooperation that you are giving the War Savings Program.

The Alabama Press has given the War Saving Program real and genuine support from the very beginning, with but few exceptions. This cooperation has aided us materially in making an outstanding record for the state.

The officials in Washington have been high in their praise of the Alabama press for the outstanding performance in the War Savings Program. Secretary Morgenthau has personally expressed his delight and satisfaction.

The Second War Loan Drive has been completed. We again return to our regular War Saving Program plugging away day in and day out in an effort to keep our people investing regularly and systematically. In our continuing program I know that we can count on you and the Chilton County News to continue the good work.

I am urging all county chairmen to give the newspapers every cooperation in securing sponsors for the advertising whirh are prepared by the Treasury Department for the press.. I do sincerely hope that each one will carry out my wishes in this espect.

Let me say again that I af grateful to you for the splendid cooperation you are giving the War Saving Program.

Cordially andsincerely,
Joseph H. Lyons, State Adm.
War Savings Staff of Ala.

Associate State Adm.

The Chilton County News,
Dear Editor;

We must not forget our bond sale. I do not know what the quota is at this time as I have not been able to read my mail since last Friday, a week ago. I have been suffering a good deal with my right leg. However, I am some better at this time. I hope to be up in a few days. It has been hurting me to drive a car for several years and during our campaign I had no one to drive for me and I could not afford to stop the last few days of the campaign and I was very anxious for us to make our quota and enough to have a bomber named for Chilton County. We did sell enough bonds tc be entitled t ohave a bomber named for Chilton County.

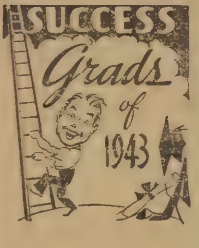
I am very sorry that I was not able to take the program to all the schools in the County as all the school children and teachers were so responsive and worked so hard in the campaign but I just was not able to go to all the schools.

I am sorry that I was not able to continue as Chairman because of my health. However, it does not mean I am going to slacken my interest in the War effort. I promise now that I will put every effort that my health will permit to help the new chairman whoever he is. Mr. Clement, the Associate State Administrator, will be in Clanton in a few days to see about a new chairman. We must all give every effort and our best thought to get the best Chairman we can for this job and then each and every one of us must not let our enthusiasm slacken because we will all be needed to carry the campaign on to success and my sincere hope is that Chilton County will continue to fill every quota and every requirement asked of us by our government. We all ought to feel proud of our brave boys that recently won such a great victory on the African front. As long as there is a Jap, Italian and German soldier in the field we must all do our very best

The campaign has been a great pleasure to me and I want to say that I talked to every class of people in different parts of the County and every single person that I talked tc about bonds was pleasant and considerate and not one person that I approached said they did not have time to hear what I had to say.

From the depth of my heart my sincere wish is that we will go on and soon win the Victory.

Respectfully yours,
L. H. Reynolds.



In what way can we serve you? If there is any way please let us know, and we will do our level best to make our service better. For the best is none too good for the boy and girl graduates of 1943.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Norman Glasscock, small son of Mr and Mrs. M. R. Glasscock, narrowly escaped death Monday afternoon when he ran out of an alley into the path of a furniture truck driven by Rev. Ed Wilkins. The only thing that saved the life of the child was the quick thinking of the driver and the good brakes of the truck. Norman was nearly scared to death when the truck come to a stop within a few inches of him. He practically frozei lto the street. But he was no more scared than was some twenty folks who witnessed it from the sidewalk. A terrible tradegy was averted by a careful driver.

Why do not the Cafe owners stop the loud playing of the "juke box" and the ribald laughter in the cafe' here during the busy hours. The Lord only knows what keeps folks from choking to death on the food that they eat with all the noise that goes on while they are trying to eat it. The day is past, we suppose, when the thought of others came first, and you went into a meal to relax and enjoy your food. Now you snatch a bite between bumps, while the organ grinds, "Beer Barrel Polka," etc. and on, and on, and on.

Wonder what Mrs. Erle Ellis's head felt like the other night after using it all evening as a baton to direct her girls at the musical. Our hat is off to her. She did a swell job ... S. E. What You Buy With WAR BONDS

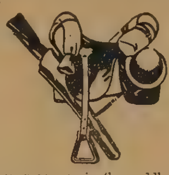
The tradition of American cavalry threads back to Indian warfare days and although modern armies are largely motorized today, the cavalry still plays an important role. Sturdy, well trained horses and excellent equipment and trappings are necessary.



When men are in the saddle for hours, their saddles, saddle rolls and other equipment must be made to stand the wear. Complete with carbine and helmets, the equipment for the cavalryman runs into hundreds of dollars. You can help provide this with your War Bond purchases. At Gragg Field

D. D. Black of Montgomery flew his ship in from Brewton where he has been on Civil Air Patrol for several days.

He was enroute to Alex City where his ship will have an inspecton and then return to Brewton for further Patrol duty.

Gragg Field has two ships on duty out of Brewton the other ship is owned and being flown by J. A. Peterson of Montgomery.

Delphin Popwell is also down on the Coast with his ship dong Patrol duty for CAP.

Mr. Howard of Wayside, Gardens Thorsby, was a yistor this week. He donated a truck load of shrubbery to the airport and we expect to receive same within a few days. We thank Mr. Howard for his generous donation and also his interest in helping beautify Gragg Field.

More interest is being shown each day in furthering the play grounds. We hope by the time summer is here in full blast you'll be able to enjoy the summer evenings with us.

WOMEN AT WAR

Mom

"Sausages for breakfast! Sausages for breakfast! I can smell 'em!" Small Joe came tumbling downstairs fastening the belt of his shorts as he came. He made a beeline for the kitchen. Pop was already sitting at the table, reading the paper, while Mom held the handle of the frying-pan over the stove. Small Joe came close and sniffed the delicious smoke, wriggling all over with early-morning joy.

"Better be thankful for them while you can still get them." One glance at Mom's face told small Joe this was one of her tight-lipped days. "Not a drop of coffee in the house, and no sugar left to put in it if there was. Some war!" Small Joe kept still.

"Letter for you, son," Pop said in his quiet voice. Small Joe made a leap for his place at table. There it was, a private personal letter for him alone, propped against his milk glass.

"Hey, Pop! It's from brother!" Small Joe was pulling the envelope apart and diving into the contents. "Hey, look what he sent me." He passed over an oblong of thick, crinkly paper while he leaned over the sheet of writing-paper.

"A twenty-five dollar War Bond," Pop said slowly. Mom turned and looked at it over Pop's shoulder, with the frying-pan in her hand.

"Listen what he says. 'How are you doing, kid? Hurry and grow up so you can help me slap the Japs. Aren't you most big enough to get into the Army? Here's something for you in your name. Let's the whole family gang up and help to win this war.'"

Pop and Mom were silent. But small Joe didn't notice that. He was full of his letter and his War Bond.

"Gee, Pop, in six years I could get into the Army, couldn't I, Pop? Gee, Pop, I want to be a soldier like brother and fight in this war. Gee, isn't that bond nifty? Look, it was issued in Honolulu. It's mine."

But Pop was looking at Mom and Mom was looking at Pop. There were tears in Mom's eyes. She shook her head sharply. Pop reached out and patted her hand gently.

"Well, can't let our soldier boy beat us to buying War Bonds, can we, old lady?" was all he said.

She shook her head again. "I guess if he can give up his job and . . . and go off to war I can do some fighting back at home," she said in a queer voice. Small Joe looked up at her in surprise. She saw him looking at her and spoke sharply. "Well, Joe. We're about ready to eat. Say grace."

Small Joe folded his hands and bent his head as he had been taught.

"Oh Lord, we thank thee for this food and all thy bountiful gifts . . ."

"Amen," Pop said.

"Amen," Mom said. "Now eat your good sausages."

Isabella

We are glad to report that there is no serious illness here at the present Everybody seems to feel good and farmers are very busy, especially since the nice rain Saturday night.

Conference was held Sunday at Mulberry for the purpose of choosing a pastor and Rev. Stuckey was unanimously elected. Mulberry's fortunate in securing one who resides in the community. Rev. Stuckey moved his family here several weeks ago, unaware that Mulberry needed a pastor After prayer consideration he agreed to serve our church two Sunday's each month. (2nd and 4th).

Sunday School and BAC are increasing in membership and interest and there's always room for others. So come be with us everytime you can.

We greatly appreciate the visitors at church last Sunday who so ably added to the service.

Four of our boys in service were at Church Sunday. They were Mitchell and Melvin White of the Army and James and Elree Calfee of the Navy. all of whom are at home on leave.

Lt. O. F. Davenport has also been at home on furlough. They all look grand in their uniforms and we rejoice with their parents and families and pray for the time when they shall come home to stay.

Mrs. Vera Whte Griffin spent the week end with home folks.

Mr. and Mrs. Quinton White of Montgomery spent part of last week here.

Mr and Mrs Judson Calfee of Birmingham spent a week with parents

Lt Lona Cummings spent a week at home on convalescent leave.

The Grammar school play was enjoyed last Thursday night by a large audience.

The final meeting of P.-T. A. takes place this week.

The WMU held its regular monthly meeting last Tuesday.

Ruth Ford Circle meets Tuesday of this week with Mrs. Turner.

Circle 2 meets Thursday with Mrs Davenport.

The evening school is in progress each Tuesday and Thursday from 8 to 10 o'clock, under the direction of Mrs. J. H. Camp. Some 18 or more ladies are enrolled.

Fredell Veasey left for the armed forces Monday of this week. Several more will leave at the close of school this week.

Graduates 1943 Three CHEERS

Graduates of 1943, accept our sincere compliments and congratulations. We have abundant reason to be proud of you, and if we can ever serve you in any capacity please remember that we are yours to command.

What's Doing At Isabella High

The baccalaureate sermon was held last Sunday afternoon in the school auditorium. The sermon was delivered by the Rev J. Titus Aldridge of Thorsby.

The Seniors marched slowly in to the strains of "Bells of Saint Marie." With the seniors also joining in, the choir sang "Onward Christain Soldiers" and "Holy, Holy, Holy." The service was brief but impressive all the way through.

The commencement exercises will be held this Friday night. Guest speaker for the occasion is to be Hon. G C. Walker. At this time, also the valedictory address will be delivered by Leone Cleckler and the salutatory address will be delivered by Louise Keen.

The Isabella Football schedule for next year has been partly worked out Here is the five scheduled games:

Oct. 1, Centerville—There.
Oct. 8 Clanton—There.
Oct. 15 Wetumpka—There.
Oct. 29 Maplesville—There.
Nov. 19 Maplesville—Here.

Efforts are being made to secure four more games for the year.

Jesse Culp, representing the local F. F. A. was elimnated in the semi-finals contest in public speaking held at Autaugaville High School Friday afternoon of last week. Ramer High chapter took first place, Isabella second place, and Greensboro third. The local contestant spoke on "The Future of Farming."

The Grammar School Department closed its doors for another year last Friday. A large crowd witnessed and enjoyed its dramatic program Friday night.

High school will follow this example Friday of this week, when it will have "wound up" all its tests and work for the year. Final tests are scheduled for the first four days in the week.

Mars Hill

Our Sunday School was small Sunday. We want everyone that is interested to come and help clean the cemetery Friday, May 14. Bring your tools and lunch and spend the day. We are going to fix the graves and clean the church too.

Don't forget the Fourth Sunday in this month is our annual All Day Singing. We are going to have the two blind singers thaa were at Clanton singing with us, and other good singers.

Miss Leafie Smith of Birmingram spent the week-end at home.

Pvt. Cletus Langston has returned to Fort Cronkhite, California after a week at home.

Sgt Lee Cofer of Panama City, Fla spent the week-end with his family and friends.

Cpl Richard Gibson has returned to Camp Shelby, Miss., after spending several days at home.

Mr and Mrs Huey Waldrop visited Mr and Mrs W. P. Cofer Saturday

Mr and Mrs J C Scott and family also Mr and Mrs Chester Cofer and son were the dinner guests of Mr and Mrs C. W. Scott, Sunday.

Mrs Belton Vickery is doing nicely after a serious burn last week.

—Buy Bonds—Bye, Bye Axis—

PATROLMAN PROPST TO GIVE DRIVING TEST

Beginning Saturday, May 15, Ed Propst, Highway Patrolman stationed here will take over the duties of Preston Ellis who has, in the past, come to Clanton each Saturday to give driving tests

However. Saturday will be the last day on which these tests will be given on this day of the week. Starting Monday, May 17, tests will also be given for drivers licenses and each Monday thereafter until furthur notice.

Remember this: Monday, May 17 and each Monday thereafter will be the day for driving examinations.

Strong Pressure From U. S. Second Army Forces Axis to Last Tunisia Cover; House Approves 'Pay as You Go' Tax; 43 Nations to Discuss Food Problems

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Testifying before the Truman defense investigating committee, Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson, right, revealed that a truce had been arranged in his feud with Rubber Administrator William Jeffers. Long at odds over a battle for priorities for equipment for aviation gasoline and synthetic rubber plants, Patterson and Jeffers were brought together by Ferdinand Eberstadt, former WPB official, in a Washington hotel room. They agreed to make a personal inspection of the gasoline and rubber plants, working out arrangements for breaking bottlenecks in either program.

PAY AS YOU GO:

75% Forgiven

As the shadows lengthened on Capitol Hill, 313 congressmen ended a hectic day of debate by passing the Robertson-Forand pay-as-you-go measure, forgiving 75 per cent of the 1942 income taxes and putting all taxpayers on a current basis.

After rejecting the Ruml plan as embodied in the Carlson bill, which would have forgiven all taxes, and voting to recommit the house ways and means committee measure, which would have applied 1941 rates to 1942 incomes, the congressmen acted on the Robertson-Forand proposal.

Under the Robertson-Forand bill, which went to the senate following house action, all taxpayers would be exempted from paying the 6 per cent normal and first surtax of 13 per cent on their 1942 incomes. Those with taxable income over the 13 per cent surtax, however, would have to pay balance of the 1942 tax. In that case, their first two payments this year would be applied against their remaining liability, and if they still had a balance outstanding, they could clean it up in two later payments.

As to 1943 taxes, the Robertson-Forand bill provides for a 20 per cent withholding tax against wages and salaries after exemptions have been estimated. Of this amount, 3 per cent would be taken out for the Victory tax, the tax being reduced from 5 per cent.

TUNISIA:

Yanks Are Coming

Yielding to strong pressure from the Second American army of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Axis troops fell back to their last stronghold in northern Tunisia, there to await the final assault of the Allied forces. Even as they were being regrouped for the decisive battle, American units pressed forward against their fortified positions in the mountains.

The Axis took up their new positions along the last perimeter of defenses ringing the great naval base of Bizerte, after Yankee infantry had cleaned them out of the strategic hill country to the west.

Advancing under the cover of heavy artillery, American troops braved [illegible] scathing machine gun and mortar fire to crawl up the scraggly slopes and ferret the enemy from their entrenchments. Then they swept into Mateur, strategic rail and road junction 18 miles south of Bizerte.

In the central sector, the Axis maintained their massed armored columns to stand off the British First army along the level approaches to the gateway of Tunis.

Meeting Place

Having finally agreed to get together, Generals Charles De Gaulle and Henri Giraud, the anti-Axis French leaders, were at odds as to where to meet. Fearing public demonstrations of De Gaullist sympathy in North African cities where the Fighting French chieftain is strongest, Giraud had been angling to hold the meeting in some secluded location.

SUPREME COURT:

No Tax on Evangelism

Reversing its stand of one year ago, the United States Supreme court ruled as invalid all forms of licensing the spreading of the written and spoken word.

Particularly, the court attacked the collection of license fees by four cities from Jehovah's Witnesses for distribution of its religious tracts. Such fees, it said, were a violation of the first constitutional amendment guaranteeing speech freedom.

RUSSIA:

Nazis Repulsed

Nazi attacks against Russian lines around Novorosissk were repulsed with losses, the Reds claimed, and all of the enemy's efforts to enlarge its bridgehead in the vicinity were checked.

While ground fighting flared, Russian airmen were active over the Caucasian front, shooting down 54 Nazi planes in swirling dogfights west of Krasnodar.

Minor artillery duels were reported all along the rest of the huge battle-line. The Nazis announced Allied planes again raided East Prussia, one being shot down.

NAVAL BATTLE:

Convoy Scattered

Happening upon a Jap convoy northwest of the Aleutian islands, a daring American naval task force closed in for an attack even as strong Japanese units bore down off its flank.

After breaking up the convoy which included three transports headed for Attu and Kiska, the American force, led by Rear Adm. C. H. McMorris, then wheeled toward home, and with three destroyers running interference, maneuvered clear of the enemy fleet.

Racing in close to hold off the Jap fleet with torpedo fire, the destroyers threw up smoke screens to cover their withdrawal after the attacks. Checked by the fire, the enemy stood by while the Americans slipped through.

Despite the intense barrage of the heavy Jap cruisers and destroyers which fell within the proximity of the American ships, the U. S. units emerged with no material losses.

FOOD CONFERENCE:

43 Nations to Meet

Representatives from 43 nations will meet at Hot Springs, Va., next week for the Allied food conference.

The conference will revolve around American proposals for achieving more efficient production and wider distribution of the world's food.

Plans also will be discussed for restoration of agricultural production in Europe after occupation by Allied forces.

The conference will be wholly exploratory, it was said, with the different representatives laying the conference recommendations before their respective governments for individual adoption.

SUBS:

Japs Efficient

According to Allied spokesmen, Japanese submarine activity in the South Pacific has equaled that of the Germans in the Atlantic.

In both cases, Allied naval leaders said enemy U-boats have sunk about 2 per cent of total shipping.

Using 2 per cent as a basis, the Allies have lost 210,000 tons during the five months of the Tunisian campaign. No actual figures were given for the Pacific theater.

The Japs put out a claim recently that they had sunk a 12,000-ton tanker, a 12,000-ton troopship and an 8,000-ton freighter.

INVASION:

Nazis to Hit England?

According to reports received in Madrid from authoritative diplomatic and military sources, Adolf Hitler may try to invade England and end the war after stabilizing the Russian front.

Allied circles accepted the reports with a goodly grain of salt, however. There was a feeling that the rumors may have been planted to confuse Allied preparations for a second front in Europe.

COAL TRUCE:

Time to Dicker

Following the establishment of a 15-day truce in the bitter coal strike, Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes ordered the nation's 3,850 mines to shift to a six-day week or suffer cancellation of price increases recently granted them to cover the expense of such operations.

Under the miners' present contract, they are paid time-and-half for all work over 35 hours on the sixth day. The additional pay they receive under Ickes' order was said not to need the approval of the War Labor board.

Reached by the government with the United Mine Workers' chieftain, John L. Lewis, the truce assures continued coal production and opportunity for additional negotiation with the operators.

From the first, Lewis gave no indication of backing down on his demands for a $2 a day wage increase; for time spent in the mines traveling to and from the coal faces, and unionization of minor bosses.

At the same time, Lewis continued to hammer at the War Labor board's formula for limiting wage increases to 15 per cent over 1941 levels.

MYSTERY:

House on R Street

Everybody in Washington is talking about the house on R street. A big, red, Georgian mansion, almost as spacious as a hotel, it is the residence of one John Monroe, also known as Monroe Kaplan, business man and manufacturers' representative.

"Sometimes the food's terrible," Monroe said in talking about the now famous parties held in the house, "but my guests don't come for food, but for interesting conversation."

Topping the list of Monroe's guests were Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox; Maj. Gen. Levin H. Campbell, chief of army ordnance; Senator Warren R. Austin of Vermont; and Representative James H. Morrison of Louisiana. Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire was honored at the house with a party celebrating his recovery from an illness.

Rubber Administrator William Jeffers said he had received many invitations to break bread at the hospitable house, but refused them all. Jeffers said that Monroe was trying to promote an important man in the United States senate for President.

CHINA:

Fight for Rail Line

Continuing in their reported campaign to obtain full grasp of the railroad system of China to build up a communication line from the Asiatic mainland to Japan, select Nipponese troops continued hammering at strategic Chinese positions.

While the Japs claimed to have encircled 20,000 Chinese troops along the Peiping-Hankow railroad, the Chinese asserted that their troops repulsed persistent Jap attacks.

Japanese efforts to drop picked troops behind Chinese lines by parachute failed, the Chinese said, when their forces wiped out these units in hard fighting. All along the Taiheng mountains where the battle raged, the Chinese held their ground in hand-to-hand warfare.

In Washington, D. C., the army announced that Gen. Edgar E. Glenn of the 14th air force in China was wounded by bomb fragmentation when Japanese bombers struck at an American base.

TRAGEDY:

In Iceland

Tragedy on the bleak island of Iceland claimed the life of the eighth American general to be killed or missing in this war when Lieut. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, commander of all American forces in the European theater, crashed to his death. With the general and sharing his fate was Methodist Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, on an inspection tour of religious facilities in U. S. military bases on behalf of 31 American Protestant denominations.

A former cavalry officer who transferred to the air force during the last World war, General Andrews was foremost among the early advocates for a strong American air arm. He was partly credited with the development of the famous Flying Fortress.

MISCELLANY:

STORMY: Stormy weather accounted for some of the Allied losses in the recent big Japanese bombing raid on Port Darwin, Australia. Strong winds developed during the dog fights and forced some of the fliers into the ocean.

VISITOR: Coming as a visitor, with no hand out, Eduard Benes, chief of the exiled Czechoslovak government, will visit the U. S. in May, confer with President Roosevelt and make three speeches in Chicago.

PROFITS: Profits of British shipbuilders constructing warships reached 80 per cent in one instance, with the average aggregating between 20 and 30 per cent.

ESCAPE: The entire crew of 42 of a medium-sized U. S. merchant vessel recently survived torpedoing in the North Atlantic. They took to lifeboats in a calm sea.

MORE ROOM: Three types of caskets have been lengthened three inches on order of WPB which took the action after a storm of criticism greeted an earlier directive to limit coffins to six feet.

TO YOUR Good Health

HEAD INJURIES

For a number of years I treated all the injured athletic students of a large university. Fortunately, most of the injuries were cuts, bruises, dislocations and occasional fractures, with not infrequent head injuries causing unconsciousness. For many years also I treated all the injured amateur and professional boxers and wrestlers in which head injuries were not uncommon. While most cases of head concussion recovered consciousness in minutes and often seconds, I often wondered if I made them take sufficient rest before resuming athletic activities.

This whole question of how soon after a blow that has caused unconsciousness, the patient should resume his regular occupation, has been studied by Dr. H. Cairns: some of his findings are recorded in the Proceedings of the Royal Society of Medicine.

"In deciding when a patient should be fit to return to work, it is necessary to bear in mind the severity of his injury, and the best yardstick at present available is the length of time he was unconscious after the injury. The shortest time in which ability to carry out full work may be expected to return is as follows:

"If unconscious for five minutes to one hour—four to six weeks.

"If unconscious one to 24 hours—six to eight weeks.

"If unconscious one to seven days—two to four months.

"If unconscious over seven days—four to eight months.

"If patient was very tired when injured, more time should be given. The type of work must also be considered as a simple task may be resumed earlier than one which calls for much brain effort.

"Almost every patient who makes a full recovery from concussion suffers at a certain stage of his recovery from headaches. In mild cases headaches usually occur early and disappear, whereas in more severe cases headaches appear much later, in fact after patient is well enough to return home though not to work."

America Becoming Near-Sighted Nation

There was a time when a man or woman wearing glasses was thought to be a student or one who did a great deal of reading. Glasses were almost a badge of scholarship. It was a rare thing to see a child with glasses and many wearing glasses were doing so to correct a squint or crossed eye.

Within the last 20 years there has been a great increase in the number of men and women wearing glasses and glasses on school children no longer attract attention.

Most of us will likely attribute this increase in the number wearing glasses to the examination of the eyes of school children and to the education by departments of health of the importance of having the vision corrected in those afflicted with shortsightedness, longsightedness and astigmatism (objects not seen distinctly). The last war also taught the value of acquiring proper glasses as many men were rejected for poor eyesight.

However, we learn from the Better Vision institute in one of their monthly releases that America is becoming a nearsighted nation. Every 10 years the figures show that vision is becoming narrower and human eyes, which from the beginning of history had been adapted to far vision, have now their sharpest vision when fixed on near objects not very far from the end of the nose.

What is causing the population to become nearsighted?

Some research workers on the eye state that (a) living conditions today finds man looking at "near" objects instead of "far" or distant objects, and (b) nearsightedness seems to be handed down from parents to their children.

Today, education has become almost universal and children start to read at an early age. Occupations are indoors for the most part and modern living conditions require almost continuous close vision.

We should, therefore, be kind to our eyes, and if our eyes need help make sure that they get help, and the right kind of help.

NEW YORK.—For a man who once had hardly two coppers to click in a patched pants pocket Ralph W. Gallagher is singularly carefree as he tosses a few hundred million into the national war kitty. The permanent royalty-free transfer to the government of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey's patent rights covering Buna-S rubber must be worth all of that.

Once Had Hardly Two Coppers; He Now Flips Millions

It is, of course, not precisely Gallagher's own money, and it isn't cold cash. But any auditor would mark it down as real money, and certainly as president of Standard, Gallagher must feel a sort of ownership.

And every once in a while he must feel like pinching himself and asking: "Can this be I?" Because when he started he certainly never saw the high peak which is now his satisfying perch. It was then that he had, more or less, the patched pants. He was 16, his mother was newly a widow, and he was hunting a job. He got it with one of the units of Standard Oil sprouting those days wherever a job-hunter looked. Shortly he was working 12 hours a day and going to school on the side. Then he switched to another unit, the East Ohio Gas company, and by and by was president. The final pay-off was the presidency of New Jersey Standard a few months ago.

The election capped a climb for 47 years in which he had never once been off the master payroll. On the way he came to be a foremost authority on oil and natural gas production, and lost a little hair.

IF THE Bermuda conference on refugees is looking for a good place to domicile the homeless subjects of their deliberations, the British spokesman might submit a few firstrate suggestions. He has traveled in Asia Minor, the United States, Canada, South America, India and Africa.

He May End Up The Famous Son Of Famous Father

He is Richard Kidston Law, son of that political rocket, the late Andrew Bonar Law who was only a little less great than Lloyd George in the last war and the days of pointless peace that followed.

The present Law is fair proof that in this well-advertised attempt to do something for the road-weary victims of Hitler's catastrophe, Britain is really trying. He is not the stuffed frock coat that might have been sent to the parley. His title of chairman of the British delegation is not his best. He is also parliamentary undersecretary of state to foreign affairs; one of Churchill's stalwarts.

A youngest son, Law is only a lively 42 years old, married, with two sons not enough grown for the current fighting. His formal education came from Oxford, but his travels added to this. For a time he lived in the United States and worked as a newspaper reporter, in New York and Philadelphia.

Unlike Dickens, he likes Americans in their native state and in England now he keeps an eye out for United States soldiers. He takes them sailing and hiking. They are, he has reported, "doing nicely." So is he.

ELMER DAVIS used to sell a nightly five minutes of his cracker-barrel twang to a radio sponsor for something north of $25,000, something south of $100,000 a year. Now the senate judiciary committee is to get hours of it free. The committee figures the ostensibly pure reading matter of the Office of War Informaton may contain a deleterious trace of propaganda and calls on Director Davis to help with an analysis.

He Can Bring Off Page 1 Research Or Blow Up Lab

Davis is no poor analyst, by himself. He has been for years one of the liveliest reporters of current affairs. Not counting some drugstore fiction, his 11 books and endless short pieces all took somebody, or something, apart.

He is 53 years old, the son of an Indiana banker. He and the judiciary committee could bring off some first-class research. They could blow up the works, too.

Davis is gray-haired, but black of eyebrows, round-faced, self-assured, and in politics regularly left of center. He likes bow ties, gray suits, Persian cats. A sound game of bridge is his most violent exercise. He reads everything, including Latin.

Before OWI Davis used to live with his wife, a son, a daughter, part time in a Manhattan apartment, part time in a storied old shebang at Mystic, Conn. He was a Rhodes scholar and good newspaper man in New York before he swung to free-lance writing and, finally, radio.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Airplanes now transport workers and supplies to South American rubber forests in hours. Until war placed rubber on the "have not" list in the U. S., weeks and months were consumed in carrying supplies to the rubber tappers.

When one considers that for more than 20 years car and truck owners were encouraged to abuse their tires, through various forms of road hazard guarantees, it must be acknowledged that a laudable patriotism is being shown by them now in conserving their rubber supplies.

Remember the days when 20 pounds pressure per cross section inch was the standard inflation recommendation! Rough riding and flats were the order of the day.

A new highway has been constructed to the Mercapata gold mines in Peru. But rubber is the most important item being carried over it.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox, Jr. March 11 Lieut. Bulkeley showed the squadron their secret orders. They were to carry General MacArthur's party and some additional personnel to the southern islands where they would be met by transport planes which would carry General MacArthur to his new headquarters. When Kelly arrived at the rendezvous the others were missing.

CHAPTER X

"I had an idea where they would be, and I explained. Bulkeley, I was sure, would take no chances with women and a child aboard. Of course he'd seen the Japanese signal fire the night before. Planes might be out spotting us for destroyers, and as soon as dawn broke Bulkeley undoubtedly had made for the nearest of those other Cuyos—picking one from his chart (we'd never been here before) which was surrounded by reefs and water so shallow that no destroyer could venture within gun range or even within sight. There he would wait all day, if not until dusk, at least until he thought the danger of spotting planes was past, before coming to join us here.

"So at 8:37 we dropped a hook in the cove and I sent two men ashore with semaphore flags to climb the island's single five-hundred-foot hill and stand continuous watch—for the other three boats of course, but particularly for Japs.

"At 5:30, when we figured any spotting planes would have had to head back for home, I was about to pull our lookouts from the hill and get under way when they wigwagged down that they saw a ship—apparently friendly, maybe an MTB. I picked it up with my binoculars and presently made out the 32 boat, which soon tied up alongside us.

"It was this boat, remember, which had been repaired after its explosion. The cook had been blown into Sisiman Cove. During the night its struts started coming loose, so they could use only one or two of their three engines, and they, like us, had lost touch with the other boats in the night. But instead of falling far behind the flagship, they had somehow managed, in the darkness, to get out in front of it.

"In the first gray light of dawn, their stern lookout reported a strange ship—gaining on them. Looked like a Jap destroyer. Now an MTB in good condition can outrun any warship afloat. But the 32 boat was hobbling on two engines, so although he was running full throttle, its commander wasn't surprised that the strange craft kept gaining. In order to lighten his boat and pull away, he dumped six hundred gallons of gasoline in drums over the side, but still the enemy was closing on him. There seemed nothing to do now but fight before the destroyer opened with its 3-inch guns. They readied two torpedoes and turned dauntlessly for the attack, to discover just in time that the strange pursuing craft was the 41 boat—their own flagship with General MacArthur aboard.

"So here they were—loaded down to the water line with seasick and puzzled generals. Just at this point there was a rising roar from seaward, and the 41 boat came around the point, Bulkeley and General MacArthur's party."

"We'd lost sight of you a few hours before dawn," said Bulkeley, "when you stopped to clean your strainers. I went on ahead because I wanted to get as deep as possible into the Cuyo Islands before sunrise.

"As the sky pinkened I headed for the nearest and best—it was one of the prearranged crosses on the map. It wasn't much of an island—only a quarter of a mile wide—but it had plenty of shallow water to keep off Jap destroyers.

"Lying at anchor, some of the crew picked off a little sleep as we rolled gently in the sunshine. Presently the General came on deck; he was a fine figure in his camel's-hair coat and gold hat, frowning a little as he squinted in the sunshine at the water and white sand. Then Mrs. MacArthur and the little boy and his Chinese amah came up to sit in wicker chairs in the sunshine. It was too bad little Arthur couldn't have played on the beach, but I told the General no one should go ashore. Because if dive bombers came over and spotted us, we would have to get the hell out of that cove quick, leaving even the lookout behind, and out into open water where we could dodge and twist.

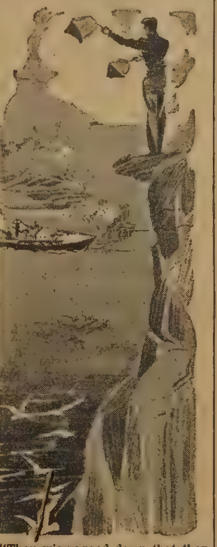
"I figured the morning would be the dangerous time for bombers, if they knew we had slipped out, so by two o'clock I felt it was safe to get under way, and we threaded down through the little shoaly channels between the islands, which would defy a destroyer or cruiser to follow, approaching the last one, which was our general rendezvous. In the distance I could see the other two boats also heading for it, and when we arrived, Kelly in the 34 boat was already there and waiting.

"Then there was the problem of what to do about the 32 boat, which had dumped most of its gas at dawn, and couldn't proceed much farther at high speed.

"This was a rendezvous not only for our four MTB's, but also for General MacArthur's second means of escape—a submarine. It had all been carefully worked out, and the submarine would bob up in this cove tomorrow. Had we been attacked or broken down, the General could have left us here, and continued his trip on down to Australia by submarine.

"General MacArthur, Admiral Rockwell and Lieutenant Bulkeley talked about the night's plans—the advisability of continuing with us tonight or going by submarine," went on Lieutenant Kelly. "The Admiral was for staying with us, but the General was undecided. The afternoon trip had been rough, and Bulkeley had warned the night would be rougher. Yet as we lay there in the cove, the sea seemed calm enough, and the sky gave no hint of bad weather. So on the assurance of the Admiral that it would be good weather, the General decided they'd continue with us.

"Then, as Bulkeley had said, there was the problem of what to do with the 32 boat, which had dumped much of her gasoline. She did not have enough left to make the fast run with us to the island of Mindanao, where the General's party would get the plane for Australia. So Bulkeley gave her different orders. Her generals were to be transferred to my boat. She was to wait here in the rendezvous until tomorrow when the submarine arrived. She was to tell the submarine that everything had gone well, the General had gone on to Mindanao and would go to Australia by plane, as planned. Having delivered this message the 32 boat was to go to Iloilo on the island of Panay, only one hundred and twenty miles away. There she could get repairs and [illegible]gh gas to bring her on down to [illegible]ayan to join the rest of us in [illegible] other three boats, and we would finish the war together in the southern islands.



"They wigwagged down that they saw a ship—apparently friendly."

"What went wrong with this plan, we don't know to this day. The boat's commander, Lieutenant Schumacher, must have decided that it wasn't in condition to follow these orders. Anyway, when the submarine arrived, he had it shell the 32 boat, so it would not fall into Japanese hands, and boarded the submarine, which dropped his crew off at Corregidor, and took him safely to Australia.

"We found out much later that he had gotten to Australia. For some time their disappearance was a mystery, and Bulkeley here spent several days flying out over all those islands trying to find some trace of the 32 boat. Some day, of course there will be a full report on exactly what did happen which will explain everything.

"All we know is that we last saw them back there in the cove as we left the harbor—a hard right turn and then out to sea, at about 6:30. We were leading, so that the flagship, just behind us, could search out the smoothest part of our wake, so that MacArthur's party could ride comfortably. We'd been going about fifteen minutes when the port lookout called 'Sail-ho!' and there she was—three points on our port bow, distance about five miles. 'Looks like an enemy cruiser!' said the lookout. I grabbed my binoculars, and so it was! Hull down, but masts and superstructure plain. On the course we were steering we would cross her bow. I gave the 34 full right rudder and full speed ahead—it was much faster than eighteen knots, because the carbon had burned out of our motors. I knew that type of Jap cruiser could make thirty-five knots with all steam up. But unless they were expecting something, they could only make twenty-seven. So we had a good chance of keeping away from them—it might be dark before they could close in.

"Meanwhile I was hoping they hadn't seen us and praying that the sun would hurry up and set, but it just pooped along—seemed to hang there above the horizon for weeks, and finally bobbed under at seven o'clock.

"If you've never been in the tropics, you don't realize how fast it gets dark—almost no twilight at all."

"I think it was the whitecaps that saved us," said Bulkeley. "The Japs didn't notice our wake, even though we were foaming away at full throttle.

"During the excitement, the General was lying down in the cabin with his eyes closed, but Mrs. MacArthur, who was with him, heard everything that went on and she didn't turn a hair. She took it like a lady—went right on rubbing the General's hands to keep up his circulation, though she was seasick herself.

"I never went below, and all my men stayed at battle stations, so the people in the cabin took care of themselves—there was no one to wait on them. The General saw that I was supplied with cigars. They were pretty well provisioned. They'd brought from Corregidor, among other things, a few cases of Coca-Cola—the first I'd tasted in many weeks—and some of the tenderest ham I ever ate.

"It got dark fast after sunset, a wind sprang up, and ahead we could see lightning flashes. But these didn't help us find the narrow passage into the Mindanao Sea. We were going in the dark entirely by dead reckoning. At midnight we figured we'd be off the strait—so we turned into the pitch-blackness, holding our breath, but still we didn't hit anything. I had no charts, I'd never been there before, I could see absolutely nothing, but since we didn't crash into a beach, we kept on going, and at last I knew we were through and safely into Mindanao Sea — our dead-reckoning navigation had been right."

"And there we really caught hell," said Kelly. "Big foaming waves fifteen or twenty feet high thundering over the cockpit, drenching everybody topside. Also, because of the speed, water, and wind, it got damned cold. Our binoculars were full of water and our eyes so continuously drenched with stinging salt that we couldn't see, in strange waters with islands all around us. We could see the outlines of the big ones—Negros and Mindanao—very dimly against the horizon through the storm. But there were dozens of small ones and probably hundreds of reefs.

"The sea was on our port bow, tending to drive us south. We expected to make a landfall forty miles dead ahead—a small island where we would turn—and let me tell you this was an unpleasant situation for a navigator. The helmsman's eyes and ours were full of salt, you had to keep one hand in front of your eyes to avoid the slapping force of the water, and yet you needed both to hold on. The Admiral was pretty wrought up. 'I've sailed every type of ship in the navy except one of these MTB's,' he shouted at me above the wind, 'and this is the worst bridge I've ever been on. I wouldn't do duty on one of these for anything in the world—you can have them.'

"It was a real problem to keep astern lookout for the 41 boat so we wouldn't lose it. Three good waves in a row and we'd be out of sight, and in that weather we could pass within seventy-five yards and never see each other. The 41 was now keeping about two hundred yards astern, hunting for the smoothest part of our wake, to keep the General's party comfortable. The General had said that if his boat slowed, we who were ahead should also slow, letting them set the pace. I know seasickness can be very unpleasant, but I wanted to get them safe in port by dawn, in case there were Jap planes about, so I kept pulling them on. It got rougher and rougher, and the Admiral kept remembering it had been he who had assured MacArthur that Bulkeley was wrong about the weather—it would be calm.

" 'The General's going to give me hell for this in the morning, he said, uneasily. 'Damned if I thought Bulkeley knew what he was talking about—but he surely did.'

"The Admiral stayed with me up on the bridge the whole trip, in spite of the weather. Every half-hour I would send a member of the crew over the boat for inspection, to see how its hull was standing the strain, for we were taking an awful licking.

"During one of these I noticed a figure by the machine-gun turret, sitting with his feet propped up on a torpedo tube. His stomach was long ago empty, but he was leaning forward, retching between his knees. From this I guessed it might be one of our passengers, and sent a quartermaster to ask him if he wouldn't care to go below. The quartermaster returned and saluted: 'The General says he doesn't want to move, sir—he knows what's best for him.'

U. S. Army Is 'On Alert' For Chemical Warfare

Many Developments in Gas Warfare Date From World War I; America Thought to Have Greatest Potential Gas Offensive.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Some days ago the British short wave radio, beamed on Germany, was telling the German people, who dared to listen to the forbidden words, that if their armies used gas against the Russians, the British would retaliate and paralyze the German cities with gas bombs from the air. Just about that same hour, I was entering the Army and Navy club in Washington with a short, vigorous, bright-eyed general, whose mental agility makes up for his lack of length. It was no coincidence. I was there to learn something more about chemical warfare and I knew of no better way than to pump Brig. Gen. Alden H. Waitt of the chemical warfare service and whose book "Gas Warfare" has sold out twice in Washington book stores.

There was, however, a coincidence connected with that visit, for as we walked into the great, crowded dining room of the club, Waitt paused to speak to a gray-haired man in civilian clothes with a ribbon in his buttonhole. I recognized a once-familiar figure—Amos Fries, first general of the chemical warfare service. He, of course, is retired now.

Soldiers stationed at Camp San Luis Obispo, Calif., outfitted with new type training gas masks.

I recalled that shortly after the First World war, the activities of General Fries got under some people's skins. He was a hyper-enthusiast over his specialty, and in the reaction against all things military which comes after a war, the cynics used to joke about the stenographer who transcribed her symbols so that a letter was sent addressed to the "comical" warfare service.

New Emphasis

But Fries persisted and managed to preserve his unit in a tight little independent group instead of having its activities scattered all over the other services. As far as the public goes, very little attention has been paid to this arm of our military offense and defense. It may, however, become very prominent before the war is over and some people say that day is "imminent."

If gas comes, the United States will be prepared for it. From an organization with 94 officers in the thirties, the chemical warfare service has grown until its officer personnel numbers "many thousand" (I can't reveal the figure) and many of them are with combat troops today where they are responsible for the use of smoke screens and for incendiaries—the fire bombs and the flame throwers.

I have witnessed demonstrations at the Edgewood arsenal near Baltimore, and although I cannot report the details, I can say that some of the effects were remarkable. You ought to see a steel tank or a concrete pillbox go up in flames when it is "lighted" by a flame thrower. It is unbelievable to watch.

There have been, of course, many developments in this little-discussed weapon of warfare since gas was first used in World War I by the Germans and used so successfully and yet so stupidly. The attack took the British and French colonial troops utterly by surprise and caused what amounted to a rout. If the Germans had had the sense to follow it up, they could have broken through the lines and reached Calais.

That was not the first use of gas in warfare—the first recorded use was some time earlier—in fact, just 2,445 years earlier—at the siege of Plataea, when the Spartans burned wood saturated with pitch and sulphur under the walls. It failed because a rain came up. Five years later a similar "gas attack" was a complete success at the siege of Delium where the fumes drove the defenders from the city's walls in a panic.

Recent Developments

The most recent developments in gas warfare has just been revealed. The Allies have known for some time that the Germans had a new powerful gas which it is almost impossible to detect by smell. It can now be stated that this gas is nitrogen-mustard, a relative of the deadly, burning mustard gas of the last war but far more volatile and that much more effective, for it enters the lungs in greater quantities. It can also now be stated that the Americans are able to manufacture this gas rapidly and in quantity, if necessary. Our experts are thoroughly familiar with its characteristics.

The other development which will greatly increase the efficiency of the use of gas, if it is used today, is the new method of spraying it from low flying planes. This makes it possible to contaminate an area containing troops almost without warning.

However, it is believed that the United States is not only prepared with the best protection but probably has the most effective potential gas offensive weapons of any of the armies.

What are the arguments in favor of the use of this weapon which, so far, has not been used? Let me quote Brigadier General Waitt:

"Every sensible man is agreed that war should be resorted to only when all peaceful methods have failed. When, in order to sustain its policies, a nation has no other choice but to use force to gain its ends, it should do this with as little loss as possible. Not only should there be little loss to the nation itself but unnecessary loss to its enemy should be avoided. Victory depends on the amount of loss. The smaller the loss to both sides, the greater the victory to the victor. This may be strange doctrine but it is sound."

Unusual Outlook

"War," Waitt believes, "is not carried on to kill or destroy but rather to enforce a policy, and if possible, the enforcement should be accomplished without loss of life or property."

We can work toward this end by the use of gas. He points to these facts for his argument: There were 275,000 American casualties in the American ranks in the last war. More than one-fourth were caused by gas. Of the gas casualties, only about 2 per cent died. In other words, the men wounded by gas had about 12 times the chance to live as those wounded by other weapons.

To urge the use of gas sounds strange, indeed. I recall how surprised I was when a young Chinese captain, who had fought through most of the campaigns against Japan, said to me: "Gas is a kindly weapon." Of course, he had never met it himself but he had seen plenty of men blown apart by shrapnel and high explosive and he was very positive in his statement.

What about civilians if gas is used? In the first place, America, of course, is in less danger than Britain because of distance but not out of danger. There has been much contradictory opinion expressed as to the possibility of gassing cities. One view is that it would be utterly ineffective, the other is that whole populations could be blotted out. Waitt says both extreme views are wrong. That there is a middle ground, that gas can be used against industrial and political centers of importance for its disorganizing and demoralizing effect but that the chief targets will be strategic points such as railway stations, power and light plants and the like. Gas will not wipe out populations, he believes, it will not entirely supplant explosives. But it will be an effective weapon. The most important defense, aside from material means of protection which Waitt describes in detail, is education and discipline.

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

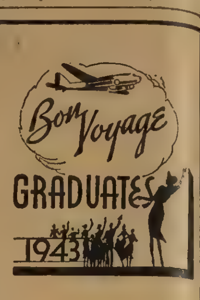
England has supplied our U. S. troops with 2 million blankets, 4 million pairs of socks, 290 million pounds of food supplies, and other materials

Malnutrition, due to slow starvation sapped the vitality of Germans in the last war and was the principal cause of the collapse of that country.



To all these very important young people who are graduating this store says "bon voyage."

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Sweets to the sweet, we suppose, t Tuseday morning Mrs. Jesse Moa- received a large package of maple gar from Jerico, Vermont. It came om Conro Chamberlain the soldier at Mrs. Moates entertained when he s stationed at Montgomery, and a g way from home. He wanted them know that he was still thinking of em and still appreciated their hospi- ity when he was lonesome and mesick.

Never again will we go about town agging about the fine things that e are growing in our garden. We ve learned our lesson. Saturday orning Mrs. J. N. Dennis sent over the house some vegetables, lettuce d spinach, that would put anything at we have ever grown, to shame. uthfully, it would have taken prize at anything's Fair. And we'er t saying all this just because we're ngry either. That hungry look comes om age.

Joe Minshew has erected a beati- l candy kitchen. It stands in the d location formerly occupied by the nokehouse. A little lumber, a little int, and accoring to Joe a lot of work d presto—he has what the State ficials, who inspected it say, is the ettiest for its size in the State. You ve a cordial invitation to visit Min- ew Candy Company at any time and spect his new plant.

Women AT WAR

Leonora

Leonora straightened the objects n her desk with great care. She had ut her desk at the end of her room acing the door so that when her mother came in she would have to ross the whole room under Leo- ora's stern executive eye to get to er. From movies and pictures in the ewspapers Leonora had gotten a ood idea of how the desk of a busy oman of affairs should look.

With an important scowl, Leonora icked up a sheet of paper. Now she as two people—herself, the busy oman, and her own stenographer. "Miss Simpkins, take a letter to the ecretary of the Treasury, will you?" he murmured under her breath.

"Yes, immediately," she murmured back at herself.

Leonora cleared her throat and looked at the ceiling for inspiration. Miss Simpkins bent over the sheet of paper anging on the words about to fall.

"Dear Mr. Morgenthau," — "Got hat?" — "Yes, madam."

"I am — ahem — thirteen years ld and anxious to be of all possible ervice to the country at this time, ahem!

"I earn a weekly income of from $1.37 to $2.12 by helping with the housework and by shovelling snow. I am at present in possession of one War Savings Bond and am buying stamps weekly. I want to become a member of the 10 percent Club. I feel it to be — ahem — not only my duty, but my privilege' ("How do you spell privilege?" asked Miss Simpkins. "Don't bother me with these details," said Leonora)—my privilege as an American to invest at least ten percent of my income in War Bonds.

Yours truly,"

"Get that off at once, Miss Simpkins," said Leonora. "Yes, Ma'am! You certainly are an important woman, ma'am," said Miss Simpkins.

DEATH OF C. A. FOSHEE

C. A. Foshee, age 29, was found dead near his barn at the home Tuesday at noon, one mile south of the Autauga county line near McCord cemetery. A single-barrel shotgun lay nearby on the ground, and there was a gunshot wound in the left chest. No motive can be assigned, although neighbors say he was an exceptionally hard worker, and it is thought probable that he overworked himself which affected his mind. Coroners say he had been dead probably four hours when found.

Services are to be held at New Cedron, the date to be announced by Martin and Sons who are in charge.

Surviving is the wife, Mrs. Lenora Misseldine Foshee; two small children; father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Foshee; five brothers—E. J. Foshee, O. T. of the U.S. Army, Eugene, Melvin and Napoleon; six sisters—Mrs. Roberta Hayes, Mrs. Ludie Jones, Mrs. Mildred Limbrick, Misses Geraldine, Irene and Doris Ann Foshee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT OF PEYTON T. HINKLE

Hall Of Clanton Lodge No. 423, A.F. And A.M., Clanton, Alabama, May 18, 1943

To The Worshipful Master, Wardens And Brethren of said Lodge:

We, the undersigned committee on Resolutions, beg leave to submit the following:

Brother Peyton T. Hinkle was born in Galveston, Texas, in the year of 1873. Both of his parents died when he was a small child, leaving him as their sole survivor. When a very young boy he came to Alabama and was educated in the schools of the City of Montgomery, Alabama.

During the year 1894 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Strahan and during the same year he located and became a citizen of Chilton county where he remained such until his death which occured on the 3rd day of [illegible]h, 1943. Interment followed in Clanton cemetery.

[illegible]er Hinkle, during his life and [illegible]ce in Chilton county, was active in civic, fraternal and political affairs. He was an active supporting member of the First Baptist church of Clanton, Alabama. He was Democratic nominee for Probate Judge of Chilton county, Alabama, at the general election in 1928. His chosen profession was that of a veternarian, which he followed and practiced for many years throughout Chilton county and surrounding territory. For many years prior to 1928 he was an employee of the Alabama Power Company and after 1928 he became an employee of the State of Alabama and remained such until the early part of 1939 when he returned to his home in Clanton, where he operated his farm and practiced his profession.

Brother Hinkle was initiated on July 5th, 1913, and was raised to the sublime Degree of Master Mason on September 6th, 1913, in this lodge and remained a member thereof until his death. He was survived by his widow and a host of friends.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by Clanton Lodge No. 423, A.F. and A.M. that in the death of Brother Peyton Hinkle, this Lodge and the Masonic Fraternity has lost a true and faithful member and his wife a good husband and the city, county and state a worthy citizen. His life was such that it can be said:

"He did his best, he played the man,
His way was straight, his soul was clean;
His failings not unkind, nor mean,
He loved, he helped his fellow man."

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that we extend to his widow and relatives our deepest and sincerest sympathy.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that a copy of these Resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Lodge, a copy furnished the widow and a copy furnished the newspapers for publication.—Respectfully submitted, J. B. Atkinson, V. J. Gragg, M. L. White,

Rationing News

An appeal is going out from all the OPA offices to the citizens of the country to fight the "Black Markets". In every war in the past the price of the necessities of life have gone up up and up until many people were unable to pay the price for food and as a result there was much suffering.

Your government is making every effort to keep the price of food down within reach of every one, at the same time prevent inflation. You are called upon as a patriotic citizen to do your part in defeating these black markets. Killthe Black Markets with your ration stamps.

Accept no rationed food without giving up ration stamps.

Pay no more than ceiling prices for any article that is on the rationed list.

Remember it takes two to make a Black Market.

Black Market meats are dangerous as it may have come from diseased animals.

All intelligent people know that the ration program is the best thing in the present emergency, so be your age and lend your Uncle Sam your full cooperation.

SUGAR

The local OPA office is issuing sugar certificates as rapidly as possible.

Yours should be along now just any time.

All people eligible for sugar may have five pounds for jellies and perserves.

Last year each person was allowed only one pound of sugar for this purpose.

Of the canning sugar not more than one-fourth pound is to be used for each pound of fruit canned.

To Hasten Victory

No American wants this war to go one minute beyond the time we can bring it to a victorious end. To hasten that victory—to save possibly the lives of millions of our boys on our far flung fronts—it is imperative that every American do his part in the Second War Loan. There is an investment to fit every purse. The most you can do is little enough compared with the sacrifice offered by our boys in service. They give their lives—you lend your money.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Washing machines and other household appliances are not available today. Manufacturers have converted their plants to war work. If you save today, however, by buying War Bonds, this money saved will start these factories rolling and put millions of Americans to work after the War is won.

Join the payroll Savings plan at your office or factory. Save a definite amount every payday, ten percent or more of your pay check. Your pay check today buys a payday for tomorrow and gets you $4 back for every $3 you invest.

Farmers Union What it Means

To the Farmers of Chilton County. The principles and purposes of the Farmers unions of today is the same as that of many yaers ago.

Secure Equality, Establish Justice and apply the golden rule.

These principles are corner stones and foundations upon which the organization rest. The Farmers union, in Chilton county is adding new members daily and has a very bright future.

There are many farmes in Chilton County who are not familiar with the purposes and functions of this organization. It shall be our purpose, through the county papers, to take up the Educational and cooperative function of this organization.

The History of Farm organizations and the cooperative movement is of great interest and very educational when analized in light of truth. It shows when where by whom and for what purpose these organizations come into existance.

The congressional Record helps us to understand the difference between the real Farm organization and that of the fake organization. History shows us the whys and werefores of the rise and fall of those organizations and cooperatives.

It shall be my purpose to deliver into the history of these things and bring them to go in a series of articles through your county papers.

There has never been a time when people should know more about the whys and wherefores of our existing conditions than that of today.

The time has come when we should stop guessing and begin to know something. The time for United effort is here. Let us rise up and march together toward the goal of Equity Justice and the golden rule.

T. M. asking that all Locals in the county get together and set the organization in motion. The secretary should send me the home and No. of members and the date of your meeting.

I am asking that all Farmers in the county consider the principles and purposes of the Farmers Union. We have representatives in the Farmers union cooperatives store at Clanton, Ala., they will be glad to explain our purposes. We shall discuss the origin and purposes of the Farmers union next week.

The Farmers union will meet at mineral spring school house Saturday night May 22 at Eight o'clock. The public is invited to attend this meeting. Officers for the Local will be elected.

If, you are a farmer that beleives in justice for all, come out and be with us.

CLANTON TO HAVE HORSE SHOW IN FALL

Something new in the way of entertainment will be coming to Chilton County this Fall when Plantation Saddie Horse Association, Inc., holds what is hoped to be the First Annual Horse Show here at the High School ball park. Members of this organization met Tuesday night with a committee here to work out plans for the coming attraction.

Chilton county has four members in the Association. They are: Chick Fiquette, Lloyd Popewell, Dr. W. L. Parrish and J. M. Graham, of Maplesville.

Chris Hines. Claughton Johnson and Edgar Wallace of Selma, were the three who met with the local committee, representing the Association. Local Horse show fans attending were Dr. & Mrs. W. L. Parrish, Cohen Stapp, Reedie Taylor, Leo Thompson, R. C. Williams, R. W. Williamson, Minnie Wade, Bo Searcy, and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Graham. The meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chick Fiquett.

No definite plans were worked out at this meeting, as to date but tenative plans and popular belief seem to indicate that sometime in August would be the date that will be shosen.

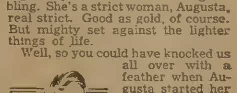
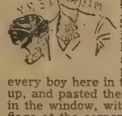
—Buy Bonds—Bye, Bye Axis—



Augusta

Augusta Travers—you know, the one who runs the little hat shop down on Main Street—she's always been dead set against gambling in any form. Never will forget when I was a kid and she found little Hammy, her youngest nephew, playing marbles for keeps out back of the shop. Took it on herself to give him a whaling and point out the evils of gambling. She's a strict woman, Augusta, real strict. Good as gold, of course. But mighty set against the lighter things of life.



Well, so you could have knocked us all over with a feather when Augusta started her gambling campaign for War Bonds and Stamps, right out in the window of her shop. First she got hold of the photographs of every boy here in town who's joined up, and pasted them on a big board in the window, with little American flags at the corners. Half the town was down there watching her do it. She left the middle empty. Then she brought out a placard she'd had printed up and put it in the middle, and this is what it said: "These are the Local Boys who have enlisted in America's War—They are betting that you are buying War Bonds and Stamps—Hitler and the Japs are betting you aren't—Place your bets inside."

My wife couldn't wait to get herself down there and inside Augusta's shop to see what in the wide world had happened to her, turning right around about gambling like that. You know my wife. She kind of likes to talk. She went right up to Augusta and said, "Augusta Travers, seems like something's come over you. Why, I never thought I'd see you running a gambling campaign in your own shop."

Mean to tell me it's a gamble whether this country buys enough bonds to win this war?" Augusta asked.

I forgot to say. Wasn't just a hat my wife brought home. Was a hat and a $25 bond.

EXTRA DOWRY

Mr. Smith—The man who marries my daughter will get a prize.

Prospective Suitor—May I see it?

She Doesn't

The city girl was doing her best, but she was evidently finding everything on the farm very strange.

Having had an incubator explained to her, and been asked if she fully understood it, she put her head on one side and, with a puzzled look, replied—

"Yes, but where does the hen sit?"

Bob—I heard about a man who lives on garlic alone.

Harry—He should live alone.

SHAVETAIL LOGIC

The colonel was lecturing a class of incipient officers. "A 40-foot flagpole has fallen down," he said. "You have a sergeant and a squad of ten men. How do you erect the flagpole again?"

The candidates thought, then offered suggestions about block-and-tackle, derricks, and so on.

"You're all wrong," replied the colonel. "You'd say: 'Sergeant, get that flagpole up.' "

All in Vain

As the old woman wearily pushed a baby carriage up the hill the vicar overtook her and volunteered to relieve her of her burden. It wasn't easy but he worked hard.

Puffing and blowing, he reached the top of the hill. Then he turned to her.

"Now may I have a look at the dear little baby?"

"Baby, sir!" the woman replied. "Bless your heart, that's my groceries."

LOOK FOR THE GAL

"Man's original fall was brought about by an apple."

"Now it's always a peach."

Modern Problem

Visitor (in defense plant)—Look at that youngster, the one with the cropped hair and trousers. It's sure hard to tell whether it is a boy or girl!

War Worker—She's a girl, and she's my daughter!

Visitor—My dear sir, please forgive me. I would never have been so outspoken if I had known you were her father!

W. W.—I'm not her father. I'm her mother!

Air Corps Cuts Red Tape With Absorption of CAP

Student Pilots of Civil Air Patrol Are Vital Link In Nation's Defense Chain; Valued Services Now Recognized.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

As the tempo of American activity on the foreign fronts moves with an accelerated beat, it is pleasing to note that a lot of red tape in Washington is being rolled up and chucked into official wastebaskets. One example is what the air corps is trying to do to utilize every ounce of human and material resource that is available.

When war comes, there is always a sharp cross current of human emotions—the good old one of self-preservation, and the equally old and much better one, from the standpoint of the nation, of patriotism. And, for opposite reasons but with the same result, both meet with obstacles. Many injustices occur in the selection of men for military service. Many ardent and valuable men are stopped from rendering the service of which they are capable and which they are anxious to furnish.

Red tape is the answer. But red tape is bound to tangle any herculean effort when a peaceful nation turns into a belligerent.

Drab Duties

The latest step in removing the red tape that was holding back a lot of valuable human power was the absorption of the Civil Air Patrol by the air corps. As this is written, the decision is being made as to which administrative group will take over this body of patriotic fliers who have been furnishing their own planes and their own services, unsung and unhonored. Most of their duties have been drab, and in many cases, stultifying because of their indefinite, quasi-military status. They are not a part of the air corps.

Another important step forward is also under way which will bring that group of unselfish young men into active service after months of morale-breaking waiting—I refer to the Civilian Pilot trainees, most of whom are now sure of active duty as instructors or flying cadets. They, too, have worked without compensation other than subsistence, and have sacrificed time, earning capacity and opportunity to continue their normal civilian careers. They are now being gradually absorbed into the air corps, too.

Few people in the country outside of the families of the members are familiar with either the Civil Air Patrol, the student pilots of the War Training program or even that other group of a million and a half volunteers who make up the aircraft warning service.

The Civil Air Patrol received some publicity for its important part in offshore duty in the campaign which stopped the submarine activities off the eastern coast of the United States. These men were pilots who owned their own planes, took their special training and received only gasoline and a small fee for depreciation while on active duty.

Spotters for 'Tough Guys'

They are a vital link in that chain of air and surface guardians who watched our waters from Maine to Florida. They could spot a sub, immediately report it to the nearest bomber or a fast coast guard or naval vessel. Some of the civilian planes were equipped with light bombs but they were not able to make much use of them because their planes were slow and a sub on the surface could spot them as quickly as they could spot the sub and crash dive. That can be done in seven or eight minutes and since visibility may extend 15 miles, the sub could hit bottom before the pilot could get over his target. Their chief function was to play bird-dog for the "tough guys" carrying heavier depth bombs.

Civil Air Patrol did invaluable but less romantic service in carrying vital machine parts between factories. It is now possible that some of these men and women in the interior of the country who have been making uninteresting overland flights from here to there may get a whiff of sea air, too. In any case, the red tape between them and the air command has been severed.

If not technically, at least practically, "they're in the army now."

As to the boys in the CPT war training program, who have been warming benches and waiting at nothing per diem, a bill in congress is about to give them pay as active reservists and as soon as there is equipment enough to accommodate all of them, those unqualified for cadet combat training will probably have jobs as instructors or transport pilots soon.

Status Unchanged

The last named group, the airplane spotters, operate under the Fighter Command, and their functions are such that their status will not be changed, they are a part of the Office of Civilian Defense.

This group is made up of volunteer workers working with armed force experts, in connection with a vast network of telephone and radio connections which lace our entire coastline, east, south and west.

They total a million and a half people and the OCD calls this work done by the volunteers, the most arduous and technical job trusted to civilians. It consists in spotting, reporting and recording all activity. Not a plane appears in the skies that is not checked and accounted for. If it can't be identified, blackouts are ordered until it is.

Most of the volunteers are women and many more are needed. The job is described as being both exciting and tough. The anti-aircraft centers where these people work are guarded by soldiers and no one gets in who doesn't work there or is on official business.

Here dozens of girls work on a gigantic table map of the area. They wear telephone headsets and mouthpieces like a regular telephone operator, listening to the information and moving little markers called "pips," representing planes, about the map with long wands.

These girls are the end of a series of operations which go like this:

The spotter out on top of some building or hilltop sees a plane. The message comes in in semi-code, "Bomber on bi high west 39 Posy." The girl puts the pip on the spot on the map corresponding to the spotter's report. The details of the size and description of plane are recorded on a marker on the pip. As the plane moves, it is reported by each spotter in succession and pushed along on the map. But until three spotters have made the same report, it is not considered correct—because geese look like planes sometimes.

Method of Operation

After the third report, a teller watching the board from a balcony above, reports it to the operations room, which may be in another city. This point is the nerve center and here again, the planes are plotted. Army men and Civil Aeronautics administration officials who are continuously receiving information as to every plane leaving the ground, check this information with the map below them. About Nutrition

I received the following card from a listener in Miami, Fla.:

"Those who know will tell you that the introduction of synthetic vitamins into white bread is all the bunk or sales talk. Canada and Great Britain will not allow it. The Pure Food Act boys know it too. But just look it up and laugh. 'Suckers' are not born today, they are made by propaganda and high-powered advertising."

I called up the Food and Drug administration ("Pure Food Boys"). Commissioner Campbell said to me:

"So far as the nutritionists know, synthetic vitamins are just as effective as natural vitamins. This has been shown by extensive experimentation."

Before the order was given to enrich white flour with synthetic vitamins, lengthy testimony was taken by leading nutritionists—scientific men with no axes to grind.

My listener was undoubtedly sincere. He was sincerely undoubting of his misinformation.

I wonder who started it?

Surprise the Family With Sandwich Loaf!
(See Recipe Below)

Meals on a Dish

We've heard a lot about hot meals in a casserole that take care of the main course of a meal. But how about cool meals served on a single attractive platter that are most of the time, at least, made up ahead of time? This is one of the very nice things about summer menu planning for foods lend themselves to this kind of serving.

Recently I saw a very attractive platter that was cool, complete and colorful—that any one of you could whip up at short notice. An individual tomato aspic filled with creamed cottage cheese served on a large green glass salad plate was banked by several tiny finger sandwiches, a slice of tongue with horseradish sauce, deviled eggs, a small mound of potato salad and a sprig of watercress. Serve this with coffee or tea and a dish of sherbet or ice cream.

Bread with filling forms an interesting base for this salad-sandwich loaf and looks very pretty enclosed in rosy aspic. The fillings, ham and cheese, classic flavor combinations, won't cut into your points heavily, nor will the tomato juice:

Tomato Aspic Surprise.
(Serves 6)

1 small loaf white bread
Ham Salad
1 5-ounce glass Old English cheese
3½ cups tomato juice
2 tablespoons onion juice
1 stalk celery
3 tablespoons gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Watercress

Remove crusts from loaf of bread. Cut whole loaf into three lengthwise slices. Spread one slice with ham salad, cover with second slice spread with cheese spread. Cover with third slice of bread and wrap in wax paper.

Cook tomato juice, onion juice and celery for 5 minutes. Remove celery and add gelatin which has been softened in cold water. Stir until dissolved. Season with salt and pepper. Pour a ½-inch layer into a buttered loaf pan which is a little larger than the loaf of bread. [illegible] until firm. Place prepared [illegible] wich loaf in this layer of [illegible] d pour the remaining cooled [illegible] what thickened aspic aro[illegible] d over the top. Chill again [illegible] e aspic is firm. Unmold on a p[illegible] garnish with watercress and slice crosswise to serve.

You can still do entertaining even on your ration points! If your [illegible] t beau or son is coming home from camp, there's no need to worry about stretching those ration points out of place when you serve this loaf serving 12 to 15 people:

Tulip Sandwich Loaf.
(Serves 12 to 15)

½ pound cold ham
½ pound American cheese
6 sweet pickles
Mayonnaise
3 packages cream cheese
Cream
1 small jar pimento
1 green pepper
1 loaf unsliced sandwich bread

Grind ham and grate cheese. Combine ham, cheese and chopped pickles and add enough mayonnaise to moisten. Remove crusts from loaf of bread. Cut a ½-inch slice of bread the length of the loaf. Remove center from remaining loaf so there is a box ½ to ¾-inch thick on sides and bottom. Spread inside of loaf and one side of slice generously with butter or margarine. Put sandwich filling inside loaf and top with slice on butter side down. Soften cream cheese with a small amount of cream until it is of spreading consistency. Cover loaf with cream cheese. Cut small tulips and leaves from pimento and green pepper and decorate sides of loaf. Chill for 1 hour and when ready to serve, cut in 1-inch slices.

Cottage cheese is unrationed, a good source of quality protein and calcium. You'll like it in this main dish salad—a meal in itself:

Walnut-Stuffed Tomatoes.
(Serves 4 to 6)

4 to 6 whole tomatoes
1 pound cottage cheese
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 tablespoon minced green pepper
½ cup broken walnut kernels
Salt to taste

Wash and remove stem end from tomatoes. Cut out portion of center from tomatoes. Cut this fine and add to above ingredients, combine and fill tomatoes. Serve well-chilled, garnished with salad greens and whole walnut kernels. Serve with french dressing or salad oil and vinegar.

Lima beans, a rich source of protein, are combined with other rich-in-minerals-and-vitamins vegetables to give you a perfect luncheon or supper main dish salad:

Lima Bean Supper Salad.
(Serves 6)

2 cups lima beans, cooked
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 bud garlic, chopped
1 large onion, sliced thin
¼ cup salad oil
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Sliced tomatoes
Sliced green onions

Mix with a fork, the lima beans, parsley, garlic and onion. Add salad oil gradually, then vinegar drop by drop. Season with salt and pepper, garnish with tomatoes and green onions.

Hot Tomato Cottage Cheese Sandwich (Serves 6).

1 cup cottage cheese
6 slices buttered toast
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
2½ cups cooked or canned tomatoes

Spread cottage cheese between slices of buttered toast. Cut sandwiches in half and arrange in buttered baking dish. Melt butter over low flame, blend in flour, then add tomatoes gradually, stirring constantly until thickened. Pour over sandwiches and bake for 15 to 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

Cut hard-cooked eggs into halves, mash them, season according to taste and refill the whites. Garnish with paprika and a sprig of parsley.

Chopped celery with the mashed yolks is a good filling if you like crispiness. Or, mix the yolk with Thousand Island dressing for variety and serve around a salad.

Yolks deluxe include mixing with 1 cup cooked peas, pureed, 2 slices bacon, chopped and fried crisp, 1½ tablespoons cream, 1 teaspoon vinegar, ¼ teaspoon onion juice, 1 tablespoon minced pimento, ½ teaspoon salt and enough mayonnaise to moisten.

If you have a dab of leftover ham, mince it fine and add with enough mayonnaise to moisten the egg yolks mashed fine and refill whites.

BIBLE TEACHINGS ON WINE'S DECEITFULNESS

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 20:1; 23:29-35; Matthew 24:45-51.
GOLDEN TEXT—At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.—Proverbs 23:32.

Deceitful is a good word to describe both the product and the propaganda of the liquor business. Alcoholic beverages are in themselves most deceitful, and the methods by which they are sold to the public certainly cannot commend themselves to right-thinking people.

Intoxicants are associated with social preferment, festive occasions, radiant beauty, when they ought to be connected with the bleary eye, the babbling tongue, the ragged children and brokenhearted mothers. What about the men who have lost their positions and their characters, and the women who have paid with their virtue for their love of intoxicants? Why not picture them in the beautiful magazine advertisements?

I. Wine Is a Deceiver (Prov. 20:1). Wine is personified here as an evil demon who leads men on in the hope of some pleasure or advantage, and then lets him down to the depths of destruction. It makes him think he is great and powerful, when he is only weak and degraded. It excites him to foolishness and wild boisterousness, when he would normally be sensible, quiet and orderly.

He who thought he was wise in partaking of its stimulation, finds himself deceived, and to his regret he realizes that he is a fool in the hands of a malicious deceiver.

II. Wine Is a Depraver (Prof. 23: 29-35).

Depravity is a word not used as much as it was a generation ago, but it well describes the condition to which the drunkard comes in due time. And it is wine and other liquor which has depraved or corrupted him. A number of things appear in the text.

1. Liquor Destroys (vv. 29, 30). This is true morally, mentally, physically, and spiritually. Red eyes, wounds, complaining—these are only the outward signs of inward physical destruction of alcohol. Woe and sorrow speak of mental and social distress. The moral and spiritual destruction follow.

2. Liquor Deludes (vv. 31, 32). Its color, its sparkle and effervescence, its smooth appearance—all excite the anticipation of goodness and pleasure. And what does the drinker receive? The bite of the serpent and the sting of the adder. How true!

3. Liquor Demoralizes (v. 33). Alcohol is the handmaiden of immorality. "Strange women" come into the picture very quickly. They and the drinker soon find that drink sets them free from the limitations of decency and good sense, and the result is beyond description.

Those who defend liquor, or temporize with this problem, may as well recognize that they are encouraging the moral destruction of our boys and girls. It is a terrifying responsibility!

4. Liquor Dulls Man's Senses and Dazes Man's Mind (vv. 34, 35). Only a fool would lie down to sleep in the midst of the sea, or on top of the mast of a ship, or in the gutter, or against a lamp post. That's what drink does for a man.

His perceptions become so dull that he can be beaten, and he does not know he has been hurt. Exposed to inclement weather, he knows not enough to seek shelter. His money is lost or given away without concern on his part.

And when he sobers up—what then? His faculties are so dazed that he can think of only one thing to do, and that is to seek more wine. What is it that Scripture says about the dog and the fool? (See Prov. 26:11).

III. Wine Is a Destroyer (Matt. 24:45-51).

We have already touched on that point in its personal application, but now we see it in its bearing on his occupation and standing in the community.

The contrast is between the good servant who recognizes that his one and constant obligation is to serve, whether his master is present or absent, and the evil servant who violates his trust.

Notice that his first thought after cruelty to his fellow servants is to satisfy his appetite "to drink with the drunken."

Cruelty, mismanagement, unfaithfulness are tied up without question with drinking. Is it not so today? If you doubt it, read your daily newspaper. Why trifle with anything which keeps such evil company? You may find yourself mixed up with them beyond your ability to get free.

The final result is the loss of his position and of his life. Who will deny that this aptly states the end of the drunkard's way. But someone says: "I do not intend to be a drunkard. I only take a social drink." That is the way the drunkard started. Why begin to travel that road?

The Questions

1. Are American soldiers bigger than they were in World War I?
2. Were any Presidents of the United States baldheaded?
3. What speed does the swing of a pugilist attain?
4. What is a "Blue Ox"?

The Answers

1. Yes. They average two inches taller and are 14 pounds heavier.
2. The only baldheaded President of the United States was John Quincy Adams.
3. A device that times a pugilist's swing shows that the fastest punch of most heavyweight boxers attains a speed of 40 miles an hour.
4. Our fliers call the Norden bombsight, the secret device that allows them to do uncanny precision bombing, the "Blue Ox."

Joseph C. Grew Warns

Half-Effort Will Not Defeat Japan

By JOSEPH C. GREW

United States Ambassador to Japan until the outbreak of war, and author of "Report From Tokio."

(Written for the Treasury Department in connection with the Retailers' "SAY YES" campaign to complete the nation's 100,000,000 partially filled War Stamp albums.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In describing one of the big air battles over Guadalcanal a recent newspaper account tells of an American flyer who parachuted from his crippled plane to the waters of Lunga Bay. The Navy craft which picked him up next went to the rescue of a Japanese pilot seen struggling in the water nearby. As the rescue boat reached the Japanese flyer he suddenly pulled out his revolver, aimed it at the drenched American pilot and pulled the trigger. The cartridge failed to explode. Then the Japanese officer turned the gun on himself with suicidal intent. Again he pulled the trigger and again his revolver failed him. At this point an American sailor knocked him out with a boat hook and pulled him aboard the American craft a prisoner.

Almost daily one reads eye-witness stories such as this one, and all of them clearly demonstrate that war with our enemy in the Pacific cannot end in compromise.

For ten years I lived in Japan. The truth as I know it from close observation is this: Nothing less than the exertion of our maximum capacities, individually and collectively, in a war of offense will bring our beloved country safely to the longed-for haven of victorious peace.

The Japanese are pawns of a senseless but mighty militarism—a warrior caste which is ruthless and cruel beyond comprehension.

JOSEPH C. GREW
Says It's Fight to Finish

From the flood of eye witness accounts of atrocity and bestiality one fact shines clear. We must utterly crush that machine and caste and system. If, however, we Americans think that collectively and individually we can continue to lead our normal lives, leaving the spirit of self-sacrifice to our soldiers and sailors, we shall unquestionably run the risk of a stalemate with Japan. I do not have the slightest doubt of our eventual victory. But I do not wish to see the period of our blood, sweat and tears indefinitely and unnecessarily prolonged. We must not fail to realize that we are up against a powerful fighting machine, a people whose morale cannot be broken even by successive defeats and untold economic hardship, a people who gladly sacrifice their lives for their Emperor and their nation. We must also remember that Japan did not start this war without carefully laid military plans for victory over the United States and a peace dictated by their war lords at the White House.

This is a total war, the only answer to which is a total American victory. It is a war in which half measures of any kind mean incredible waste of material, energy and human life. In this sense a half-filled War Savings Stamp album is symbolic of a half effort. There are, I am told, roughly 100 million partially complete War Stamp albums now in circulation. These uncompleted Stamp albums are, in a measure, like a 100 million threats to a speedy and victorious peace. On the other hand, for every War Savings album completed and cashed in for a Bond, you the owner have helped some soldier or sailor take a forward step on the uphill road to total victory.

Irene

When Irene got home from the airplane factory she was good and tired. This was the hour, after work and before dinner, that she always looked forward to. Her private name for it was "My sissy hour." Into it, these days, she packed all the lazy, luxurious little things she loved—things that used to take up a lot more than an hour of her peace-time days.

She sat down at the little desk in her room. You could tell quite a lot about Irene from that desk. The water-glass filled with the small bouquet of flowers she sometimes bought on the way home. The paper-weight of pink marble. The thin, crackly blue air-mail stationery. And the big, framed photograph of a young man in a corporal's uniform—as good-looking a man as Irene was pretty. On the blotter pad lay the telegram that had come that morning just as she was leaving for work.

With those long, well-shaped fingers she reached for a sheet of paper. She nibbled the end of her pen for a bit, and then she wrinkled up her nose at the picture of the soldier and began to write, "Dear Mr. Morgenthau", but the corporal's name was Jackson and she called him Pete. Her round handwriting spread across the page. "My boy friend is with the A.E.F. in Ireland. He has cabled me fifty dollars with which to buy a diamond ring. I've been thinking it over and decided to buy a War Bond to help Uncle Sam instead. This may help to bring my boy friend home sooner, and then he can help me select my ring."

Slowly she began to sign her name. "Irene ——"

WAR, 1943 style, is war on wheels. Men, weapons and materials vital to victory must be moved swiftly, safely and without delay.

But each day accidents at grade crossings in America injure or kill 19 motorists and delay 33 trains a total of 22 hours—a drain on manpower and time that a nation at war simply cannot afford.

Will you, as a patriotic driver, enlist in the nationwide campaign now under way to stop these accidents? Here's how you can help:

1. Be extra careful—wartime careful—in all your driving.
2. Be especially alert when approaching a grade crossing.
3. Be sure the way is clear before you cross the tracks.
4. LOOK, LISTEN and LIVE!

Help keep 'em rolling for victory!

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskwe, D.D.

It was late for me to come in and on reaching the door steps I slipped off my shoes and then opened the door very softly. The house was dark on the inside and with eat like steps I started toward my bed room. I had only made a few steps in the darkness before my mother said, "Dan, is that you?" It mattered not how late at night I never couldslin in and mother not know it. Every time I heard her say, "Dan, it that you?" My father did not sleep until all the children were safe in bed. Strange to say, she never failed to know who it was coming in. Our mothers are a wonderful class of people. She waits with wide open eyes to ask, "Tom, Mary, is that you?' My mother is now living over the river, and some day my weary feet will climb up the last hill and the Golden gate open. It seems that my welcome home will be complete if I can hear the voice of mother say, "Dan, is that you?" I would like to answer once more, "Yes, Mother."

There is a little poem that tells of a certain little city built on the side of a high cliff. So many people fell over the side of the cliff that a kind hearted lady bought an ambulance to stay in the valley and pick up the unfortunates and rush them to a hospital. One day a thinking man came to that village and remarked, it seemed foolish that they spend money to pick up the injured, when far less money could be spent to build a fence around the cliff and thus prevent any one falling to his hurt. Thesimple minded people would not harken to these words of wisdom. They prefered to save the injured rather than to prevent injuries. How foolish we say, and yet we do not find ourselves in the same rediculous way of living. It is fine to snatch brands from burning pits, but it is much finer to keep them from falling into the fire. If we would build more fences around the ways of sin, there would be much less need for ambulances. It is better to prevent the wreck, than it is to nurse the injured after the wreck.

There are many insects, such as the cricket, the grasshopper, the locust that do quite a lot of fiddling. They are equipped with musical instrument resembling the violin and they fiddle their lives away. The common grasshopper is perhaps the most gifted of any of the musical insects, for he can play so many different tunes. His fiddle is on one wing and he uses a hind leg as a bow. Upon his leg there are little knobs on which are small hairs and when drawn over his wing many musical sounds are produced. Both the grasshopper and the cricket have different tunes for the day and for the night. If the sun goes behind a cloud they will change from their day tune to their night song. Grasshoppers get out in the sunshine and fiddld, while the cricket does his best fiddling on the inside of the house nearer the heareth. How like crickets and grasshoppers some of us mortals are. We do nothing much but just fiddle our lives away.

One day I stood, looking at my hammer. It was just a simple working tool and yet from it I learned many a lesson. I could fling it up and down yet t kept its head. Many a day have I driven nails with it and yet it did not and yet it kept its head. Many a day I have driven nails with it and yet it did not fly off the handle. It locates the head of a nail, up it goes and keeps pounding away until its task is done After the point is selected it keeps hammering until the point is driven It takes a look at the other side and often it clinches the matter. It makes mistakes, but when it does, sarts all over again. It becomes rusty without use, and bright when it is serving You can count on it remaining where it is placed unless Sticky hands come along to lift. Yes, old hammer, you told me about many valuable things.

Betsy

The little girl tugged gently at her mother's sleeve

"Now, Mother?" she asked. "Now can't we write my letter?"

"Why, of course, Betsy," Mrs. Carson grinned. "Are you going to write it or am I?"

"Well," Betsy said. "Maybe you'd better kind of say it to me. Only I'd love to write it."

"All right, then, Miss Carson, take a letter," her mother said, walking slowly up and down the room. "Ready? 'Dear Mr. Morgenthau: The way I save money for War Stamp buying is to steer all the small household jobs toward my daughter, who is eight years old She is so keen about buying War Stamps that I know all the money I might have paid to someone else for doing the jobs will go toward Victory when paid to her.'

"Now make a list, Betsy. 'Windows washed, 60 cents. Apples picked from under the tree, 25 cents. Emptied trash cans, 4 cents. Sold string beans from the garden, 15 cents. Sold strips of spoiled film to children for sungazing, at one cent [illegible]. Total [illegible] [illegible]. I [illegible]—and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]"

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allied Leaders Review Grand Strategy As Casablanca Promises Are Renewed Following Finale of Tunisia Campaign; Winter Wheat, Rye Dip to 1936 Levels

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

TUNISIA:

Steak and Potatoes

While captured German generals were putting down steaks, potatoes, and peaches in an American prison camp after they had surrendered with thousands of their troops, Allied forces sealed the fate of the remnants of the once proud Afrika Korps on rocky Cape Bon peninsula.

Blasted by swarms of Allied planes ruling the skies and an Allied fleet that stood off of Tunisia ready to crush any attempt at evacuation, the 80,000 Axis soldiers that retired to the skinny neck of land faced their doom, resisting to the last.

No less than six Axis generals, led by Maj.-Gen. Willibald Borowiecz, surrendered to Maj.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley, the infantry specialist who commanded the American Second army in its dramatic break through the rugged enemy positions before Bizerte.

MAJ. GEN. OMAR BRADLEY
Nazi generals surrendered to him.

The American forces continued to mop up around Bizerte where scattered bands of Nazis entrenched in the hills continued firing till their last round of ammunition. Much enemy material was recovered, since the German generals agreed to turn it over undamaged as one of the terms of surrender.

Also offering fierce resistance was a formidable Axis group holding out against the British Eighth army in the south. Cut off from the remnants of the northern Axis forces, this group stuck to the mountain fastnesses, while British artillery and infantry picked them slowly to pieces. Even the Nazis realized that their scattered forces were inexorably doomed.

FARM CROPS:

Light Prospects

Winter wheat and rye crops will be the smallest since 1936, the department of agriculture predicted early this month.

Production of winter wheat should approximate 515 million bushels, almost 200 million bushels less than last year, the department said. Yields per acre should average 15.5 bushels.

Thirty-six million bushels of rye should be harvested, over 20 million bushels less than 1942, the department reported. Each acre should yield 11.7 bushels.

Condition of tame hay was placed at 81 per cent of normal. Pastures were said to be 78 per cent of normal. Stocks of hay on farms early in the month totaled over 13 million tons, well over last year's.

PACIFIC:

Air Warfare

Striking back at Japanese bases northwest of Australia, Allied airmen destroyed or damaged 23 enemy planes in a heavy raid on Babo, Dutch New Guinea. Bombs also were dropped on oil tanks and docks, and flames visible for 80 miles licked the installations.

In China, heavy and medium bombers of the 14th American air force swooped down on the Japanese airdrome at Canton, razing hangars, fuel storage dumps, repair shops and factories. Accompanying fighters shot down 13 enemy planes, and Liberator tail gunners accounted for three others.

SOLDIER MAIL:

Now Can Get Packages

American soldiers serving overseas no longer need obtain permission from commanding officers to receive packages from home.

If Johnny Doughboy asks that a package be sent to him, it will be delivered without any further formality, save that the parcel must be of the current specified size and weight. The soldier's envelope must be presented when mailing the package.

GRAND STRATEGY:

FDR, Churchill Meet

No sooner had Axis resistance in Tunisia collapsed than Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain was on his way to Washington to map the next step in the Allied grand strategy with President Roosevelt.

Although plans for an invasion of Europe loomed largest in the discussions, the situation in the Pacific also was given much consideration. Continued Japanese aerial assaults on Australia and the pressure the enemy was exerting on General Wavell's forces on the frontier in India, were said to be of concern to the conferees.

The two leaders re-emphasized their "unconditional surrender" decision of Casablanca.

Official quarters predicted the formulation of a concrete plan of action at the meeting. They remembered that Churchill's visit here after Pearl Harbor resulted in the decision to concentrate on the defeat of Hitler first; Churchill's second conference with President Roosevelt in Washington in the summer of 1942 preceded the invasion of French North Africa, and the Casablanca meeting saw the development of plans for the battle of Tunisia.

Discussion of the Russian-Polish controversy, and policies to be framed with the occupation of Europe, also were said to have entered in the latest Churchill-Roosevelt meeting.

UNEMPLOYMENT:

900,000 Still With Us

Despite booming business, there were still 900,000 unemployed in the United States in April, the census bureau reported. Of the number, however, were many merely enjoying an interval from one job to another.

While non-agricultural payrolls dropped 400,000 in the month, agricultural employment jumped 600,000, thus showing a general increase of 200,000 over the month of March.

According to the census bureau, the boost in agricultural employment reflected the return of many industrial laborers to the farms, and the early working of school boys.

CIVILIAN SUPPLY:

Agency for Consumers

If the U. S. senate has its way, the supply of civilian goods in America will become the responsibility of a powerful new independent agency answerable only to Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes.

A bill introduced by Senator Maloney of Connecticut and passed by a 44 to 29 vote, provides for the creation of a civilian supply administration which would determine the essential needs of consumers and then place its orders for materials and manpower for the production of the goods. These orders would have the same high ranking as those of the army and navy.

The new administration would replace the recently reformed office of civilian requirements within the War Production board. Arthur D. Whiteside was appointed to head the reorganized office after protests that the WPB had sidetracked civilian industry in its concentration on war production.

SENATOR F. T. MALONEY
Would determine civilian needs.

Opponents of Maloney's bill contended the WPB office should be given an opportunity to operate before another new governmental agency is created.

LOCAL BOARDS:

OPA Increases Power

Authority of local rationing boards was greatly increased through a new order issued by the Office of Price Administration. Boards now can revoke gas ration books if they find the bearer has misinformed them upon applying for the book, or if the operator of a commercial vehicle has violated a provision of the Office of Defense Transportation.

Ration books also may be revoked for speeding.

RUML PLAN:

Returned to Life

Buried more than a month ago, the Ruml plan has sprung back to life, and although it has slightly changed form, it is still recognizable in congress. The latest version of the Ruml plan would forgive all income taxes for one year, except those of persons excessively profiting from the war, and put the nation's taxpayers on a current basis.

According to the latest bill, a 20 per cent withholding tax after legal exemptions, would be imposed on all weekly wages or salaries, on either the 1942 or 1943 incomes, whichever are higher. The remaining year's taxes would be wiped out.

To guard against persons profiting from excessive profits from the war effort, regular normal and surtax rates would be applied against all income over the person's ordinary income for 1938, '39 or '40, plus a $10,000 exemption.

Provisions for special payments by farmers and professional people are included, indications being that farmers would pay all but the last installment this year, and then make a final settlement on March 15 of 1944. The latest bill differs from the one recently passed by the house, in that the house bill would merely forgive taxes on the normal and first surtax rate.

FRANCO:

'No One Can Win'

Appealing to "the conscience of peoples," Spanish Chief of State Francisco Franco again called upon the warring powers to come to peace.

Asserting that the present conflict had reached a deadlock, Franco said that neither side now has the power to destroy the other.

"The world has now undergone three years of war and when this time is passed it is fitting to think of peace, of ending hates and of bringing peoples together," Franco stated.

Again claiming that Spain has preserved her neutrality to be available to the warring powers as a mediator in negotiations, Franco declared: "Abroad, Spain demands a post which corresponds to her history in service, humanity and worth."

To Franco's plea, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Britain replied: "Our terms are unconditional surrender."

INVASION:

To Hit Underbelly?

Prime Minister Churchill's twangy reference some months ago to the Mediterranean shoreline as the "underbelly of Europe" was ill received in the Axis capitals. It was much better, Axis officials said, to refer to the territory as the "abdomen."

But "underbelly" or "abdomen," they both look alike to approximately a million Allied troops, facing Europe's southern boundary from one end of North Africa to the other. The big question on everyone's mind was: When will the United Nations swing the knockout punch at the enemy's midriff?

To counter the expected blow, the Nazis were feverishly completing coastal defenses in southern France. Whisked from North Africa, Marshal Rommel was reported inspecting fortifications in Greece, where the Germans have worked out an elaborate outer ring on the many Aegean islands leading to the mainland. Bulgaria was said to be putting the finishing touches on defenses facing neutral Turkey.

Matching the large Allied forces in North Africa are well over two million troops in England, poised for a thrust at any point, or series of points, along the whole occupied European mainland from Norway to southern France. When the invasion comes, several landings undoubtedly will be made, to spread the Nazi defense forces.

SUPREME COURT:

Free Air

In a decision read by Justice Felix Frankfurter, the Supreme court broke the grip big radio chains reputedly held over smaller stations. Whereas it was alleged the chains could compel affiliates to carry certain programs, and deny them the right to present others through contract terms, the Supreme court verdict now allows the smaller stations a free choice.

The Supreme court ruled that the Federal Communications commission's order of 1941 providing that no licenses shall be granted to stations or applicants having specified relationships with networks was within the law.

The two big chains contesting the FCC's order argued that the agency lacked the authority to formulate such a regulation. However, the 5 to 2 majority, speaking through Justice Frankfurter, declared:

"The act gave the (FCC) not niggardly but expansive powers . . ."

MISCELLANY:

CUT LINES: As an indication of the tenseness that has gripped southeastern Europe in the expectation of an Allied invasion, telephone communications have been cut between Axis Bulgaria and neutral Turkey.

TOO COMPLACENT: Rookies entering the army are too complacent and think the war is boy scout stuff, Maj. Gen. C. L. Scott at Fort Knox, Ky., has said.

Our News Censor Gives Warning to Radio Infractors

NEW YORK.—Big, white-haired Byron Price hasn't the whimsical authority of the first censors. He can't take a senator's toga away or a citizen's vote. But he could be a tough director of the Office of Censorship. He does, within limits, decide what Left and Right may read these wartimes. And when he says, as he just did, that the sound and fury on the air waves isn't all static and commercials, the wise will take the hint.

After the President picked him 16 months ago to sieve the nation's news, Price said he was sure the honor system would do for both press and radio. Now he reports that some "wisecracking" announcers are "toying" with the code; and he warns that his staff's ears are bent 24 hours a day, and their eyes, too.

He has been a newspaper man over 30 years. He got out his first paper with a pencil when he was ten; got his first lesson in censorship, also. His dad's foot came down hard. He didn't try again until he reached Wabash college.

Price was born in Indiana, 52 years ago. After college he quit a few newspaper jobs just for fun, as cub reporters did in those days, and then the AP took him on. Barring time out for the first World war—Captain Price—he stayed and stayed with the AP, married in 1920, and kept on rising. When he left to become chief censor he was second only to General Manager Kent Cooper.

Has a Firm Hand On the Throttle of Our War Machine

ONCE Julius A. Krug hustled back to Milwaukee swearing that nothing, nobody, could ever coax him into another federal job. That was after a time with the Federal Communications commission. Now he rises to the No. 3 spot in the War Production board, with only Charles E. Wilson and Chairman Nelson above him.

Krug's change of mind was chiefly due to the persuasions of David Lilienthal. Lilienthal was with the Wisconsin Telephone company where Krug got a job. He went, shortly, to the Tennessee Valley authority and nothing would do but Krug must go along.

The TVA allowed Krug later to quit his job as power manager to join WPB and now he rises to high authority. Few younger men, in federal jobs or out, have as much. Krug is just 35. He was born in Wisconsin of a German family. His grandparents didn't like Bismarck's Germany and cleared out.

Krug married at 19, worked as an iceman, an engine wiper, a day laborer to get through the state university, and here he is now, with a daughter and a son, and a tremendously important key position in the country's great war effort.

He keeps at his task 70 to 80 hours a week, for all that he seems too heavy for so much work. He weighs an eighth of a ton.

Gen. 'Vinegar Joe' Puts Infantry in Its Proper High Place

THERE were the tirele[illegible] legions of Caesar. There were the cool bowmen at Crecy. There were Pickett's dauntless 4,000. There are the millions of priv[illegible] on [illegible] sh[illegible] mare[illegible] will [illegible] the last say in this war, air and tanks be whatchamacall[illegible].

The man who can read the history of infantry and [illegible] fire is a cold fish. And if, [illegible] rumor runs, Lieut. Gen. Jo[illegible]lwell talks up its virtues so [illegible] and so long that he skimp[illegible] the fighters aloft and on wheels, h[illegible]thusiasm is understandable.

Of course, the rumor may have grown out of all conscience with repetition. The general did pass up an airplane and foot it 400 miles into India after the Japs swarmed into Burma. But he will hardly have come to Washington to ask just for more G.I. field shoes and feet to wear them out chasing Japs in China.

Shoes or whatever, a recording of the general's requests would be fun. Politer biographers refer to his sulphurous speech. They mean that the general sometimes calls a spade a—spade. He isn't Vinegar Joe for nothing. He isn't Uncle Joe for nothing, either. He may cuss —didn't Grant?—but ever since he got into the army his men have sworn by him.

He has been in the army for nigh onto 37 years. Now he is a stubby, bony, cropped-haired, eagle-nosed, bright-eyed 59-year-old hellion who will fight alongside his beloved infantrymen with the cook's meat saw if no better weapon can be found in a hurry.

His high post in China is a trifle accidental. Not of the army's elite, though he went to West Point, he set out 20 years ago to learn the Chinese language. China assignments followed. So he was Johnny-on-the-spot when the Japanese decided that Der Tag had come.

When Your Back Hurts

And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

Farmers Should Prepare For Leaf Worm Attack

Alabama Farmers should be on the lookout for an invasion of cotton leaf worms this yeor as they have already made their appearnce in southern texas. They usually make their appearance there in early May but this year appeared the first week in April

If arsenicals are used to control the boll weevil or bollworm, the leaf worm will be controlled at the same time.

Plans Available For Potato Dehydrators

Steel is now available for use in making sweet potato dehydrators for the production of livesaock feed. Plons for constructing the dehydrator may be obtained free from the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railrood Company of Birmingham, for use in manufcturing tre dehydrators. The machine has a capacity of 300 to 400 pounds of dried feed per hour nd costs less than $2,000 ao construct.

Saving Best Chickens Will Increase Broiler Production

Hotcherymen and poultrymen who plan to raise chicks for meat production next year may improve the quality of their stock by selecting their breeders for fast feothering, efficient rapid growth, and superior meat prothction, says John Ivey, extension poultryman, Alaboma Polytechnic Institute.

Fast feathering s espesially desirable in broilers to elminate pinfeathers in market birds. This may be detected in day-old chicks by the length and number of the wingfeaaher sheaths. The best type of chicks for broiler stock have well-developed primaries and secondairies with 6 or more secondaireis. Poorer types have secondaireies that are so well developed, or with fewer of them, and in some cases very short primaries. The feather sheafths may be found easily in the down at the outer edge of the wings. When chicks of this type are selecaed for next year's breeding flock, they should be raised by themselves or marked in some manner.

Efficient rapid growth is best judged by body weights at [illegible] obout 4 weeks [illegible] the most satisfactory [illegible] time they are 4 or even 5 [illegible] should be kept for the b[illegible] Another check [illegible] the [illegible]

Superior meat pro[illegible] by the develop[illegible] not later than 12 weeks. [illegible] breast meat is the most valued part of broiler it is important that this characteristic be given considerable attention. Only those birds with well meated breasts should be retained for breeding purposes.

When the Long Distance Telephone Operator
SAYS: "I'm sorry, due to heavy business, there will be a one- or two-hour delay on your call". . .

It Means: All long distance telephone lines to the place you are calling are overcrowded with urgent war business.

Under such conditions, if your call isn't extremely urgent, it will help a lot if you will tell the operator to cancel your call, so as to avoid still further crowding of the lines.

If your call is important, but you can wait until some other time to talk, then tell the operator to cancel the call, and try again when you find the lines are less crowded.

The deeper we get into this war, the greater the demand for more and more long distance telephone service for war agencies. Their calls must go over the same lines that civilians use.

So in order to give all aid possible to those who are responsible for the successful carrying on of this war, we are asking civilians to make only the most necessary long distance telephone calls, and to be brief on all calls.

May we count on your cooperation?

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Neither South American sources of natural rubber nor expansion of Guayule Cryptostegia and all other rubber-bearing shrub production will produce any large amount of satisfactory rubber for some years, according to government agencies.

In 1941, 86 per cent of all travel by Americans was in cars.

No gas! No cars! Ban on pleasure driving brought a drop of about 80 per cent in the passenger cars on the streets of New York City. Jay walkers had a holiday in the automobile deserted main streets.

Five in a car instead of just the driver and one passenger means that 8 tires are saved, if the average of three cars to five war plant workers is considered. The amount of rubber in 8 tires is enough for 72 gas masks, or for life rafts and rubber life jackets for 8 plane crews.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox, Jr. March 11 Lieut. Bulkeley delivered to the squadron their secret orders to take General MacArthur's party and some additional personnel to the southern islands where they would be met by transport planes which would carry General MacArthur to his new headquarters. The weather was bad. Lieut. Kelly is speaking.

CHAPTER XI

"Shortly thereafter we were supposed to make a landfall—an island about half a mile square, at which point we must turn in order to make the final landfall which would bring us into port.

"With such a wind and sea, we were probably retarded, but by how much? I had to guess at it. Also the helmsman was having a wrestling match with the wheel—it was all he could do to keep within ten degrees on either side of the compass course—which meant a possible error of twenty degrees. We missed the island entirely in the dark, and from then on until dawn I changed course as I thought necessary. Dawn came at six and we saw land ahead, a point which I thought was the peninsula just west of Cagayan, our destination. I showed it to the Admiral, and he shook his head with satisfaction.

"We were up to top speed now, carbon burned from the motors, and at 6:30 we sighted the light on the point at Cagayan's entrance. We slowed to let the 41 boat lead the way, as it had the channel charts.

"General Sharp, commanding officer of the island of Mindanao, was down to meet us, and as soon as we could see the pier we woke up General MacArthur," said Bulkeley. "He shook the salt water out of his gold general's cap, flipped it on his head—somehow it always lands at a jaunty angle, seems to go with his cane—and looked around with his jaw set—a fine figure of a soldier.

"Then he said to me, 'Bulkeley, I'm giving every officer and man here the Silver Star for gallantry. You've taken me out of the jaws of death, and I won't forget it!'

"Still later that afternoon he told me: 'If the boats never accomplish anything more and were burned now, they'd have earned their keep a thousand times over. If possible, when I get to Melbourne I'll get you and your key men out.'

"We arrived on the thirteenth. Four flying fortresses from Australia were supposed to have met the General. One cracked up on the take-off, two came down in the Australian desert, and the one which finally arrived had supercharger trouble and had to turn around and go back without any passengers, so MacArthur didn't get away until the eighteenth.

"We told the crews to keep quiet, not to let it get out whom we'd brought in, so the Japs wouldn't find out and maybe attack while MacArthur was waiting."

"The afternoon we arrived," said Kelly, "Bulkeley told us what MacArthur had said about getting us out if he could. It was good news, but we weren't exactly excited. For if the air force couldn't get even one serviceable plane up here from Australia to take MacArthur out, what chance had we?

"Our job, I knew, would be to fight out the war in the southern islands—with torpedoes while we had them, and on land with rifles when they were expended. So better not get our hopes up.

"[illegible] boats were to be anchored [illegible] beach, and before I left mine, I told my executive officer to check on the anchor—we were close to the beach and there was a lot of surf pounding the coral. Just to make doubly sure, I went on the forecastle for a last inspection myself. The line seemed taut. I tugged to make sure, and it came loose in my hand.

" 'Start the engines immediately! They were started in thirty seconds, but five seconds later there was a grinding scrape—one propeller had hit bottom. The other engine conked out, and when we did get it going it was too late, the waves were slapping at us broadside, each breaker driving us farther on the beach.

"I yelled over to the 41 boat to get under way and give us a tow but by the time we'd tied her line onto ours, we were stuck—hard and fast. We worked furiously four hours until the tide had gone out, and by midnight we were solid as concrete, in water so shallow that now there were only three feet of water aft and less than a foot forward. Impossible to get off that night. I went to bed disgusted.

"Next morning I was up at five and there she was high and dry except for six inches of water at her stern, and a crowd of natives gawking! It all happened because the anchor shackle had parted—the threads stripped. It was the old story—continuous usage and no replacement of parts.

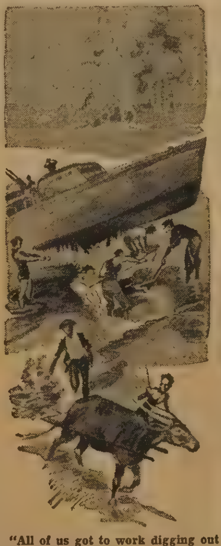
"Sunday, we were again up at dawn. We had persuaded the army to lend us a sergeant and a working party of native troops, and we started digging and pounding away at the coral the propellers and rudders had chewed into.

"I called the crew into the forward compartment and told them the skipper had left it up to us. I talked about what the old boat had done to date with them in it—sunk two ships and two landing boats. So now, were we going to let this be her end—sit by and watch the surf pound her to pieces? Or were we going to get her off?

" 'You're damn right we're going to get her off!' they said, and someone suggested maybe we could hire work gangs of natives to help us, whereupon the whole crowd started pulling money out of their pockets and piling it on the table. They'd had no pay since the start of the war, but since they'd been down here in Mindanao, they'd had shore leave and a chance to play poker with the army. The government could cut the cost of the war by just paying the army and then giving the sailors a chance to play poker with them.

"We hired what men we could, and all of us got to work with them digging out those razor-sharp coral boulders with our naked hands. But there were other boulders fifty yards out. We got some dynamite and worked all one afternoon pounding holes in them and blowing them up. With our money we hired natives driving carabao to pull pieces away, at the rate of one peso for the native and another for the carabao.

"We were about ready now for the test," said Lieutenant Kelly. "Another army tug showed up. We hitched a line onto it, we bridled the wheelhouse of the first tug with a line, and as the tide came in we took soundings. The 34 boat needed five foot of water to float—that meant we'd had to dig a two-foot hole under her—had we done it?



"All of us got to work digging out those coral boulders."

"High tide was nine o'clock at night. At 8:45 the two tugs started a steady pull; she didn't budge. The water churned as we took soundings. As nine approached, we signaled the tugs to give everything they had. At 9:03 the 34 gave a sudden lurch—she was free and would fight once more! But first something had to be done about her back end—rudders, struts, and propellers were a jumble of bent steel.

"Before he left for Del Monte the skipper had told us he'd heard of a little machine shop up the coast at Anaken which might possibly have tools to straighten out steel if by some miracle we got her free. So we begged a tug from an army colonel to tow us up there. We were gone ten days, and I missed one of the high spots of the whole campaign while we were gone."

"It wasn't much," Bulkeley insisted. "Just one of those things where they thank you if you do it, but give you hell if you fail. The army called me in and said that President Quezon was over on Negros Island, and if he could be brought over here, they hoped to get him to Australia by plane. The trip to Negros was risky—seven Jap destroyers were loose in the vicinity. Probably to cut off Quezon's escape. So they weren't going to order it.

"So we left at seven o'clock—I was in the 41 boat and Akers was commanding the 35. Off Apo Island, we sighted one Jap destroyer, but luckily she didn't see us and we could dodge around the island in time. It was one o'clock when we entered Dumaguete—it was pitch-dark; both the town and the harbor were blacked out. We had no chart—I'd never been there before—and when we pulled up to the pier—no President! However, his aide, Major Soriano, was there to meet us. He said three hours ago, after we had already left Mindanao, Quezon had got a telegram from General Wainwright ordering him to cancel the trip—there were so many Jap craft in the neighborhood it was too risky. But Soriano said as long as I was here, maybe we could go over to the President's home—it was about forty-five kilometers away—and he might change his mind. We went ripping over there in Sariano's car at sixty miles an hour. Quezon was up, dressed, and considerably interested. He listened to us, looked me over very carefully—I had a long black beard then, which must have been quite impressive—and finally said he'd go. (Later on when he saw me in Melbourne, shaved, he said he'd never disregarded Wainwright's orders if he'd known he was riding with a mere child of thirty.) Anyway, Quezon and his family were loaded into cars and we were off.

"Meanwhile I'd left Akers on patrol outside the harbor. If a Jap destroyer came nosing around, I didn't want him to cut off our retreat and figured Akers could handle him."

"I was riding back and forth, about two miles offshore in my 35 boat," said Akers, "keeping my eyeballs peeled for any of these seven Jap destroyers, when all of a sudden there was a thud and a splintering noise—we had crashed into a submerged object, a raft with metal on it apparently, which ripped a twenty-foot strip out of our bow. Water came pouring in, and we got busy with buckets and pump—"

"—and kept right on with your patrol —" said Bulkeley — "which took plenty of guts."

"The water kept gaining on us, but we thought we could hold it until Bulkeley got back with Quezon to the pier, although I knew we could never get her back to Mindanao in that condition. When I saw the lights of the car I figured it was safe to come into the harbor. She was sinking fast then, so we left her in a place where she would drift on the sand and in the morning the army could salvage her machine guns. Then we all climbed aboard the 41 boat with Bulkeley and the Quezon party. You might say that was the end of the 35 boat, and yet it wasn't quite, although she fought her last fight. Bulkeley was working frantically to keep the squadron together. A few days later he came over, plugged the hole temporarily, and towed her back to Cebu, where we hoisted her on the marine railway for repairs. We burned her just before the Japs came into the town."

"The trip back with Quezon was as rough as I'll ever see," said Bulkeley. "We left at three o'clock with one-hundred-twenty miles to go before dawn. At four o'clock a big sea landed us a punch in the jaw which knocked two torpedoes loose in their tubes and instantly they started a hot run—a terrific hissing of compressed air, the propellers grinding, it sounded like the end of the world.

"In a situation like that," said Bulkeley. "The logical thing is to get them out by firing an impulse charge—touch off some black powder in the rear of the tube which sends them scooting. But we were having trouble with the mechanism—it took a minute to get this done, and meantime the two aft torpedoes were sticking out of the tubes so far they seemed about to fall, so the two torpedomen, Houlihan and Light, got out on them with their feet, hanging on by their hands to the forward tubes, and tried to kick them loose. They couldn't, but they certainly impressed President Quezon, who, when he got to Australia, gave them the Distinguished Conduct Star of the Philippines for what they did that night, as well as to Ensign Cox and me. And it was a ticklish job for the torpedomen too. Before we blew the torpedoes out, their back ends, where their motors are, turned pink and then bright red from the heat. On a normal run, of course, the surrounding water keeps them cool. But out of the water, they're not nice things to crawl around on.

"At first President Quezon didn't understand what was going on, and asked why we were getting ready to fire the two torpedoes. Not wanting to worry him unnecessarily, I said we were just firing them at the enemy, who was near by. When we got him ashore at Oroquieta, I explained that we'd really been in quite a dangerous situation.

"We found a passage through the coral reef outside Oroquieta just at dawn and found General Sharp waiting in his car. In order not to be recognized, Quezon tied a red bandanna over his face below his eyes. But the natives all knew him in spite of it—hats were waving from the sidewalk as he rode off down the street."

"We missed it all," said Kelly, "because we were up there in Anaken trying to repair the crumpled steel in our hind end at that little oversize garage back among the bamboo which they called a machine shop. Native divers, holding their breath, took off the struts and shafts of the rudders and the propellers. We tried to pound the propellers back into shape with hammers on palm logs, while the proprietor did his best to straighten the rest in his machine shop.

"Finally there was a trial run. She'd make only 12 knots—a fraction of her normal speed—and the vibration was terrible; you'd think someone had packed an earthquake in our lazaret.

Invention on Shooting Oil Wells Led to 16,000 Suits

The invention of the Roberts Torpedo in 1866 was followed by the greatest patent litigation in American history, says Collier's. Before the legality of its patent was upheld by the United States Supreme court in 1880, this device for shooting oil wells was so widely infringed upon that more than 16,000 suits and countersuits were filed, all those brought to a decision being won by the inventor.

Around The World With Capt. Newman

The W. M. S. of the First Babtist Church of Clanton is happy to present Capt. J. B. Newman, world traveller and lecturer, as their guest speaker at an open meeting Monday, May 31 at 8:00 o'clock p. m., in the auditorium of the First Baptist Church. Captain Newman, a brother-in-law of Major Harwell Davis, President of Howard College, will illustrate his lecture with moving pictures. The public is most cordially invited to attend this meeting of unusual interest.

PATTERSON HICKS NAMED TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN WAR BOND COMMITTEE

Patterson Hicks, principal of the Chilton County High School and prominent in the public life of the county was named temporary chirman of the County War Bond Cowmittee to succeed L. H. Reynolds who resigned because of ill health., at a meeting at the courthouse recently.

A state representative met with the body to select a leader and as none was available at that time, Prof Hicks agreed to accept the place as temporary chairman until one could be obtained.

Chairmanship of this committee takes practically the full time of anyone doing the job properly and requires a man who is familiar with the county and its people, a hard worker, and able to make this sacrifice for his country.

HEALTH HAZARDS IN YOUR FOOD

Food effects health in many ways The person interested in sanitation however is primarily concerned with the source, quality, method of handling and storing of food to be consumed by the public at large. Disease germs may gain access to food stuff in several ways. They may find lodgement at source of production, during transportation, handling or coming in contact with unclean containers, by contact with unclean workmen, infestation of plant by flies, dirt and roaches. The problem of food sanitation increased during this war time period A rapid turn-over in the food handling establishments personnel had resulted in the hiring of untrained workers who do not have a working knowledge of the proper means of handling food, the result being new hazards introduced constantly. Inspection of all food handling establishments by the local health department to insure a safe, wholesome and clean food supply is constantly carried on.

This was not gained by law enforcement but by a better understanding of methods. As a whole no operator will allow the service area in an establishment to become diray but the processing area or kitchen does not receive the attention that the service area does, consequently kitchens are not open for public inspection. The public is becomming more vocal in its demands for safe and wholesome food. Food handling establishment operators must bear in mind that the public is entitled to safe wholesome food. Food handling procedure can be improved by the operator. Proper care must be taken for all food handled is human food The operator can take a look and ask himself the question "Is my food safe"? Full co-operation is insurance that an establishment can continue to operate and save satisfied customers

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our deepest gratitude and sincerest thanks to all our friends and neighbors for all their many acts of kindness and the nice donations that have been given to Odis. who has been sick since January. He loves company and would appreciate any one visiting him that will.

Make Application Now For Farm Loans

Farmers fo Chilton County who have the necessary qualifications and want to be considered for loans with which to buy family-type farms of their own under the United States Deparment of Agriculture's Farm Ownership Progrom should apply immediately to the Farm Security Administration office at Clanton announces Mr. Durbin, County Farm Security Administration Supervisor.

Under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act a limited number of loans can be made in designated counties each year to farm tenants.- sharecroppers, or farm laborers who are American citizens to enable them to buy farms of sufficient size to support their families adequately. The loans are payable within forty years at 3 percent interest. In the 5 years that the Farm Ownership Program has operated in this county, 54 families have achieved farm ownership through these loans. The Farm Ownership Committee passes on the applications for all loans involving purchase of farms and they must also approve the farm to be purchased. Anyone who has a farm for sale may list same in the Farm Security Administration office.

AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Next Sabbath being the Fifth Sabbath, Rev. J. D. MdPhail will preach at the Clantin Presbyterian Church. at 11 o'clock a. m. and 8 p. m.

Those who do not attend other services have a cordial invitation to worship with us.

The Pastor will arrive in Clanton on Saturday morning. Should there be any sickness he would be glad to be notified so that he might visit them.

Route 4 Citizen Aids In War Effort

MR. E. S. Morgon
Regional Director
Farm Security Adm.
Montgomery, Alabama

Dear Sir:

I am a borrower of the Farm Security Adm. I am aware of the fact that we are in war, I feel that every man should do his best to use the means that is placed in his reach, to bring the best results in his farm, to help win this war. I served about 12 or 14 hours each day last year on my farm. I did produce a great deal of food. I had 20 acres in corn, 1 0acres in cotton, 5 acres in peanuts, 2 acres in sorgom. 1 acre in sugar cane, 1 acre in tomatoees, 2 acres in peas, 1 acre in home garden, 6 acres in peach trees, 1 acre in potatoes, 6 acres in hay. I raised 100 chickens, I kept three brood sows, I raised 20 head of pigs. I had 4 milch cows. Have bought only $1.00 in bonds and stamps, will buy more, have collected 1000 pounds of scrap iron. I still feel under obligation to do more, This year I have planed to add to every crop some. And to increase my chickens, hogs and cattle all I can. To buy more bonds and stamps and to collect more scrap iron. To raise what I live on at home and all that I can to sell.

Very truly yours,
W. B. Henley,

Farmers Must Report Intentions For 1943 Incentive Payments

The Chilton County office of the Agricultural Adjustment Agency was notified this week that in order for farmers to be eligible for incentive payment on the 1943 crop of Irisr potatoes and fresh vegetables it is necessary that a statement of intention to participate be filed prior to July 1, according to Mr. Joe S. Campbell, County Administrative Officer.

Present plans are that copies of "Intention to Participate" will be mailed within the next few days to the operator of each farm (1) for which an Irish potato or vegetable goal was established, (2) who indicated on his farm plan sheet that he intended to plant more than 2.7 acres of either Irish potatoes or vegetables, and (3) the operator of each farm on which there may be planted more than 2.7 acres of either Irish potatoes or vegetables.

This form which requires only the signature of the 1943 farm operator need not be returned to the county AAA office in person but it may be either mailed to the County AAA Office or delivered to the farmer's community committeeman.

Incentive payments will be made on Irish potatoes at the rate of 50 cents on each bushel of the farm normal yield on the acreage planted in excess of 90 percent of the farm goal up to 110 percent of the goal. The incentive payment for vegetables is $50.00 per acre in excess of 90 percent of the farm goal up to 110 percent of the goal.

"These payments will be made to Chilton County farmers at the same time they receive their regular 1943 AAA payments," Campbell explained. "but it is necessary that every farm operator file the copy of his "Intention to Participate" before July 1; unless he does payment cannot be made to him even though his farm might otherwise have earned an incentive payment."

Vegetable crops that will qualify for payment, if planted between February 1 and September 1, are: Carrots. snap beans, lima beans, beets, tomatoes, cabbage, onions, green (English) peas, and the double or triple cropped acreage of other vegetables except cucumbers, watermelons, canteloupes, and other commercial bulbs and flowers.

Rationing News

WAR RATIOS BOOK NO. 3

Application cards have been handed to every family in Alabama for filing and application for Ration Book No. 3 If your family has not received this application ask for it at the post office by June 1.

Specific instructions are given on this application for filling it out. Fill it out listing names and birthday of each member of your household. Be sure that this form is complete n every detail then a three cent stamp on it and mail before June 10.

Miss Mattie Jo Barber, the Chilton County Home Demonstration Agent, has mailed instructions to each of the agriculture planning leaders in the county, showing just how these applications should be filled out. If any one is not certain just how his blank should be completed, if he will see the agriculture planning leader in his neighborhood, information will be given him as to how this should be done.

These blanks must be properly filled out, or no ration book 3 will be issued. After form is complete be sure to detach stub, which is tre part at the top, and save this until ration book 3 is received. This stub is your receipt that your application has been filed.

The community service member of the ration office wishes to acknowledge the much appreciated service of Miss Barber in getting these instructions to the people of the county.

CANNING SUGAR

Stamps Nos. 15 and 16 in War Ration Book No. I are valid until Oct., 31, 1943 for 5 pounds of sugar each for home canning.

These stamps are to be handled by the trade in the same way as other sugar stamps have been handled.

Local boards may grant up to 15 pounds of sugar per person for canning purposes when 10 pounds has not been sufficient.

In all cases you are asked not to use more than 1 pound per gallon for canning purposes, and not more than 5 pounds per person for preserving.

Renewal Applications for Gasoline

All "C" gasoline renewal applications are being mailed out as rapidly as possible. If you are a holder of a "C" stamp and do not get your application by Saturday May 29, please call by local ration office and sign application for renewal. The renewal applications are to be in the local office by June 1.

MARS HILL

Our singing Sunday was extra good considering the weather. We had visitors from different parts of the county's of Chilton, Shelby, Jefferson, Bibb and Dallas.

Mrs. Ola Littlejohn of Lawley spent the week end wth Mr. and Mrs. Howard Roper.

Cpl. Slim Cofer of Camp Shelby, Miss., spent Sunday wth family and friends.

Miss Una Roper and Miss Leafie Smith spent the week end with Mrs. Maggie Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Scott of Birmingham are spending their vocation with family and friends.

William Cofer of Tarrant City spent the week end with Martis Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Berney Gothard spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Fazier Cofer.

Mrs. Rena Mms. Misses Laura Nell and Dot Ervin, Mr. Ernest Abbott spent Saturday night wih Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gothard.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Langston of Birmingham spent Saturday night with Mr and Mrs Cleve Langston.

We are sorry that Miss Mollie Gothard is back in the hospital. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

Mr and Mrs. Wilton Downing and baby of Clanton spent Saturday nite with Mr and Mrs Aarin Scott.

ARCHIE'S CHAPEL

The following services will be held at Orchie's Chapel this week-end:

Saturday—3 o'clock, Women's Missionary Society. 7:30 o'clock Church Services.

Sunday—10 o'clock Sunday School Supt. Mrs. Allie Cook. 11 o'clock Church Service.

EASTVIEW

The children and young people of the community are asked to meet at the Church at four o'clock Friday afternoon to start work on a Children's day program.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Invasion of Attu Is Second Step In Drive to Oust Japs From Aleutians; Discount Rumors of Nazi-Italian Rift As Allies Plan Heavy Knockout Blows

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Pictured are members of the delegation of the United States to the United Nations conference on food and agriculture at Hot Springs, Va. Left to right, seated: Murray D. Lincoln, executive secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation; Miss Josephine Schain; Judge Marvin Jones, conference chairman. Standing: Paul H. Appleby, undersecretary of agriculture; W. L. Clayton, assistant secretary of commerce, and Thomas Parran, M.D., surgeon general, U. S. Public Health Service.

ATTU:
Second Step in Aleutians

Firmly established on Attu, westernmost of the Aleutian islands in Japanese hands, strong American forces pushed forward against bitter opposition by the enemy.

First to admit the American landings, the Japs also were first to confess that heavy U. S. aerial and naval bombardments provided an irresistible cover for a continuing stream of reinforcements.

Presaging their defeat on Attu, the Japs made much of the claim that their troops were fighting numerically superior forces.

In Washington, Col. R. Ernest Dupuy declared that the attack on Attu was the second step in the drive to oust the Japs from the Aleutians. The first, he said, was the American occupation of Amchitka and Adak to establish bases from which to strike not only Attu but also Kiska, 172 miles to the east.

FOOD CONFERENCE:
Post-War Agriculture

Reconstruction of agriculture in Europe after the war was the principal subject of discussion among the representatives attending the United Nations food conference in Hot Springs, Va.

According to Marvin H. Jones, chairman of the parley and head of the U. S. delegation, conferees are chiefly concerned with getting the farmlands of reclaimed countries back into production.

Problems connected with such an effort, such as adequate distribution of supplies and materials, and the planning for the production of crops which would furnish local populations with nutritional diets, were brought into study.

The conference, in the nature of a discussion, brings no binding agreements among the nations, Jones said. Representatives will present conclusions of the conference to their respective governments for further action.

ITALY:
No Setup

After a sudden welter of rumor, it appeared as though the Allies would have to take Italy the hard way. The Italians and Nazis gave no sign of handing it over on a silver platter.

King Victor Emmanuel answered wild rumors originated by the Free French that he was about to abdicate by appearing at an art exhibition in Rome to receive the applause of his subjects.

Talk that Hitler was preparing to abandon Italy to its fate and draw all Nazi forces into the Brenner pass were immediately counteracted by plentiful assurances in the German press that Der Fuehrer had no such idea.

Allied airmen apparently were the first to take these rumors with a grain of salt. Even as the abdication talk, etc., intrigued the arm chair strategists, bombers were plastering the seaplane base of Lido di Roma, 15 miles from the Italian capital. Hangars, moorings and planes were the targets.

Rome admitted damage in the vicinity, but claimed Axis planes had bombed Algerian harbors "with good results."

RECIPROCAL TRADE:
Renewal Fought

Renewal of President Roosevelt's authority to negotiate reciprocal trade treaties with foreign countries was the subject of heated debate in congress, with successful efforts to limit the life of the President's power to two years.

Claimed as a great contribution to stable international relations by its advocates, and opposed as a dangerous threat to our tariff system by its foes, the Reciprocal Trade act passed through the house only after fierce debate and a two-year limitation on its existence.

Inspired by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, administration forces contended that renewal of the act now was necessary to assure the world that we were prepared to participate in the revival of international commerce and stabilize employment and marketing in other countries.

Foes of the act said it had failed to avert war since its creation in 1934. They tried to limit its operations by offering amendments which would allow congress to review treaties; permit domestic producers to testify against provisions of any treaty, and prevent the importation of products when they sold for less than the American cost of production.

WHEAT:
May Increase Acreage

With some officials claiming current consumption of wheat will run 500 million bushels over the 1943 crop of 690,000,000 bushels, the War Food administration has been debating about the possibility of increasing acreage allotment next year by 20 to 25 per cent.

If the WFA has hesitated in deciding on an increase, it has been for fear that production of other important staples like corn, flaxseed, soybeans and peas would drop. The problem centers around boosting wheat output without sacrificing other yields.

This year, 55 million acres of wheat were seeded, and intended increases would add 11 million acres. At a normal yield of 12 bushels to the acre, the WFA estimates the extra plantings would produce a crop of 792 million bushels.

HOSPITAL SHIP:
Sunk by Japs

With its red cross sign brightly lighted and the whole vessel fully illuminated, the Australian hospital ship Centaur was silently plying through placid waters to New Guinea.

Suddenly a terrific explosion shook the ship, and in a moment, it was wrapped in raging orange flames. As many of the vessel's complement of 363 fought to escape the burning hulk, the ship went down, only 64 surviving.

Cause of the sinking: a Japanese torpedo. Even as some of the survivors clung shakily to a raft, they could see the submarine's lights flickering over the dark sea.

Said Gen. Douglas MacArthur: "I cannot express the revulsion I feel at this unnecessary act of cruelty . . . The Red Cross will not falter under this foul blow. Its light of mercy will but shine the brighter on our way to eventual victory."

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

CASUALTIES: British losses in the Middle East and Africa have totaled 220,000 since Italy entered the war.

GOOD REASON: Love-sickness was accepted as a reason for allowing an essential woman employee to leave her job in the States and take another in Pearl Harbor—beside her sweetheart.

OPA: President Roosevelt has asked for an appropriation of $177,000,000 to operate the Office of Price Administration during the fiscal year 1944.

BOOKS: Some 35 million pocket-size editions of popular books will be published on order for the army, navy and marine corps for service men.

RUML PLAN:
In Again, Out Again

Passed by the senate, the Ruml plan was rejected by the house for the third time, in the wake of an open letter from President Roosevelt indicating he would veto such a bill.

As a result of the action, some form of pay-as-you-go legislation was put squarely up to a conference committee of the house and senate.

The committee had two bills as a basis on which to map pay-as-you-go. One was the senate measure modeled after the Ruml plan, forgiving all of either the 1942 or 1943 income tax, whichever is lower, and only assessing incomes in excess of normal. The other was the house bill, only wiping out the regular 6 per cent tax plus the first surtax rate of 13 per cent on 1942 income.

In both cases, a 20 per cent withholding tax would be taken out of all weekly or monthly wages after deductions of lawful exemptions to apply on the 1943 tax. Farmers and professional people would pay on their estimated tax in quarterly installments, making a final settlement on March 15 of the following year.

PRODUCTION:
On Schedule

"On all important categories in the President's (war production) program we are up to and ahead of schedule."

With these words, War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson described the nation's booming industrial effort. Only in the matter of airplanes did he speak with reservation, declaring the situation was one with emphasis now placed on quality rather than quantity.

Changing needs of the services may necessitate some alterations in production plans, Nelson said, echoing reports that revised schedules have slowed the tempo of some plants while increasing it in others.

Tank production has been chopped, Nelson revealed, since Great Britain and Russia have reduced their estimates of their needs.

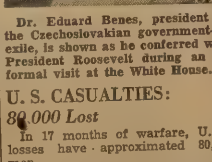
GERMANY:
Ruhr Flooded

Flying at an altitude of 100 feet, four-engined British Lancasters dropped heavy mines in the huge reservoirs of the Eder and Mohne dams in northwestern Germany. Then British airmen watched the mines swirl into the dams' sluices, explode and break open big breaches through which the pent-up waters roared to deluge the Ruhr and Wesser valleys below.

Hydro-electric stations throughout the area were crippled by the rising flood waters; traffic on the vital Mittleland canal, which unites all of Germany's river transportation, was disrupted, and the important industrial city of Kassel and others beyond were inundated.

Reports reaching Switzerland said at least 4,000 people had been killed and 120,000 made homeless by the torrents. The German high command admitted property damage and casualties "were very high as wells of water rushed through populated districts."

Visitor



Dr. Eduard Benes, president of the Czechoslovakian government-in-exile, is shown as he conferred with President Roosevelt during an informal visit at the White House.

U. S. CASUALTIES:
80,000 Lost

In 17 months of warfare, U. S. losses have approximated 80,000 men.

Army casualties include 6,076 killed; 12,277 wounded; 24,345 missing, and 12,244 reported prisoners. Of the wounded, 4,000 have returned to duty or been discharged from hospitalization. The major losses in prisoners or missing were suffered in the Philippines.

In the navy, 7,218 have been killed, 4,683 wounded, and 12,061 missing. Since September, 1941, the merchant marine has reported 4,555 casualties.

COAL TRUCE:
Still Friends

Continuing to act in unison, Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes and United Mine Workers' chief John Lewis arranged for a 15-day truce in the tangled mine situation.

Once before, the two had agreed to a 15-day breathing spell, as 465,000 bituminous and anthracite miners were preparing to stay away from the pits. Miners were lining up behind Lewis again to strike when extension of the truce was announced.

Here's Sailor Who Quite Well Knows His Turbulent Sea

NEW YORK.—It was a good, hop skip and jump that carried th amphibious forces of Rear Admira Richmond Kelly Turner onto th Russell Islands.Nortl of Guadal canal, they are tha much nearer Tokyo and the day o reckoning which the admiral ha been helping to shape since Pear Harbor.

Turner has spent 19 years on th uneasy, untrustworthy bosom of th sea since he finished Annapolis i 1908. He was married two year later, so his wife has been a nav widow almost half the time. He i 57 years old, has a DSM and wa born in Oregon.

Four years ago the admiral had a fine, close look at Tokyo which may help on the cheerful day an American task force goes boiling past Boso peninsula. He was a cruiser captain then, and the cruiser had just borne home all that was mortal of the late Ambassador Hiroshi Saito, dead in the United States. The emperor shook Turner's hand and expressed undying friendship, but didn't add that his fingers were crossed against December 7, 1941.

Already Turner has squared accounts somewhat. His were the plans on which our invasion of Guadalcanal was based. He bet that he would catch the Japanese napping there and he did. The first convoy unloaded men, guns, supplies before the enemy sea force discovered what was up.

Later, when we lost four cruisers, the issue was nip-and-tuck but then we caught two bevies of Japanese warships with their sampans down and after that even Tojo agreed that Turner had called the turn.

Russ Boy Wonder In Class of Our Sheridan, Jackson

STONEWALL JACKSON was only in his late thirties when he was giving lessons to arthritic generals sent out from Washington. Phil Sheridan was still younger when his hell-for-leather cavalry was easing Grant's work. Now in Russia, older than Sheridan, younger than Jackson, Konstantin Rokossovsky climbs to a full generalship over crumpled Nazi armies.

Rokossovsky is just rounding 38. In the first weeks of the war he rose from colonel to major-general. This because of a heady, stubborn defense that stalled the first Nazi blitz for a month back of Smolensk. Ten weeks later he set going Russia's first counter-offensive and elbowed the Germans so solidly that Stalin moved him up a notch.

In last year's bleak fighting before Moscow the Germans outnumbered Rokossovsky three to one. Just the same he was able to put 200 tanks, 29,000 enemy out of action in October alone. This year he broke the Nazis at Stalingrad.

His employment of cavalry has been notable and once was inspired. This was when he rushed cossacks in massed raids behind the German rear, a disruptive triumph in the great tradition begun by Greek Philip and Alexander and kept going by Parthian Surena, Roman Belisanius and, to skip a lot of centuries and a lot of good cavalrymen, Sheridan and Jeb Stuart, another boy wonder.

Rokossovsky is big, handsome, with a wide, full mouth, a broad, untroubled forehead and a right eyebrow that cocks higher than the left, maybe in astonishment at his own rise.

It Seems a Testy Critic of National Pollyannism Is He

IF JEREMIAH could come back he would get plenty of sympathy from Robert F. Patterson. As Hilkiah's son worried over his careless people's plight, so the undersecretary of war worries over too much optimism about this global muddle of ours.

He talks gloomily of gasless fighting planes, because, he says, tough Bill Jeffers tapped our oil supply so heavily to make rubber. Recently he said: "We cannot be sure of victory in 1945. We must have an army of at least 8,200,000." He said we must put a legal curb on absentee workers.

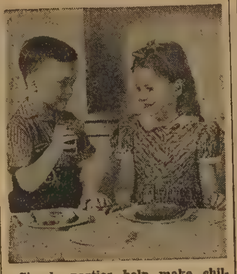
Patterson has cause to be quite satisfied with his personal record. He quit a prosperous law practice for a federal judgeship, resigning this when he was asked to take hold under Secretary of War Stimson three years ago.

This is the second war that he has gotten into. He finished the last one a major, with a Distinguished Service cross and one wound stripe. He also saw service on the Mexican border. Now he bosses a new generation of our fighting men from a heavy desk in Washington, but he flies his own plane, and in a pinch might do active duty again for all that he is 52.

He is a trim 52, with a long, stubborn upper lip, and the high narrow forehead that suggests percipience. His intimates say he is fast-moving, concise.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Children Need Good, Wholesome Foods At Their Parties



Simple parties help make children at ease with their friends, do a lot toward laying the foundations for their social success. Watch them enjoy playing host and hostess as this little pair is doing.

How do you rate with your younger generation? Are you content when you keep them clean, get them off to school, and give them some extra tutoring when they need it in English or math?

Yes, that in itself is a big job, and you are doing a big job if you have that part in smooth, running order. Notice, I didn't say whole job, because unless you provide for healthy recreation and play, the child is not getting his rightful share and start in life.

Future Americans must be a social as well as business success to be wholesome and happy. To prepare the child for this, you must provide him with a social and recreational outlet—and that means an occasional party to which to invite younger friends so the child is at ease in his role as host or hostess.

There's a certain excitement at children's parties which easily upsets their tummies, and the best way to handle them is to have nourishing, wholesome food, rather than "partified" dishes which will upset them even more. You'll find cooperation from other mothers if you let them know you will do everything to make her children at ease.

Let your decoration be a bit fussy and party-ish, of course, but keep to the sensible on the food. Have table favors, of course, for this carries out the theme and the children adore it. It stimulates conversation and keeps things going smoothly.

Fresh salmon steak may be used in making the flaked salmon called for in this recipe. Serve it on small toast rounds and the children will adore it:

Salmon Timbales.

THEY WERE EXPENDABLE

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. March 11 Lieut. Bulkeley showed the squadron their secret orders. They were to take General MacArthur's party and some additional personnel to the southern islands. When they arrived safely at Cebu, General MacArthur promised Bulkeley he would try to get him and his key men out of the Philippines.

CHAPTER XII

"The skipper was frantic to get some of our little fleet back into commission so we could finish out the fight. We'd started the war with six boats. Two were lost off Bataan. One was lost on the escape trip south. That left only three, and two of these were wrecks, fit only for the dry dock, Bulkeley's being the only craft left in fighting condition. But he was bound to get the others back into shape. Did I think I could get mine to Cebu?

"Well, we could try, and we started off, my poor old boat with her earthquake making twelve knots, her back end wiggling like a shipwrecked sailor's dream of a French musical-comedy star. Whatever she was good for now, it wasn't fighting, and I was glad we didn't meet any Japs.

"The machine shop was run by 'Dad' Cleland, a seventy-one-year-old American who'd been in the islands since 1914, and a swell gent he was—originally from Minnesota and a typical hulking frontiersman. Didn't look a day over fifty and was a kind of patriarch in those parts. His native name meant 'the old man' or 'the headman' in Tagalog.

"He was a great gourmet, too. Had Bulkeley and me out to dinner and we had bottled beer (a great rarity), a big crab-meat cocktail, and then lobster Newburg, which was delicious, but 'Dad' kept warning us to hold back, because then he broke out a couple of roast ducks.

"Dessert was simple, like the last bars of a symphony. Just delicious chilled mangoes and Chase & Sanborn's coffee. It was a magnificent feed after the native chow I'd been eating. We talked about the war. People in Cebu felt the show was about up, unless miraculous help arrived soon.

" 'What are you going to do when the Japs come?' we asked 'Dad.' He straightened up—all six feet two of him.

" 'Have my dignity to think about,' he said. 'I'm not going to the hills. I'll stay right here and face them.

" 'Dad' was working for the government for a dollar a year. When he finally finished with our repairs—they took many days—we asked him how much the bill was. "We'll forget about it,' he said. 'You fight 'em and I'll fix 'em. It's the least I can do.'

"He clenched his big fist, and it was about the size of a nail keg. Since I've come back here I've read about some outfits working on war contracts who were paying their stenographers fifty thousand dollars a year and charging it to the government as expenses until they were caught. It's a waste of time to indict them. Just get old 'Dad' Cleland back here and let him go in and reason with them in their swivel chairs. With those big fists of his, he'd know how to expostulate with racketeers like that.

"Until we got to Cebu we [illegible] been paid since the war s[illegible] Well, in Cebu the men all g[illegible] and it was quite a spectac[illegible] dozen on my boat, going f[illegible] to bar, got rid of two thousa[illegible]lars in three days. If it had been two million instead, they would have got rid of it just as quick, although it might have strained them some. Then they settled back to their routine means of livelihood, which was playing poker with the army.

"But things were moving in Cebu, and very secretly we began to hear hints of a big American offensive which was coming rolling up from the south through the islands in time to save Bataan, which was almost out of food and ammunition. Word came that two submarines were arriving in Cebu, where they would be loaded with food and returned to Bataan—we brought the first one in through the channel.

"It was a big secret—the area was cleared for two miles around. The loading was done at night and by officers only—we helped until our hands were raw—because they were fearful that some sailor or soldier might drop a hint of it in a native bar where it would get to the Japs. For three solid nights we worked until my back and arms ached, stowing all that stuff in the subs, but all the time I kept thinking of Peggy and the grand old gang up there on the Rock and what was left of the peninsula—fighting on without hope or food. Well, here was a little of both we were sending them. To make more room they stripped the submarines of torpedoes—gave 'em to us, four for the 35 boat if we could ever get her into action, two for the 41 boat, which already had two, and charged them for us with compressed air from the submarine's tanks. Now MTB's were ready for battle, and into the submarine's empty tubes we stuffed food, and I kept thinking, as we shoved it in—there's another square meal for Peggy back there on the Rock.

"But that wasn't half of it. Because in addition to the subs—the last one shoved off on April 5—there were seven fat interisland steamers being secretly loaded with food down near 'Dad' Cleland's dock—medical supplies, quinine the boys were dying without, everything they needed to hold on. But how could they hope to get these fat little tubs up through the islands to Bataan? Bulkeley was to find out three days later."

"The General in command at Cebu called me in and verified the hints we'd heard of the big American offensive," said Bulkeley. "He assured me everything was set. It was to start at dawn the very next morning. That very night, twelve fortresses and heavy bombers were coming up from Australia. A swarm of P-35's were on their way up from Mindanao to Iloilo, where they were to gas up and go into action.

"The bombers were to land at Mindanao, gas up, take off, and blow the be-Jesus out of every Jap warship in the region, and meanwhile the convoy of interisland steamers would start for Bataan, bringing food enough for weeks. Bataan was to be saved after all.

"The General showed me messages from all the other generals who commanded in different islands, co-ordinating the offensive. But there was one minor hitch, he explained.

"Aerial reconnaissance had spotted a couple of Jap destroyers steaming down the coast of Negros Island. Somewhat to the eastward there was a cruiser which carried four seaplanes, but they weren't worried about it. But that afternoon reports had come in giving the progress of the Jap destroyers. Obviously they were heading toward Cebu. Maybe they had broken down our American codes and knew about the interisland steamers, and were coming in either to blockade them or to shell them at the dock.

"He clenched his big fist, and it was about the size of a nail keg."

"[illegible]y couldn't we have a part in [illegible] great offensive which tomor[illegible]s to sweep up and blast Jap s[illegible]g and warships between Min[illegible]da[illegible] Cebu, and Bataan?" Lieutenant Kelly thought, "We could be helpful by going out tonight and knocking off one or both of those Jap destroyers, which by midnight should be approaching the narrow channel between Cebu and Negros Islands. The cruiser—never mind her, American bombers would polish her off in the morning."

"Bulkeley came in at eight o'clock that night and told me about it," said Kelly. "My boat had been in the water just four hours—she was supposed to soak for twenty-four before she should be exposed to any pounding, but I asked him if we couldn't go out with him. 'I was hoping you'd like to,' the skipper told me. 'Think you can make it?' 'I don't know,' I said, 'but we'll soon find out. This'll be as good a dock trial for her as any.' "

"To man the boats I called for volunteers," said Bulkeley. "I had no trouble about that. I guess they understood by now that any man who doesn't volunteer won't be in the squadron long if I can get rid of him."

"They were all tickled to be in on the big offensive," said Kelly. "It was apparently so well prepared that the army had given us the radio frequency of the co-ordinating planes—that big American air umbrella which would be spread over us at dawn—in case we needed to talk with them."

"We got out to the island passage about 11:30 that night and sneaked in close to shore," said Bulkelely. "The moon wasn't due until 2:30. I was riding in the 41 boat, Ensign Cox commanding, while Kelly had his 34 boat. We'd worked out our strategy. If two destroyers showed up, my boat was to tackle the leading one and Kelly the second. If only one arrived, my boat would attack her on the quarter, and Kelly's on the bow.

"At five minutes to twelve Glover, the quartermaster at the wheel, called 'Look—there she is!' A black object was coming round the point. 'Jumping Jesus!' said Glover. 'There she is!'—because it was no little Jap destroyer but a thundering big Kuma class cruiser sliding around that point—so clear we could almost make out her 6-inch guns.

"I gave our boat a hard right rudder, sneaking in toward the shore where the cruiser couldn't see us. Apparently she was alone. Now we curved out, into firing position, on her port beam, making as little noise as we could, and as she passed, five hundred yards away, Cox fired two torpedoes, but they straddled her."

"We fired two from our side," said Kelly, "but they also missed."

"After that," said Ensign Cox, "we in the 41 boat made a wide arc and attacked again with our last two torpedoes—Bulkeley himself firing them, and this time two of them hit, right under the bridge. They made no flash, but a good bump and a column of water. But even before that the cruiser had waked up—probably saw the wakes of one of the torpedoes—anyway she speeded up to twenty-five knots and her searchlight came on and she waved it wildly around in the air, probably looking for torpedo planes."

"Our torpedoes were all gone in the 41 boat," said Bulkeley, "but I turned around and ran astern of the cruiser to draw her fire so Kelly could get in for his second attack. Then we saw the destroyers, but they wouldn't give chase, although I tried to create the illusion of a lot of boats by firing machine-gun tracers."

"When the cruiser's searchlight came on," said Kelly, "I turned right to cross her wake and came in on her other quarter. She picked me up astern with her lights and began banging away at me with her secondary batteries—50-calibers and 40-millimeter guns — from about twelve hundred yards. The stuff was going right over our heads in a continuous stream of fire.

"But I was good and mad because our first torpedoes had missed," said Kelly, "so I decided to chase her. I told one machine-gunner to fire at her searchlight, which was blinding me, and the others to sweep her decks to get her gun crews.

"After a few minutes' chase, we had closed in to three hundred yards—so close that her searchlight seemed to be coming right down on us from an angle—about like the sun in mid-afternoon. Then I drew out onto her starboard quarter and fired our last two torpedoes—an overtaking shot. They were the last two our squadron was to fire in the war.

"Then I gave the boat a hard right rudder and started running away—for we were defenseless now except for our machine guns. But the rain of Jap tracers kept right on, and suddenly another Jap ship showed up fifteen hundred yards away. Both started firing their main batteries at me and we were trapped between—splashes all around us now, as close as twenty-five yards. We started zigzagging wildly, trying to dodge the two searchlights, and also the stream of fire which were crisscrossing above our heads like wicker basketry, and landing in the water all around us. It seemed like weeks, but was probably only a few seconds. My junior officer, Ensign Richardson, had the wheel, while I was watching the cruiser through my binoculars. Suddenly I saw a big splash and detonation in the middle of her belly—another two seconds, another splash and detonation right in her engine room! Our overtaking shots had both hit home! Her searchlight went from bright yellow to orange to red to dull brick-red and finally winked out. Every gun stopped firing. She was jet-black now.

"But I didn't have much time for philosophizing, because this other destroyer was on my starboard bow, closing in, banging away with her 5½-inch guns and me with only 50-caliber machine guns left."

"Kelly got twenty-three salvoes of 5½-inch steel that night," said Bulkeley. "But there was no doubt that his two torpedoes polished off the cruiser. I saw her searchlight fade out, and heavy yellow smoke arise. Her stern was under in three minutes—the destroyer put the searchlight on her decks, where the Japs were all running around, not knowing where to go—and she had sunk in twenty.

"But I was running around with three destroyers after me, which were firing all they had, and I could see another one hot on Kelly's tail. That was the last I could see of him and I thought he was a goner.

"My destroyers chased me down to Misamis, but at dawn I dove into a place to hide—there were six miles of shallow water where they couldn't follow even if they had seen me. We spent the day sleeping."

Allied Food Conference Envisions World Council

International Group Would Be Empowered to Oversee Production, Distribution of 'Bread And Beef' to Feed Society of Nations.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

Back in the summer of 1940, I sat in a chair under a whispering tree and looked out over a wide and barbered lawn. The mountains were about us. We were resting in a nest carved out of the wilderness and equipped with all the luxuries that a pampered human could demand. Lovely, indolent women in sports dresses sat at tables under colored umbrellas. Handsome, indolent youths in blazers lolled beside them. Negro servants padded about with tall, cooling and expensive drinks.

I call it a "nest." I belonged there just like a cuckoo but I enjoyed it. It was all right. It helped circulate the money (I was a guest at a bankers' convention). But I thought back. Six months before I had ridden in an army transport plane over shuddering Europe. I looked about and saw the easy, harmless but useless life about me, made possible by the easy harvesting of America's riches.

I sighed (a little enviously) and said to myself: "This can't last."

It is a strange coincidence that today, at this very same spot, representatives of the United Nations are gathering to try to write the prescription for the third freedom—freedom from want.

This gathering isn't concerned with summer resorts de luxe although it meets at one. It is concerned with the proposition: We must raise the standard of living all over the globe so that the underfed can produce enough of their handiwork to exchange it for enough to eat—something they just never had before.

It is just too big for me to grasp, but what's a heaven for, asks Browning, if our reach doesn't exceed our grasp?

World Council

This plan envisions an international council at the head of a system of administrative bodies among which would be an agricultural council, supported by an agricultural bank (all this international) which would direct groups studying and applying nutrition standards, directing the supply of products, storing surpluses, shifting crops to balance supply and demand, maintaining ever-normal storehouses of non-perishable crops, adjusting processing of perishable crops, developing new markets, taking care of relief in devastated or stricken areas, advising and assisting the poorer population groups to increase their efficiency and consumption.

In other words, these people who have spent hours and months and devoted arduous labor to working out this idea are trying to furnish the plan for economic machinery to hold up the hands of the political effort of a league of nations, new style—the bone and sinew, the bread and beef to feed a society of nations joined together under one political umbrella of world co-operation.

Such an idea is laughed out of court in advance by the folk who talk of crazy dreamers, impractical long-hairs and the like. Maybe it is impossible. But a lot of people are saying: "Well, for heaven's sake, let's try it, let's try anything—nothing can cost more in blood, sweat and dollars than war."

The United States proved a lot of things were possible under the sharp lash of war which would have been sneered into oblivion if they had been blueprinted before Pearl Harbor.

Take an egg, for example. Nothing up our sleeves. Just an egg.

"Before the war," says Frank Wilson of the department of commerce, "when Biddy, the hen, laid an egg in Cole county, Missouri, her subsequent cackle of satisfaction was based on the anticipation that that egg might get as far as Sedalia, St. Louis or, on rare occasions, New York."

Then Hitler dreamed up a world war and somebody dreamed up a thing called lend-lease. Today, Biddy's product goes around the world.

Dehydration

Scientists invented dehydration and the process, as far as eggs are concerned, is only a year and a half old. Before the war, only 20 firms dried eggs to any extent and most of those dried albumen only. Today, according to Mr. Wilson, 130 egg-drying plants, big ones, mostly scattered through the Middle West, are drying eggs. Wilson predicts that before the war is over, 35 per cent of America's three billion dozens of eggs will be treated for processing annually.

And so the fragile egg, formerly shipped only short distances, can travel anywhere. How great the American market for dehydrated eggs will be depends on to what extent the consumer takes to the idea, undoubtedly world consumption will increase because of the excellent lend-lease sampling and the ease of shipment.

You may not be able to deliver your quart of milk from the Wisconsin milk shed to the Hottentot's front porch but you can get your dried milk or dehydrated eggs there—if you can adjust things so the Hottentot can produce enough to trade for what you have to sell. This applies to many other products. At present, if everybody could buy them, all the shirts made in peacetime wouldn't produce a shirt and a half per back.

It's the old story right down the line—we can invent the machinery to make anything. We are away behind in our inventions to improve the human lot. It's no harder but it takes more imagination. You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink, they say. The problem with humans is different. You've got the hungry man and the table and the food, but so far you haven't been able to fix things so you can lead him to it.

Russ-Jap Friendship— And American Ships

On May 7, Washington had the first official explanation of the many bombings of the Jap-held Aleutian island of Kiska. It said: "United States air forces have established military positions, including an airfield on Amchitka and have been in occupation of this island since January."

The same day, the Associated Press sent out a dispatch dated "February 16 (delayed)." I might say, "I'll say it was delayed."

It began this way: "Despite a series of eight Japanese bombing raids, this American airbase, only a few minutes flight from Kiska island went into operation today."

I quote all this to show what a highly confidential war we are running. By the time this sees print—perhaps while I'm writing these lines—Kiska may be in American hands after a land invasion which it is admitted is the only way we can oust the enemy from this spot.

If the Japs have gone by the time you read this, there will be a sigh of at least partial regret in some quarters. The reason is this. As long as the Japs are on an island like Kiska (or Guadalcanal) more Japs have to try to reach them, to bring them supplies and keep them alive. And while that goes on, the Americans have a chance to keep enemy wounds open. Japs themselves are expendable. They are cheap, the sun god has a lot of them and he's generous in spending them. But he hasn't so many ships or so many supplies. So killing Japs doesn't bother the Mikado nearly as much as sinking his ships.

That is one reason the upturning of the last Jap toes on any of their stolen, far-flung bases will be a source of at least partial regret.

There is another reason. Day in and day out, from Vancouver and Seattle, secret ships, loaded with supplies for our Russian ally have been calmly sailing away past the Jap-held Kiska and Attu, under the Japanese guns in the narrow waters that lead to Vladivostok.

Now that was a little matter approved by Russia and Japan who hate and fear each other privately but officially are "friendly nations." The question arises now: When and if we trounce the little men out of the stronghold they have dug with their fingernails in the rocky Attu and Kiska, will they be as willing to let us keep on shipping supplies to Russia?

Perhaps it doesn't matter. By that time, which may be now, the situation may have changed. The interesting thing is that the situation does change and thanks to the censorship, nobody knows it until the knowledge ceases to be aid and comfort to the enemy.

But it's tough on a newsman.

In 1918, American war expenditures were only 18½ billion dollars—in 1943, they will exceed 100 billion dollars.

A German seamstress was sentenced to six months imprisonment when she answered an advertisement and demanded her pay in eggs and dairy products instead of money, according to a Nazi press report received by the Office of War Information. When the girl was refused, the report said, she left saying that she had enough customers who would comply with such demands.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Entered in the Postoffice at Clanton, Alabama, as second -class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1897
MRS MARK L. TUCKER, Owner

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

We have heard of a young lady who is engaged to three soldiers; she will have her private war later.

Scores of soldiers from our county are reading the Chilton County News each week. It goes to all parts of the world. There are hundreds more who would like to read its news.

The farmers of Chilton County are waging a battle that is just as vital to Victory as that on the firing line; they deserve the sympathetic understanding of all Americans.

BIG BOMBERS ARE COMING!

President Roosevelt recently commented on the fact that the production of airplanes by the United States exceeds that of all other nations combined.

Our factories turned out 87,000,000 pounds of airplanes in 1941, 291,000,000 pounds in 1942 and are expected to produce 911,000,000 pounds in 1943 and 1,417,000,000 pounds in 1944.

With war plans that call for this country and its Allies to go more and more on the offensive, the President declared that the four-engined bomber, a prime attack weapon, is being produced at a rate that is six months ahead of schedules set in December.

This is good news to the people of the United Nations and bad news to the Axis powers.

EMINENTLY CORRECT

On June 21, 1942. Tobruk, in Libya, was recaptured by German and Italian soldiers in North Africa.

At the time, Prime Minister Churchill was in Washington, conferring with President Roosevelt. As a result of their consideration of war strategy decisions were made which resulted in the occupation of North Africa in November.

At the same time, despite appeals from China and Australia for greater assistance, plans were set in motion to reinforce the British Eighth Army, which was rapidly falling back upon the Egyptian border.

In view of what has happened in Tunisia this month it is self-evident that the decision made by the President and Prime Minister in conjunction with their military advisers, was eminently correct.

The test of a policy, in war or anywhere else, is the fruit thereof.

Will Travel Rationig Become Necessary ?

In conformity with the wishes of the Office of Defense Transportat —an authorized Government agency with which the L. & N. is fully co-operating in the handling of war-time transportation problems—the Louisville and Nashville Railroad urg passengers to refrain from non-essential travel, The need for this restric rows out of the necessity of accomodating essential travel, and the [illegible] crowded condition of trains.

WHAT IS NON-ESSENTIAL TRAVEL?

The following trips are defined [illegible] ential:

Visiting friends in oth [illegible]

Going home for the w [illegible]

Those of a sightseei [illegible]

Any trips merely for [illegible] or pleasure purposes, including those for attending conventions, class reunions, etc.

Attending sporting or athletic events.

The railroads today are carrying nearly four times the passenger traffic they did in 1939, with practically the same amount of equipment. One-half of all available Pullman cars and one-third the number of coaches are being used now for transporting military personnel in special cars or special trains.

VACATION TRIPS

It is desirable, first, that vacations be spent at, or as near, home as possible. However, where journeys are involved, observance of the following would be helpful:

Spread vacation periods over the whole year, instead of the usual concentration during June, July and August.

Commence and terminate vacations on Tuesdays, Wednesdays or Thursdays (relatively light travel days).

Vacation trips should, in no circumstances, involve travel during holiday periods.

Take entire vacation at one time instead of splitting it into several shorter periods, involving perhaps more than one trip.

Essential war needs prevent the construction of additional passenger train equipment. Travelers must be prepared to encounter delayed arrivals and crowded conditions of the trains, and a lack of some of the usual travel comforts.

THOMAS NEWTON HOWARD

Thomas Newton Howard was born November 28, 1868 and ded May 1st. 1943, a short while after being knocked down and crushed under the wheel of a log truck driven by a drunken man·

Between those two dates a life was lived and an eternal destiny was forged. We are made to realize anew how unexpectedly death may strike, and how momentous are the days given us to make preparations for that inevitable event.

Mr. Howard was a quiet, unassuming man· His voice was not heard in the street, nor was he one who sought places of leadership among his fellows; but as a citizen and on all the issues of life he had strong and honest convictions and the strength of character vocation cmfwy vbgkq cmfwcmfcwfw to be fearlessly loyal to them.

In his vocation he served well his community. Because of his outstanding natural gifts a path was beaten to his door. His place in the home and in the community rannot be filled·

Parents reveal themselves in the children they rear. Reol and ultimate success or failure is fixed in them—not in power, wealth or fawe. By their lives Mr. Howard's sons and daughters bespeak inherent attributes of uprightness and refinement. They were brought up, not merely to be good, but to be good for something in a positive sort of way. One son and six grandsons are serving in the armed forces of their County·

The tragic pasing of this good man has cast a deep horror into the hearts of his family and a sadness throughout the community.

His church membership was in Verbena Methodist Church and his funeral was held there on May 3rd 1943, conducted by his pastor the Rev. C. E. Avinger. Interwent was in the village cemetery Spigener in charge·,

In Memory of Mrs. EDITH FRASER BAKER

"She Is Just Away"

I cannot say. and I will not say, that that she s dead, - - She is just away! With a cheery smile, and a wave of the rand, she has wandered into an unknow land, and left us dreaming how very fair·

It needs must be, since she lingers there.

And you, O you, who the wildest yearn for the old, time step and the glad return, Think of her as faring on, as dear.

In the love of there as the love of here; think of her still as the same, I say; She is not dead - - she is just away! (James Whitcomb Riley).

INFORMATION
BAGGAGE
SOLDIERS ON THE TRANSPORTATION FRONT

MANY men and women of Greyhound's family are performing an essential service for our country. Count among these, Greyhound Information Clerks, Telephone Operators and Baggage Men. They've taken over a big share of a big job—and are going about it with a zeal that makes us proud. Day in and day out these fellow workers demonstrate the real spirit of our forces—the spirit that nothing is so important as keeping essential wartime travelers correctly informed and on the move—keeping service at the peak with no let-down on courtesy or cooperation.

Greyhound, along with numbers of our patrons, know and appreciate the quality of their efforts. They deserve and receive full credit for a major part in Greyhound's contribution to vital wartime transportation.

Their Hard Luck

He was one of those fathers who believed in trying to answer any questions put by his son. So he did his best when the youngster asked him:

"What are ancestors, daddy?"

"Well, my boy," he replied, "I'm one of your ancestors, and your grandfather is another."

A puzzled frown marred the childish brow.

"Then, daddy, why do people brag about them?"

PETER'S COUNSEL TO SCATTERED CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—I Peter 1:1; 2:11-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king.—I Peter 2:17.

Persecution for Christ's sake has been the lot of believers from the first century down to 1943. Sometimes it has been official, but more often unofficial, yet nonetheless severe and trying.

The manner in which Christians face their difficulties is one of the best testimonies to the reality of their professed faith. Sometimes, however, in the midst of their trials the enemy of their souls brings discouragement—and then they need the counsel and encouragement of others.

Such was the situation when Peter addressed his first epistle to the early believers who were scattered abroad (1:1). His counsel was just what they needed, and is equally helpful to us. They were to be

I. Separated As Pilgrims (1:1; 2:11, 12).

Christians are in this world but not of it. They are passing through, wayfarers on their way to the eternal dwelling place of God. That does not mean that they are not interested in the welfare of those round about them, or delinquent in sharing the responsibilities of life, but it does mean that they are to have the pilgrim's detachment from the things of the world and the flesh.

In the days of Peter, membership in the church was not considered a normal or respectable thing. It marked a person as belonging to a hated sect, one which was falsely accused of many evil deeds. For example, Christians met at night, men and women together for communion service. Because they spoke of this as a "love feast," they were accused of immorality, and because they spoke of the body and blood of Christ they were said to be eaters of human flesh.

Christians must meet such malicious reports. How? By silencing their accusers by their good works.

II. Submissive As Citizens (2:13-18).

One of the hallmarks of Christian character is willing and gracious recognition of proper authority, whether it be in the state, in the place of employment, in the school, or in the home. He does this for the Lord's sake (v. 13), and even when that authority is in the hands of an unreasonable man.

This does not mean that the Christian is to encourage or countenance tyranny and oppression, but that he is loyal to the state and to his employer, even though the present representative be a hard, unjust man. In all well ordered society there will be proper and effective means to correct injustice. But in and through it all the Christian shows his faith by his behavior.

Observe that government, in the plan of God, is for the purpose of keeping order, encouraging the good, and punishing the evil (vv. 13, 14). The powerful influence of the Christian Church should keep it in that right channel, or bring it back if it has strayed. Always loyal and obedient, the believer should use his ballot and his personal influence to establish and support good government.

III. Suffering As Christians (2: 19-25).

Christ is our "example" (v. 21). Since some have interpreted this word and the statement "that ye should follow in his steps" as indicating that we are saved by our imitation of Christ, it is well to point out that this would be quite impossible. We would have to begin where He began—He was without sin (v. 22). But we have all "sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23). We need a Saviour—not an example as far as redemption is concerned.

In the ever present problem of suffering, we as redeemed ones do have Christ as our example. He who was sinless and without fault bore the shame and suffering of Calvary without complaint. When He was reviled He did not retaliate, when He was hurt He did not threaten revenge (vv. 22, 23), but was willing to leave the ultimate judgment in the hands of God, who will have the final word.

We ought to do the same when we suffer for Christ's sake. If we suffer because of our own sin or folly, we can claim no credit for bearing it patiently (v. 20). But when we have done well and then are persecuted, we have opportunity to show whether our profession of being followers of Christ really means anything. At this point some Christians lose their testimony and influence by a bitter, vengeful spirit.

These are trying days for the souls of men. In many parts of the world Christians are forced to drink the bitter cup of persecution. To the glory of God we record the fact that they are doing it heroically and in a true Christian spirit.

BEHAVIOR TREATMENT

One of the difficulties about the treatment of behavior symptoms by the use of insulin or metrazol is that some patients who have undergone this method, or have spoken to patients who have done so, are somewhat afraid of it, notwithstanding that they have experienced or observed its helpful results. It is for this and other reasons that many physicians are now using the electrically induced convulsions in cases where the mental symptoms are not due to any true or organic disease of the brain. I have spoken twice before about this method and in the Illinois Medical Journal, Dr. J. V. Edlin, Chicago, reports the use of electric shock treatment in 126 cases.

The length of time the patients suffered with their symptoms ranged from less than six months to 10 years, and included all the functional psychoses such as anxieties, fears, dream states and melancholia.

Of the patients who were ill for less than six months, about 53 per cent recovered; the rate for those ill from six months to one year was about 31 per cent; for those ill from one to five years it was 21 per cent, and for those ill from 6 to 10 years it was 20 per cent.

The best results were obtained by patients suffering from involutional melancholia (depressed feeling of middle and old age). The next best occurred in patients with catatonia (where dream state passes into melancholia) and then those with hebephrenia (silliness which comes on at puberty) and dementia precox combined with hebephrenic and catatonic features.

Dr. Edlin found that just as with insulin and metrazol the symptoms before receiving electric shock treatment determined the chances of his recovery; the shorter the time, the better the chances. Dr. Edlin prefers electrical to metrazol treatment because of the high percentage of recoveries and the almost total absence of fear. He also advises that the usual treatment of mental cases by questioning the patient and explaining the causes of the symptoms should be used in addition to the electric shock treatment.

X-Ray Treatment of Goiter Beneficial

In examining recruits for the last war we were always on the alert so that cases of early thyroid disease (goiter) were not accepted. When the heartbeat was fast the recruit rested for some time and was given a daily paper to read. If his heartbeat was slower after the rest and he was fit otherwise he was accepted. In some cases where, in addition to the rapid heartbeat, there was trembling of the hands and eyes were bulging he was considered a thyroid case and rejected at once.

The cause of the symptoms is that too much juice or extract is being manufactured by the thyroid gland and this juice increases the rate at which all the body processes work. The amount of increase is measured by a special apparatus and if it is plus 15 or more it is cons[illegible] case of early goiter, hyperth[illegible] it is called. If test shows [illegible] it shows that the thyroid [illegible] not manufacturing enough[illegible]

When too much juice i[illegible] ufactured, all or part [illegible] gland is removed b[illegible] ion or by the use of X-ray [illegible] ts. If not enough juice is [illegible] manufactured the physician p[illegible] ibes daily doses of the juice or thyroid extract.

Before treatment for removal of the thyroid gland is given, Dr. George E. Pfahler, professor of radiology, graduate school of medicine, University of Pennsylvania, in medical clinics of North America, states that the cause or causes of the hyperthyroid condition should be removed insofar as this is possible. Usual causes are focal infection (teeth, tonsils or other organ), domestic difficulties, worry, overwork or some other strain.

As many patients fear operation and delay should be avoided, Dr. Pfahler points out that X-ray treatment gives about as good end results as surgery and these patients will more willingly undergo the X-ray method of treatment. Where, however, the need for the removal of the thyroid gland is urgent surgery is the proper treatment.

MARGARET SULLAVAN'S willingness to return to the screen in order to play "Smitty" in "Cry Havoc" indicates that the picture will really be something special. Absent from pictures since she made "Back Street," in 1941, she's resisted all efforts to lure her in front of the cameras. Merle Oberon gave illness as a reason for resigning from the role. Joan Crawford left the cast because this would have been her third successive war picture, and she felt that the role assigned her wasn't satisfactory.

Fight the Forgery Racket!

By FRANK J. WILSON
Chief, United States Secret Service

WE HAVE learned that check thieves steal other mail to help them establish identification when they try to cash forged checks. This article is intended for storekeepers who pay out money for government checks.

Before you accept any government check, ask yourself this question: "If this check is returned because of a forged endorsement, can I locate the forger and recover my loss?"

A government check is good only when it is properly endorsed by the person to whom it is issued. If you pay your good money for a government check which bears a forged endorsement, you are the loser.

Remember — don't hesitate to question a stranger who asks you to cash a government check. It's YOUR money that's at stake, and most forgers are usually in a hurry. Questions make them nervous.

To Be Sure It's Simple With the Man's Hat Off!

A woman entered the photographer's shop and addressed the proprietor thusly: "I want this photograph of my husband enlarged. Now, do you think you can remove the hat? I do not like it on him."

The photographer carefully studied the portrait for a time.

"Yes," he said at last. "I think I can manage to fake the hair all right. By the way, you'll have to tell me on which side he parts his hair. I must know that."

The woman thought for a moment, then said: "Oh, I just can't remember, but you'll be able to [illegible] that when you take his hat

Weight by Sound

A new instrument known as the "audio-scale," which enables the blind to weigh even small articles accurately by sound, has been demonstrated at the American Federation for the Blind.

The idea was suggested by Miss Evelyn Watson, a blind woman. The instrument, which can be attached to any type of weighing machine, operates on the aeroplane radio beam principle, giving out a different note for each different weight. It will open many new fields for the blind in war industries.

Uncle Phil Says:

THE trouble about seeing both sides of a question is that both sides go for you for being on the other.

It's true that you can do almost anything you desire to do; the trouble is making yourself desire to do it.

It may not be possible to find the perfect girl, but there's a lot of fun in the hunting.

A compromise is what two people arrive at to their mutual dissatisfaction.

The man who sits down to wait for Opportunity to appear should put a good cushion in the chair.

Well, we've certainly got the right material for making a new world. The old one was fashioned out of chaos.

Crops and Stock Thrive On Most Northerly Farm

The Norilsk State farm, a Soviet agricultural enterprise, stands on the 70th parallel in the midst of a desert region, in the zone of eternal frost. There the Arctic night lasts for nearly two months. There are frequent heavy blizzards, when the thermometer drops to 60 degrees below zero centigrade.

Potatoes, cabbages, onions, carrots and sugar beets are grown successfully in the open fields of this Arctic farm. Tomatoes, cucumbers and spinach are raised in 28 hot-houses. An experimental sowing of melons has yielded encouraging results.

Livestock thrives on the farm, and is rapidly increasing in number. There are 133 cows, all born in this Arctic region. A subsidiary farm houses 200 pigs of pure Yorkshire breed.

Last year the possibility of growing oats for fodder was demonstrated by the yield from an experimental planting of 60 acres.

Orchard trees bloom during the short Arctic summer. They are still very young and bear no fruit at present.

True Enough

Some visitors were inspecting a junior class in the school and things were going rather badly. When the teacher asked if any little girl could recite something, only one small hand shot up.

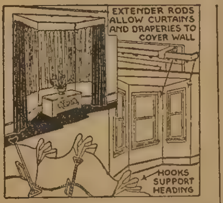
"That's a good girl, Betty," said teacher encouragingly. "Now step out in front of the class. What can you say for us?"

"Nelson's Farewell to His Mother," replied Betty brightly.

"Splendid! Begin."

"Ta-ta, mum!" said Betty dramatically, waving her hand in the air.

Modern Curtains to Make Your Bay Windows Appear More Attractive



EXTENDER RODS ALLOW CURTAINS AND DRAPERIES TO COVER WALL
HOOKS SUPPORT HEADING

BAY windows are much in vogue again. One reason for this is that modern methods of hanging curtains make bay windows more attractive than they used to be in the Gay Nineties when they were a feature of so many houses.

In those old houses the vertical lines of woodwork and wall showing between windows made the bay seem like a coop stuck on the outside of the house. Many home owners had the bays removed because, while they actually added space, they made rooms seem small and cluttered.

Today curtains are hung to cover both wall and woodwork around the individual windows in the bay. This brings the group of windows together as a unit and makes the bay seem a broad and spacious part of the room. The sketch at the right shows a standard fixture that allows curtains to extend beyond the window frame; but don't rush out to buy new rods. The chances are that your old rods may be extended over the wall if you wire them to hooks or staples at the upper corners of the window frames.

NOTE—If you are planning new curtains, you will want a copy of Mrs. Spears' booklet that illustrates twelve different styles of curtains with directions for making them; including a simple home-made rigging for draw curtains. Ask for BOOK 1, and enclose 15 cents with name and address to:

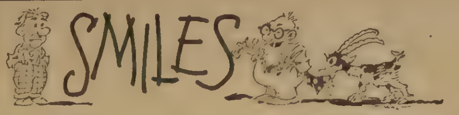
When you see news photos of soldiers "off duty" in camp or behind the battle-lines—notice how often you'll see them smoking a cigarette. There's a good reason for that. Army officials say that cigarettes are an appreciable factor in maintaining morale—and the soldiers themselves add that a carton of cigarettes from home is always welcome. What brand? Well, sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens show that Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in all the services. Though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen wherever they are.—Adv.

SMILES



There, Too

Woman—My husband is so careless of his appearance. It seems that he just can't keep buttons on his clothes.

Neighbor — Are you sure it's carelessness? Perhaps they are—uh—well, sewed on improperly.

Woman—Maybe you're right. He is terribly careless with his sewing.

Sent the Scent

His teacher sent a note home with Johnny asking his mother to give him a bath. The next day Johnny brought an answer:

"Dear Miss Smith. When I send Johnny to school I send him to be learnt, and not to be smelt; he ain't no rose."

Transferred

The little woman had worried the grocer over trifles at the busiest time of the day, and at last he had managed to satisfy her.

"Do you know, Mr. Peck," said the woman, "when I came into your shop I had a dreadful headache. I've quite lost it now."

"It isn't lost," said the distracted grocer, "I've got it!"

Some women walk to reduce; some husbands are reduced to walking.

Can't Beat 'Em

An American soldier in England was giving some illustrations of the size of his country. "You can board a train in the State of Texas at dawn," he said impressively, "and 24 hours later you'll still be in Texas."

"Yes," said one of his English listeners, with feeling, "we've got trains like that here, too."

Off on One

"Now I'll imitate something, and you guess what."

"Okay."

"All right, what am I imitating?"

"Nothing, as far as I can see."

"You're wrong. I'm giving a perfect imitation of a man going upstairs."

"But you're not even moving!"

"Of course not. I'm on an elevator."

That's Safest

"Doctor, my wife tells me that I talk in my sleep. What should I do?"

"Nothing that you shouldn't."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

When our present synthetic program has materialized, a B.F. Goodrich official predicts the resultant rubber surplus will cause one of the most serious post-war marketing problems. What to do with the huge stocks of synthetic and natural rubber will test the ingenuity of manufacturers and sales executives.

A substitute for rubber adhesive tape is being sought. Thousands of pounds of this tape are being used to protect plastic airplane glass in transit to airplane factories.

Seventy-three per cent of the 140,000 workers of 94 war plants in 10 states go to and from work by private automobiles. Nearly three-quarters of the cars used by these workers have tires more than half worn out, many of them unfit for re-capping.

Notice is hereby given that the passage and enactment by the Legislature of Alabama, of an act, will be sought at the present session of the Legislature of Alabama, a substantial copy of which, is as follows:

A BILL ENTITLED AN ACT

To Amend An Act Entitled:

"An Act

To establish an Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Alabama; to define its jurisdiction and powers; to provide for its officers, their powers duties and compensation; to provide that said Court shall be open at all times for the trial of cases and transaction of business, to provide for the election of the judge of said Court, his term of office, and how vacancy in judgeship shall be filled."

Be it Enacted by the Legislature of Alabama;

That an Act entitled; "To establish an Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Alabama; to define its jurisdiction and powers; to provide for its officers, their powers, duties and compensation; to provide that said Court shall be open at all times for the trial of cases and transaction of business; to provide for the election of the judge of said Court, his term of office, and how vacancy in judgeship shall be filled", be and the same is hereby amended to read as follow:

Section 1.—That there be and it is hereby established in the County of Chilton an inferior Law Court which shall be called the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County and which shall be a Court of record and shall have and exercise concurrent jurisdiction, authority, functions and powers now conferred or which may hereafter be confered upon the several circuit courts of the State of Alabama where the amount involved, exclusive of the interest and costs, do not exceed three hundred ($300.00) Dollars, and shall have and exercise jurisdiction of all midsemeanors and all offenses arising or committed in Chilton County under Article 3, Title 34. Section 89 to 104, inclusive, of the Code of 1940 of Alabama and Chapter 7, Title 13, Sections 350 to 383, inclusive, of the Code of 1940 of Alabama; said Court shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the Probate Court of said county under said Titles. Said Court shall also have concurrent jurisdiction with Justices of the Peace of Chilton County of all matters whatsoever, but shall not have final jurisdiction to try persons charged with felonies.

SECTION 2.—That the said Inferior Law Court shall be held at the Court House of Chilton County and shall be open at all times for the trial of cases and the transaction of business. In case of sickness or disqualification of the judge, the law applicable to the appointment and service of special judges in the Circuit Court shall apply. The Judge of said Court shall be subject to the same penalties for failure to attend upon the Court as Circuit Judges of the State. The Judge shall keep an office in the Court House of Chilton County, Alabama, or at such other suitable place as may be provided by the Court of County Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama, and it shall be the duty of the Court of County Commissioners of Chilton County. Alabama, to provide such office and supply the same with necessary furniture and fixtures, stationery, telephone, lights, heat and janitor service A session of said Court for the trial of criminal cases shall be held on the first Monday in each month and at such other times as the Judge of said Court may order, and a session for trial of civil cases shall be held on the second Monday of each month. The Clerk, with the approval of the Judge of said Inferior Law Court, is hereby authorized to purchase all necessary records, stationery and supplies for the convenience of said Court. The same shall be paid out of the County Treasury [illegible] same manner as now provided by law for the payment of such records, stationery and supplies.

SECTION 3—That the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County shall be ex-officio clerk of said Court and shall have the powers and discharge the duties, which will devolve upon the Clerk of the Circuit Court, and shall be subject to the same pains and penalties with regard to the duties of this office and shall be entitled to the same fees, commissions and emoluments of office in cases wherein the amount involved is more than $50.00 as are now or may hereafter be allowed to Circuit Court Clerks of Alabama and in cases where the amount involved is $50.00 or less the same fees as are now or may hereafter be allowed Justices of the Peace, and the same shall be collected as such fees are collected in the Circuit Court. The clerk of the said Inferior Law Court as herein designated shall make and enter into a bond in the penal sum of Three Thousand (3000.00) Dollars for the faithful performance of his duties as Clerk of the said court, said bond to be approved by the Judge of the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County Alabama.

SECTION 4.—The Sheriff of Chilton county shall in person, or by deputy attend upon said Court and preserve order and all processes and writs issued from said Court shall be served as from the Circuit Court of said county and the Sheriff of Chilton County and his deputy or that of his deputy in attending such Court shall receive $3.00 per day to be paid out of the county treasury as bailiffs are paid in attending on the Circuit Court. The Sheriff shall receive the same fees for executing the processes and writs issued from said Court as provided by the law for the execution of the same processes in the Circuit Court or in the Justice Courts of the county and the same shall be collected as such fees are now or may hereafter be provided by law.

SECTION 5.—The Judge of said Court shall adopt a seal for said Court which shall be kept in the custody and control of the Clerk of the said Court.

SECTION 6.—The judge of said Court shall have power to issue search warrants, writs of habeas corpus, prohibition, certiorari, quo warranto, and all other special and extraordinary writs.

SECTION 7.—It shall be the duty of the Clerk of said Court to keep a record upon which shall be recorded all affidavits, and if any of said affidavits should be lost or destroyed a certified copy thereof shall be used the same as the original, and the Clerk shall receive a fee of twenty-five cents for recording such affidavits to be taxed as costs in case the defendant is convicted.

SECTION 8.—The witnesses attending upon said Court shall be entitled to, and paid the same fee as are paid the witnesses in the Circuit Court of Chilton County.

SECTION 9.—That there shall be taxed against the defendant on conviction the same solicitor's or County Solicitor's fee and the same shall be collected in the way provided by law for taxing and collecting solicitor's fees in the Circuit Court and when collected shall be paid into the treasury of Chilton County, Alabama.

SECTION 10.—That the procudure practice and rules governing the Circuit Courts of Alabama shall in all things apply to and govern the proceedure and practice in said court of Chilton County, except as herein otherwise provided.

SECTION 11.—Prosecutions for misdemeanors committed in Chilton County may be instituted in this Court by making an affidavit before the Judge the writ on said affidavit to be issued by the Clerk of said Court, and when the defendant is arrested on said affidavit, said case shall go on the docket or trial, and be tried as though the defendant had been indicted by a Grand Jury.

SECTION 12.—In all civil actions commenced in said Court the defendant shall appear, plead, answer or demur within fifteen days from the service of the summons or writs or be in default, and the Judge of said Court shall, after such default, on motion of the plaintiff, ascertain the amount due in said cause and render judgment for the plaintiff accordingly.

SECTION 13.—In all civil actions in said Court, interrogatories, as provided by law and depositions, may be filed and taken by the parties in like manner as same are filed and taken in the Circuit Court and all laws applicable to interrogatories and depositions in the Circuit Court shall apply and govern in said Court, however, the answer to the interrogatories shall be filed in said cause with in fifteen days after the service of the same.

SECTION 14.—It shall be the duty of the Deputy Solicitor or County Solicitor of Chilton County, Alabama. to attend the Criminal session of said Court and shall prosecute for the State all causes in said court. That in the absence of the Deputy Solicitor or County Solicitor, the Judge of said Court may appoint a special Deputy Solicitor or County Solicitor to represent the State in cases that the Solicitor for said court is required to represent the State in and shall receive for his compensaton Five Dollars for each day or fraction thereof, for the time actually engaged under said appointment.

SECTION 15.—Any party feeling aggrieved from the judgement of said Court rendered in any civil cause, may appeal from said judgement to the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Ala., by giving security for the costs, the same to be approved by the Clerk or Judge of said Inferior Law Court or if the party desiring to appeal, wishes to supersede the judgment of said Court, then he may give security for cost and a supersedeas bond in double the amount of the judgment, to be approved by the Judge or Clerk of said Court. All appeals from judgments in civil causes in said court shall be taken to the Circuit Court within thirty days after the rendition of the judgment, and all appeals taken from said Court shall be tried denovo in the Circuit Court in any case appeal from said Inferior Law to the Circuit Court. The appellant, within, ten days, after the perfection of his appeal and the appellee, within ten days after notice of appeal is served on him, may have the issues of fact tried by a jury in the Circuit Court by filing with the Clerk of the Circuit Court a written demand for a trial of said cause by a jury.

SECTION 16.—In all criminal cases of conviction in said Inferior Law Court of Chilton County the defendant shall have the right of appeal to the Circuit Courts of Chilton County on entering into bond, with sufficient surety, to appear at the term of the Court to which the appeal is taken and from term to term until discharged, the bond to be is such penalty as the Judge of the said Inferior Law Court may prescribe, and to be approved by Judge or Clerk of said Court. If the defendant does not make the bond required, he shall remain in custody.

SECTION 17.—Writs of garnishment may issue out said Court in aid of pending suits filed therein or upon judgments rendered in said Court as now provided in Circuit Court except, however, the answer of the garnishee shall be filed within fifteen days after the service of the Writ of Garnishment.

SECTION 18.—That the Judge of said Inferior Law Court shall be a qualified elector of Chilton County, Alabama; shall be learned in the law and shall not be less than twenty--five years of age; and shall be prohibited from engaging in the practice of law in the Courts of this State. Said Judge shall take and file with the Judge of Probate of Chilton County, Alabama the oath of the office required of Circuit Judges. The Judge of said Court may be removed from office, or impeached in the manner now provided for the removal of Circuit Judges.

SECTION 19.—The said Inferior Law Court or Judge thereof may punish for contempt by fine not exceeding Fifty Dollars and by imprisonment not exceeding five days, one or both.

SECTION 20.—In case of a vacancy in the office of the Judge of the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Alabama, the same shall be filled by appointment of the Governor and the Judge appointed shall hold office until the next general election thereafter.

SECTION 21.—That the Judge of said Court shall receive a salary of twenty-four Hundred Dollars per year, payable Two Hundred Dollars per month, out of the General Funds of the Treasury of Chilton County, at the end of each month payable on warrant drawn by the Judge of Probate.

SECTION 22.—In all trials, both civil and criminal, in said Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Alabama, the Judge shall determine both the law and facts without the intervention of jury, except as herein otherwise provided, and shall award the judgment and fix the punishment, which the character of the offense demands and in default of the payment of any fine and costs, the defendant shall be sentenced to serve the same as provided by law for the sentencing of persons in the Circuit Court.

SECTION 23—That within ten days after the passage and approval of this Act a special election shall be called by the Judge of Probate of Chilton County and held in Chilton County, Alabama, within forty-five days after issuing of said call, the expenses to be paid out of the General Funds of said County for the purpose of electing a Judge of the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Ala., by the qualified electors thereof, who shall assume the duties of the office of the Judge of said Court immediately after said special election and hold office until the second Tuesday of January, 1945, and until his successor is elected and qualified. That the successor in office to said Judge shall be elected at the General Election to be held on the second Tuesday of November, 1944, and the Judge of said Court shall be elected every four years thereafter and shall hold office until his successor is elected and qualified. That at said special election any person desiring to become a candidate for the office of the Judge of said Court may do so by filing with the Judge of Probate of Chilton County a petition setting forth that he is candidate for the Judge of said Court at said special election and said petition being signed by twenty-five qualified electors of Chilton County Alabama, and it shall be the duty of the Judge of Probate to place on the ballot for said special Election, the names of all persons qualified under the provision of this act as candidates for the office of the Judge of said Court who file said petition with him fifteen days prior to the holding of said special election and the person receiving the largest number of votes in said election for said office shall be declared elected Judge of said Court After said Special Election nominations and elections for Judge of said Court shall be made as nominations and elections of all other County Officers are made for Chilton County, Alabama.

SECTION 24.—That if any section clause or paragraph of this Bill shall be declared unconstitutional and void, the same shall not affect any other section, clause or paragraph which is not unconstitutional and void.

SECTION 25.—That all laws, general, special, or local, in conflict with the provision of this Act are hereby expressly repealed.

SECTION 26.— This Act shall become effective upon its final passage and approval by the Governor.

Kiwains Club To Buy Cigarettes For Soldiers

The Clanton Kiwanis Club is sponsoring a fund to buy cigaretts for the men in the front lines.

In conjunction with Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company the local Club will buy the cigaretts, paying only 4 and one-half cents per package and the Tobacco Company will send them to the men in the Front Lines by bomber. They are sealed in a special built container of 50 cartons each, sc that they will arrive fresh. It is also learned from J. M. Barton, representative of the Company that within 36 hours after the cigarettes arrive at the Port of Embarkation they are in the hands of the soldier at the front.

Mr. Barton stated that he had heard of cases where the men would spend three and four weeks in foxholes without cigarettes or smokes of anykind only to be relieved and permitted to go back for a rest where he had to pay as high as two dollars per package for something to smoke.

That is why the Clanton Kiwanis Club has undertaken this job; in a small way, to bring comfort to the men on our front lines. You will find a small glass jar on the counter of most every store you visit, so the next time you pass, drop a nickle or a dime in the jar. You may be sending a pack of cigarettes to your son or brother

Contained in each package of 50 cartons are 25 post cards addressed to the Clanton Kiwanis Club here. These cards will be distributed with the cigarettes and the soldiers will write their remarks on the cards and mail. On each package will be a small sticker containing the words: "Clanton Kiwanis Club Wishes You a Safe Return."

Watch the Chilton Conty News for the first card received from one of these boys.

RED CROSS SENDS LARGEST SHIPMENT

Monday, May 31, the largest single shipment that has been sent from this Red Cross Unit was shipped to headquarters.

This shipment included 21,600 surgical dressings and three cases of clothing for refugees.

Women from the various Red Cross Statons in the county who had helped in making this shipment possible were invited over by the Clanton Chapter and a group picture of the workers and shipment was made.. This picture will be printed in the near future.

Mr. Martin and Mrs. Browder have asked that an appeal go out to the ladies in the county to come in and help get the next shipment ready before the weather gets so hot, and before canning season. They need lots of help and everyone can and must do his or her part in getting these surgical dressings ready for shipment. Everyone knows the necessity of having these dressings ready when they are needed so lay aside something else and please come to the Red Cross room and help.

FEED WHEAT PROGRAM CHANGES ANNOUNCED

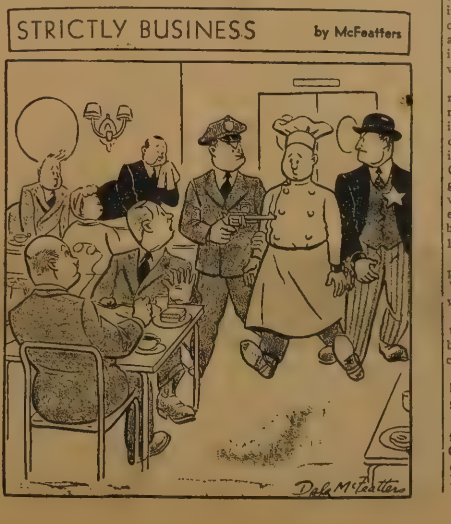
Notice has been received by Mr Cofer, chairman of the Chilton County AAA Committee that effective immediately government owned feed wheat will be available only to bona fide farm feeders. Under the program previously operated, wheat was available to warehousemen, mixers, and feed manufacturers. Deliveries of wheat to other than farmers will be limited to orders which were on file prior to the effective date of these new instructions.

By recent action of Congress, Mr Cofer explained, 100 million bushels of feed wheat were made available as an additional protein feed for cattle livestock and poultry to aid in the production of meat for the war effort Arrangements have been made between the United States Government and the Canadian Government whereby they will supply this country with wheat from the vast stocks they now have on hand should these additiona supplies be needed.

At a recent meeting of the State USDA War Board, A. W. Jones Chairman, reported the delivery in Alabama of 54 cars of wheat during the month of May; 44 of these cars went to dealers and mixers and 1C cars to farmers. Jones also reported the receipt of 15 cars of soybean meal in Alabama during the same period. Practically all of this meal was used in dairy and chicken feed

The delivered price of feed wheat in carload lots in Chilton County is $1.08 per bushel. Mr. Cofer recommended that farmers group their need in event they cannot use a carload at a time, appoint one of the group as treasurer in order that he may handle the bill of lading when the car arrives

Farmers desiring additional information should contact their county AAA offic.



W. M. S. Entertain Intermediate And Junior Girls

On Monday evening of this week the W. M. S. of the Baptist Church intertained the Juniors and Intermediate Girls Auxiliary, the Y. W. A. and the mothers of these girls with a Mother-Daughter banquet. The room was patriotically decorated using crepe paper and flags of the United Nations to carry out the effect. The colors were also very beautifully arranged in flowers on the speakers table. Place cards were in the form of a little sail boats and the programs were cut in the shape of old fashioned girls.

Mrs. Frank Scott president of the W. M. S. introduced the guests of honor and Mrs. Roswell Owens led in singing the various songs which were printed on the program with Miss Bertelle Holmes at the piano.

Everyone joined in the singing and enjoyed it emmensley.

Mrs Erle Ellis presented several of her vocal pupils in solos wrich included Mrs. W. H. Klinner, Mrs Grady Heflin, Misses Essie White and Donna Blackketaer. Little Helen Hayes gave a lovely raading on "Mother."

Immediately following the program a banquet salad plate was served by the W. M. S. members with Mrs. Erle Ellis bringing the blessing in song.

Following this most enjoyable fellowship the mothers and daughters and everyone went to the church auditorium to hear the guest speaker Capt. J. P. Newman, world traveler and lecturer. Capt Newman brougrt with him Mrs. Harwell Davis, of Birmingham and Senor Rocjas and his niece, Senorita Missis. who is attending Howard College.

Local Farm Labor Worker Appointed

Appointment of Mr. Lewis G. McGee to work Chilton County and assist farmers in getting help they need for production and harvesting this year is announced by County Agent P. H. Smith. His work will be under the supervision of the County Agent and by authority of a recent act of Congress to attain maximum production and harvesting on farms until this war is won.

Mr. McGee was selected after a careful study of the work to be done He will start by ascertaining from farmers the help that they need, what for, and when. At the same time, he is contacting people who are available for farm work now or in the future, including tenants and croppers.

The County Agent declared that food is the No. 1 essential in a war. "To win battles, armies must be wel fed and food comes from farms," he said. To produce this food farmers must have enough help, plus land equipment, feed, and fertilizer.

All farmers who want help and all others who are willing to do farm work are asked to contact Mr. McGee at the office of the County Agent.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS IN BRIEF

With its session half gone, the Legislature is making substantial progress, administration leaders in both houses said today. The first four weeks of the session saw 578 bills introduced in the House and 279 in the Senate—a total of 857. The House already has passed most of the measures requested by Governor Sparks said Rep. Charles D. Norman of Union Springs, administration floor leader, and many already have cleared the Senate.

FINAL Passage of the Norman bill which would allot $650,000 additional from the state sales tax to the counties, earmarked for old age assistance was regarded as a foregone conclusion this week. The Senate, on motion of Sen. Gerald Bradford of Grove Hill adopted an amendment which provides for distribution of the $650,000 or the basis of the number of inhabitants in each county 65 years old or older. Originally the bill provided for distribution simply on a general population basis. House Floor Leader Norman said the amendment was acceptable to him.

HEADED for Senate Committee action this week is the administration bill to reconstitute the State of Alabama News Bureau as the Division of Records and Reports in the governor's office. The bill passed the House unanimously after Rep. Robert H. Bennett of Barbour County, as sponsor explained the measure will provide a means of continuing the state's news service and praised "the fine manner in which the State News Bureau has operated." Rep. E. C. Boswell of Geneva failed in an attempt to amend the bill in such manner that no employee of the proposed division would be employed under the Merit System

"IT LOOKS as if the Highway Patrol will have to crack down to stop this rubber-scorching," said Director Van Buren Gilbert of the State Department of Public Safety, commenting on a survey showing that 76 percent of 1,892 cars checked at 24 different points in the state were speeding. This compares with an average of 68 percent speeding last October and 75 percent in January, showing an increasing tendency to disregard the wartime 35-mile limit.

THE STATE will save approximately $1,000,000 in interest as the result of the refinancing of $4,178,000 in bridge authority and bridge corporation bonds which have been bearing 4 percent interest. Outbidding Chicago and New York interest, a group of 11 Southern Banks and investment firms, nine of them located in Alabama, will take the new bonds on a 10-year serial basis at only 1 and 1-2 percent interest.

THE SENATE is awaiting a Supreme Court advisory opinion on the War Emergency Corporation bill which already has passed the House.

The 10 percent liquor bill, passed by the House, was favorably reported by the Senate finance and taxation committee.

The public is cordially invited.

Time Near For Onion, Irish Potato Harvest

By W. A. Ruffin
(Extension Entomologist and Horiculturist).

Onions and Irish potatoes should be harvested in Chilton County within the next few weeks. In order for these crops to keep well trey must be harvested at the right time, handled properly, and be stored under as near ideal conditions as possible.

Onions should be pulled up as soon as the tops begin to fall over. Onions like other root crops, should not be left in bright sunlight. They can be eft in the field a day or so for the tops to dry out, provided the bulbs are covered with the tops. The most satisfactory way to store this crop is to bunch 6 to 8 onions together and tie the tops with a string. Hang the bunches on nails along the wall in the barn, smoke house, or other building where it is dry. ONIONS MUST BE KEPT DRY.

Irish potatoes should be dug as soon as the leaves have turned brown and while the stems are still green. Potatoes should be picked up as soon as they have been dug or plowed up. Do not leave them in the sun. Potatoes will keep best in a slate crate. Discarded orange crates are ideal for the purpose. Small, cut, or badly bruised potatoes should not be put in a crate with good potatoes. Irish potatoes keep best in a dark, cool place. A dry cellar is an ideal storage place. Potatoes should keep well if containers are placed on boards under the house. Many farmers keep them by spreading on the floor of an empty crib. The important steps in keeping potatoes are: Dig when ready; keep out of sunlight; handle with care; store in a dry, cool place.

SELECTIVE SERVICE PROGRAM HAMPERS BUS OPERATORS

If the Selective Service program drafts an appreciable number of fathers this year, it will present an extremely difficult manpower problem for the intercity bus industry to overcome, the National Association of Motor Bus Operators reported today. In studies recently conducted the organization learned that 73 per cent of all drivers are between 21 and 37 years of age and 62 per cent of the maintenance crews fall between the ages of 18 and 37.

Already the bus industry has been called upon to meet a difficult manpower situation. Last year nearly half of the employed bus drivers went into the armed services, war industries or other forms of work, although their transportation vocation is considered essential. In addition to having to replace them, the bus operators were required to increase the total number by 27 per cent to take care of wartime transportation demands.

MARRIED MEN NOT TO BE DRAFTED CNTIL NECESSARY

Promising that married men with children "will not be drafted until we have to," Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, National Selective Service director, told Alabama Selective Service officials at Montgomery that he hoped for a reduction of physical and educational standards required for admission to the Army so as to make available men now disqualified.

The Selective Service official added that replacement schedules for war industries are also being pushed, with the object of releasing for military duty, able bodied men of military age and replacing them with older men, men with physical defects, and women.

ANNUAL HOMECOMING AT SHILOH

The annual homecoming will be held at Shiloh Baptist Church the first Sunday in June, 1943.

The program for the day is as follows:

10 O'clock: Devotional by Rev. Edward Wilkins. Welcome Address by Rev. J. I. Bice.
10:20: "World's Peace" by Rev Goodgame.

Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

DEANNA DURBIN has succeeded in convincing Hollywood executives, as well as the public, that she's grown up, thanks to radio. She was chosen to play the unhappy, psycho-pathological role created by Teresa Wright in "Shadow of a Doubt" for the Screen Guild Players' air version over CBS. Not only did Deanna come through with flying colors, but the radio program opened an entirely new vista of film and air endeavor for her, one that is completely removed from her singing.

It's not surprising that William Holden wanted to drop his own name—William Franklin Beedle—and legally switch to Holden. But when his wife, Brenda Marshall, has worked so hard and successfully to introduce that one, it's startling to have her announce that she's never liked it, and from now on will be known by her maiden and married names—Ardis Ankerson Holden.

Casting for "Hi Diddle Diddle" sounds a little goofy. Marek Windheim, former Metropolitan Opera tenor, will play a pianist-accompanist for Pola Negri, who makes her motion picture comeback as an opera singer. Seems he was chosen because he, like Miss Negri, is of Polish descent and artistic temperament. Richard Hageman, Metropolitan Opera conductor, plays a stockbroker.

Shirley Temple talked things over with David O. Selznick, and very wisely signed a long term contract with him. She'll appear in "Since You Went Away," his first production since "Rebecca," with an all-star cast.

Some people say that Hollywood had better lay off war pictures because the public's sick of them. Well, the armed forces aren't, judging by the men who come to New York's Civilian Defense Entertainment committee for free tickets. The other night I handed out passes to "Crash Dive" and "China" by the dozen. Of course, "China" had Harry James and his band to back it up.

Two men of the merchant marine visited Jimmy Dorsey a while back and gave him the "Gibraltar Medal" one of them was wearing. Afloat 36 days after their freighter was torpedoed, all they had to keep their morale up were his recordings of "Maria Elene" and "The Breeze and I." When they'd used up their needles they fell back on matches and paper clips.

If Spencer Tracy's really as tired as he looked in "Keeper of the Flame" he's badly in need of a rest . . . Better see "The More the Merrier" for laughs.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for June 6

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

PETER COMFORTS PERSECUTED CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—I Peter 3:13-17; 4:12-16; 5:6-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well-doing, than for evil-doing.—I Peter 3:17.

What shall we do? Where shall we turn? Is there no help for us? Such are the natural and understandable cries of those who bear the heavy heartbreak of persecution. God's Word has the answer, for from the very beginning the followers of Christ have had to meet that problem.

Peter is especially the apostle of comfort, and the portion now before us is rich in helpful instruction. His word to persecuted people is five-fold.

I. Do Not Be Afraid—Christ Is Lord (3:13-17).

By doing good the Christian will escape much suffering (v. 13), but if even then it comes, he is not to be afraid (v. 14). He is to sanctify Christ in his heart, that is, fully recognize the holiness of Christ and all that He is and can do for him. This is to be done in his heart. That means the exercise of full faith in Christ the Lord as the indwelling Presence. Who then can be afraid?

Note that this is not just a subjective spiritual exercise for his own enjoyment—it will show in his "good manner of life in Christ" which will put his persecutors "to shame" (v. 16). How effectively that has worked only recently in Germany, Norway and elsewhere.

II. Do Not Be Surprised—the Enemy Will Attack (4:12, 13).

Surprise attack is effective. Remember Pearl Harbor! Satan is an expert in strategy, and is eager to keep Christians in an easy and comfortable mood, so that he may strike a vicious blow when it is not expected. We best prepare to meet him when we recognize that persecution and suffering will come.

We are to bear in mind that it is not some "strange thing" which has happened; we who suffer as Christians are "partakers of Christ's sufferings." Joy and glory are ahead.

III. Do Not Be Ashamed—You Suffer for Christ (4:14-16).

Sadness and depression rest upon the one who suffers for his own evil deeds, but those who suffer for Christ's sake may be ever rejoicing. Can you not see that "the spirit of glory and the Spirit of God" are resting (v. 14) even now on some who sit in prisons and concentration camps? What a glorious picture of His grace!

It is proper to observe here that the believer is not to be guilty of that which justly brings the law's condemnation (v. 15). Do not fail to note the last of the list of crimes—"meddler in other men's matters." Has not just that caused endless trouble in the church and harmed its testimony before the world? Let's quit meddling!

IV. Do Not Worry—He Careth for You (5:6, 7).

Worry! Worry! How it does crowd itself into our thinking. Yes, we know we are Christians, that we are unjustly accused or persecuted, that we are suffering for Christ's sake. That's all true, but how is it all coming out? What about my family? Will they harm my child[illegible] I do survive will I be able to [illegible] anew? And so on—questi[illegible] out end; and soon comes [illegible] ing touch of worry.

What shall we do? [illegible] is plain. Cast all your [illegible] Christ—"He careth for yo[illegible]. That takes an act of faith [illegible] it does to become a Christian in the first place, but it works.

The cure for all anxiety is right there—but it can only be reached by the path of humility. "Humble yourselves" (v. 6). There is the gateway to comfort, and to true exaltation in God's own good time (cf. Jas. 6:4-10).

V. Do Not Waver—God Is Your Strength (5:8-10).

Steady, perfected, established in Christ, sure of his eternal destiny and with the eyes of faith seeing the glory to come—such is the man who is ready and able to meet the devil when, like a roaring lion, he seeks to disturb and devour God's people. The believer should be ready and equipped.

That does not mean that the Christian sits with his hands folded waiting in a fatalistic way for the inevitable to happen. Never! He is "on the alert" with his spiritual ears attuned to hear the approach of the enemy's "bombers." He is "sober and watchful" against the "roaring lion" (v. 8).

Satan is unusually busy in our day. Alert Christian people see his deadly onslaughts on the brethren, which are possibly more severe now than for many years. He is seeking to break them down physically, mentally and spiritually, to make them fearful, to make them timid about work for Christ, to limit their usefulness, and to steal from them their victorious assurance. He is busy—let us be alert against him.

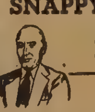
SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER



Considering cost of oil, gas, tires and upkeep, it is estimated that the cost of driving the average car for 1000 miles at 45 miles per hour is $22.03. At 25 mph the cost is cut to $14.38 and at 35 mph it is held to $17.86.

Malaya and the Netherlands Indies were the only sources of natural rubber in the world which had been successfully exploited to an important extent prior to the present war.

Rubber and gas rationing did not drastically cut motor truck operations last year. Official figures show that during 1942 trucks hauled an estimated 46 billion ton miles of freight on main rural highways, compared with 46.7 billion in the more normal 1940.

Get Your Protein!

There's no reason why you should not be getting your necessary protein into your daily menus, or why using meat alternates, i.e.—foods you use alternately with meat—should become a dull or difficult problem.

Here's your opportunity to show your family what a really smart homemaker you are—for you can keep up their admiration for you by serving an endless variety of good egg and chicken dishes, and fish in all its variety. These foods are protein-rich and with a little ingenuity you can make a star performer out of many of them.

Chicken comes beautifully to the rescue for it's a good, complete protein and the supply is good, especially at the present time. Use chicken wisely, however, a little bit of it combined with other foods can make a meal or more out of one chicken. Here's an example:

Chicken Chowder.
(Serves 6)

1 cup cooked, diced chicken
2 ounces salt pork, finely diced, or
4 tablespoons chicken fat
2 to 4 tablespoons onion, finely chopped
2½ cups potatoes, diced
1 cup celery, diced
2 cups chicken stock
1 No. 2 can kernel corn
1 tall can evaporated milk
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Cook salt pork in sauce pan over low heat until lightly browned. Add chicken and onion and cook until onion is soft, but not browned. Add potatoes, celery and chicken stock. Simmer until vegetables are tender. Add corn, milk, and seasonings. Heat thoroughly, stirring occasionally. Season to taste with additional salt and pepper, if desired. Serve very hot with crack[illegible]d rolls or toast.

Make good use of crisp[illegible] tables to go into a sal[illegible] Chicken Chowder to rou[illegible] meal:

Chef's Salad.
Serves 6)

1 head lettuce
2 tomatoes, cut in quarters
4 spring onions, cut fine
2 hearts of celery, cut fine
2 hard-cooked eggs, quartered

Wash lettuce and dry in towel. Break lettuce apart, but do not cut. Place in chilled bowl and add remaining ingredients. Toss lightly together with french dressing.

Another good dish using chicken, a complete protein food, and spaghetti usually classified as a second class protein food, is combined in this way:

Spaghetti and Chicken Casserole.
(Serves 8)

¼ cup chicken fat or shortening
¼ cup chopped onion
¼ cup flour
2 cups chicken stock
1 cup grated cheese
1 cup cooked tomatoes
2 cups diced chicken
1 8-ounce package spaghetti, cooked
½ cup buttered bread crumbs

Melt fat and cook onions slowly for 10 minutes. Add flour, stir well, add stock, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add cheese and stir until melted. Blend in tomatoes and chicken. Place chicken mixture and spaghetti alternately in greased casserole. Cover with buttered crumbs. Bake for 25 minutes in a 375-degree oven.

Ever think of creaming deviled eggs? They make a delicious main dish on warmer nights:

Creamed Deviled Eggs.
(Serves 4)

4 hard-cooked eggs
1½ teaspoons vinegar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon sugar
1½ tablespoons melted butter
¼ teaspoon worcestershire sauce
1 cup white sauce

Cut eggs lengthwise into halves. Combine egg yolks with next seven ingredients. Beat together until well blended and smooth. Fill whites with yolk mixture, place in baking dish and cover with white sauce. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) [illegible]en 15 minutes. Serve hot on bis[illegible]its or toasted English muffins. [illegible]f desired, use ¾ cup condensed [illegible]shroom soup thinned with ¼ cup [illegible]lk instead of the white sauce.

A dessert can take the place of a protein food for a meal and help you along in getting important body building and maintaining material, if it's a dessert like this:

Oatmeal Peach Pudding.
(Serves 6)

2 cups canned peaches, fresh rhubarb or apples
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon butter
¼ cup melted shortening
½ cup brown sugar
⅔ cup sifted flour
⅛ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon soda
⅔ cup quick-cooking oatmeal
½ teaspoon vanilla

Arrange fruit in shallow, greased baking dish. Sprinkle with lemon juice and cinnamon and dot with butter. Combine melted shortening and brown sugar. Sift flour, salt and soda together and mix the oatmeal. Blend in sugar mixture, crumbling well, then add vanilla. Spread over fruit and bake for 45 minutes in a 350-degree oven. Serve warm with pudding sauce or top milk.

Are you having difficulties planning meals with points? Stretching your meats? Lynn Chambers can give you help if you write her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply, in care of her at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Consumers can do a lot in stamping out the illegal sale of meat by making sure that all meat they buy comes from a carcass which carries the necessary stamps — the permit number of the slaughterer and a grade stamp.

Ceiling prices are in effect in many areas for meat. They are posted by the butcher near meat counters and you can consult them when buying your meat.

Changes have come about on the bread situation. No more double or triple wrapping is allowed for bread and rolls. No more leftover bread or rolls can be returned to the baker, nor can there be any fancy racks for displaying bread.

Retail bakers are limited to 15 varieties of bread and nine varieties of rolls in one week. Many of these measures are designed to keep bread prices down.

Although outwardly, bread trimmings have been stripped, the insides are better. All white bread must now be enriched. Each loaf of white bread m[illegible]t contain not less than three parts nor more than four parts of milk solids to 100 parts of flour.

American Propaganda Strengthened by Victory

Triumph in Tunisia Furnishes Powerful Ammunition for Verbal Warfare; Axis Policy of Suppression Backfires.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

As this is written, America is preparing for the greatest assault on the German home front since the war began. The new offensive is made possible by two things: the fall of Tunisia which weakened the barricade of German morale, and the capture of the City of Tunis, where Africa's most effective radio station for reaching Europe is located. Because of the water-jump, the transmission from Tunis is especially favorable.

The members of the staff of the Office of War Information who man the front in the battle of verbal warfare say that their fire power has increased tremendously with the African military victory. They explain it this way: propaganda is a strange thing. Alone, it is not a very powerful weapon—it has to be backed up by events. Germany's barrage of words that had so much to do with preparing the way for her soldiers did not really become effective until Hitler had begun to act; until he could report his successful aggression, his blitz against Poland helped against Scandinavia; his victory in the low countries bolstered his "Victory in the West"—the film of that name was widely used as defeatist propaganda.

Because of this principle, American propaganda was handicapped. Until November fifth of last year, the only concrete thing which America had to talk about was production. But on and after that date, the attack from the radio stations in Africa jumped from the sniper to the machine-gun class because the enemy knew that not far from the radio station were American soldiers. America was actually in the war, physically participating against the troops of the Axis.

Truth Pays Dividends

Two things, the experts point out, strengthen the American attack. First, from the beginning, the Americans told the truth; they didn't overshoot the mark. Second, the Germans played down the Tunisian campaign, failed to prepare the people for the humiliating catastrophe ahead of them. And so Herr Goebbels, supposed to be past master of the art of psychological warfare, ignored one of its main thesis, namely, that it is a weapon that turns in your hands if it is forged of lies.

As Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, recently put it in an article in the spring issue of the Public Opinion quarterly —"Thanks to . . . the endeavor of the totalitarian governments to suppress all news and all opinion except what they choose to give out, the truth has become a more powerful weapon than ever before."

The American campaign now under way takes advantage of this fact, plus the fact that the Americans now have new and important truths to report.

There are two separate fronts: the people in the occupied countries; the enemy countries. To the former will go much of the same material as is directed at the enemy plus the warnings against premature uprisings and encouragement to the underground organizations to which the British have long been directing their broadcasts. They will be cautioned not to risk their lives until the final word is given.

Revolt in Holland

Recently, it was reported that a revolt had broken out in Holland after the prime minister of the Netherlands had ordered the Dutch ex-servicemen to resist the German order to report for internment. This was not an attempt at revolution. Those in the know understood the prime minister's message which was in no way different from the instructions to the Frenchmen to resist the conscription for labor in Germany. The French did resist and the whole plan was sabotaged.

What the Netherlanders will do can be imagined. As the Germans themselves put it, "The widespread stubbornness of the Dutch sticks until this day to the saying: 'The Germans have invaded our country, have not conquered it.'"

For the second front at which the Allied propaganda is aimed, the civilian population in the enemy countries, the story is a little different. It is specialized for Italy where the people are frankly told: "If you want to stop the bombing of your cities, make peace now." The Germans are not ready for such a message as this is written but they may be before long.

To them, defeatist propaganda will be served in large doses now much more effective since they have tasted real defeat in Africa. Instead of hammering on the theme as formerly, "the Allies will win," the radio now tells them in a cool and factual statement, "the Allies are winning." The unbeatable Germans were beaten in Africa.

The second line of attack is a variation of the invasion warning which now also is much more telling. No actual information can be broadcast on this subject and everything that is said is carefully checked by the general staffs but it follows the line of the President's statement after Casablanca, "We will attack the continent from the northern capes of Norway to the eastern islands of the Mediterranean"—and right now, the Germans are beginning to feel the truth of this statement.

Deadly Parallel

Details of the surrender at Tunis and Bizerte and on the Cape Bon peninsula will be repeated. Coolly and objectively, the deadly parallel will be presented; what the German government told the people would happen; what did happen; what the German communiques said had happened; what actually happened—the "fight to the last cartridge" versus the huge stocks of ammunition captured by the Allies and the German troops marching up without guards to report to the prison camps.

So Herr Goebbel's weapon, which has turned in his hand, is given a slight push.

The Germans are brilliant students but somehow their learning always seems to fall just a little short of practical application. Listen to what Herr Hitler himself wrote in "Mein Kampf" about American and British propaganda in the last war which he praised highly and which he admits he used as a model for his own in this war:

"The war propaganda of the English and Americans was psychologically correct," wrote the fuehrer-to-be as he sat in jail after his first putsch. "In the beginning, it sounded crazy and impudent; later, it was no more than unpleasant; and finally, it was believed. After four and a half years, there broke out in Germany a revolution whose slogans came from the enemy's war propaganda."

Hitler didn't know it but he was writing history that is about to repeat itself before long.

Planners for the Postwar World

Never before in history have men expended as much time and money in an effort to plan a better world. Kites rise against the wind and the demonology of Nazidom has swept away the gilt and the gee-gaws of our civilization and left bare the foundations with all their potential strength and pitiful weakness. The positive forces of evil have generated positive forces of good to oppose them.

At this moment more than 137 important government agencies in Washington and private organizations scattered throughout the country, not counting various state and smaller local groups "are engaged in research or public education on a national scale on the problems facing the United States when the war ends," according to the findings of a recent investigation by the Twentieth Century Fur[illegible] a research organization.

The interesting thing about these studies is that most of them agree on one constructive peacetime goal which is considered essential to bring about necessary reforms and that is "full employment"—in other words, a job for everybody who can and will work. The war has shown what tremendous, potential production is possible. If it is maintained, most of our other ills will fade.

PRESS SEAM UNDER
TUCK HEAVY ROPE AROUND SEAT TO HOLD COVER DOWN
SEW ON UNWELTED PIECES. THEN SEW WELTED PIECES OVER THEM WITH A CURVED NEEDLE

SEW-ON covers of chintz or other smart cottons are always neat and trim and, since the pieces are all sewn to the old upholstery of the chair with rather long stitches, it is not difficult to remove the cover for washing or cleaning. If washed at home it is much easier to handle separate pieces than an entire slip cover.

A sew-on cover should be pin-fitted with a 4-inch tuck-in around the spring seat and 1-inch seam allowances. Use tailor's chalk to mark stitching lines and indicate pieces to have welting stitched to edges. Here, welting is used for the side seams of the inside center back section; across the front of the seat; for the top and bottom of the outside; and all around the front of the arm sections. The sketch shows how welted and unwelted pieces are sewn in place. The welting hides the stitches if you use heavy duty thread matching the cord covering.

NOTE—The new BOOK 10 of the series of booklets offered with these articles gives other valuable pointers on making both sew-on covers and removable slip covers. BOOK 9 gives directions for repairing the springs of chairs before covering them. BOOK 9 and 10 are 15 cents each. Send your order to:

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Entered in the Postoffice at Clanton, Alabama, as second-class matter under the Act of Congress of March. 1897
MRS MARK L. TUCKER, Owner
R. M. TUCKER, Managing Editor
The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

Vacations this year will not be enjoyed by the boys on the firing line, regardless of how necessary a rest may be to the people at home.

VALUABLE CITIZENS—

Rumors are abroad that the Dan Waite family and the L. J. Stewarts' are moving from Clanton. We can ill afford to lose these two prominent families. Both are very popular in Civic affairs and both are faithful church workers.

The families of both can rest assured that the best wishes of the entire citizenship of Clanton and Chilton County go with them and may happiness be theirs, always.

THINKING OF THEM—

Hooray, for the Clanton Kiwanis Club for sponsoring the raising of monies for the purpose of buying cigarets for the "Boys in the Fox Holes."

One who has not acquired the "habit", will probably never understand how much company a good smoke can be. But to those millions of others used to a quiet smoke, no amount of trouble will be too much is making a success of this undertaking.

Two of the committee, Donald Blackketter and R. C. Williams, are working hard and long placing the cash offering jars on counters over the county. They are doing their job well and with the aid of all, will accomplish much in letting the "Boys in the Fox Holes" know that we at home are thinking of them.

What could be more foolish than the State of Alabama and the County of Jefferson, spending thousands of dollars more to settle the Weaver case when twelve men have already found him guilty and the Judge gives him 50 years in the pen? When the accused admits that he is guilty and has already been convicted, why should he be given another trial that will again cost the taxpayers all of this money?

OFFICIAL AND UNOFFICIAL NEWS—

The aerial offensive against the Axis in Europe has been in full blast during the month of May, with heavy raids on Sicily, Italy and occupied Europe.

Official communiques seldom reveal the strength of attacking squadrons but what the war offices omit the correspondents supply, even if they have to speculate a bit as to the facts.

The British attack upon Duisburg was officially termed the "heaviest" of the war, although London did not reveal the number of planes involved.

A United Press dispatch states that "almost 2,000 tons of bombs" were tropped "by moonlight", touching off "tremendous explosions and starting fires visible for 150 miles." This "news" is not official. The British communique merely reported that "visibility was good and preliminary reports indicate excellent results."

The contrast between the official reports and the news accounts of these raids may suggest that the public must learn to differentiate between the two.

It may be that official communiques err on the side of understatement and, then again, it may be that the reporters become over enthusiastic, basing their accounts upon uncorrected personal narratives. Obviously, the correspondents had so first hand information.

MORAL ECHOES

I sat in an audience where people had gathered to sing and it only took me a moment to discover that there was a discord and that most of the voices were out of harmony. For a moment I thougrt that I would get up and walk out in disgust, but just then I heard a lady with a sweet. mellow voice, who was singing he tune to perfection and my attention was directed toward her. She was not trying to drown all the other voices. but she just kept singing in that sweet tone and in a few moments all who were near her, caught her way of singing the exact tune. Soon the entire band of singers had caught her tone and spirit and there was perfect harmony. What a blessing comes from anyone who is unselfish and who, without show or pretention, can lead others aright. The most of us have a leadership that we can exercise for the good of those around us. Do right yourself Man's voice and God's voice get mix- and see what good will follow.

A legend tells us that one day old they have not closed the door of their St. Peter sent out two angels from the gates of heaven, each with a basket to gather up the petition of those who prayed, while the other was to gather up the prayers of thanksgiving. After flying here and there, as a bee among flowers, finally they decided to report back to St. Peter. The Angel who was to gather up the petitions had a basket full and then on his back he carried a large bag that could not be placed in the basket. He had done well, for on every hand the people were calling on God for some special favor. The Angel who was to gather up the thanksgiving of a people who were wonderfully blessed, blushed with shame as he presented his ewpty basket before Peter. There were only three little prayers of thanksgiving rattling around in his big basket. We say to God "give me" but rarely ever do we say, "Thank You God." Friend, stop right now and utter a prayer of thanksgiving.

All day little Tommy had been a worry to his mother and when night came oh he came to kiss his mother goodnight. As he turned to go his mother sai dto him, "Tommy you have ben provoking all day and I fear that you do not pray." "Yes, I do" replied Tommy, "Every night I pray that God will make you ahd Pa like the way I do better." How many times do you find yourself praying that God will make other people better. All of your troubles originate in other people. The most of us should proy. "God be merciful to me, a sinner." When number one gets right, it will not be so hard to get number two and three to be right.

I saw a man stahding in a telephone booth trying to talk to some one, but evidently he was not hearing. He kept saying, "speak louder. I can't hear you. What did you say?" Finally the man at the other end of the line shouted so that we could rear him at a distance. "If you will close the door to your booth, you can hear." His door was wide open and the man at the other receiver, could hear, not only the man's voice, but the store and the street noises also. Some people have gotten their message from heaven badly confused, and all because they have not closed tre door of their hearts to the noises of the world. Man's voife and God's voice get mixed in their ears. They cannot tell who is speaking. The bother is to be located in the open door toward the world. Christ commands that we go nto our closet and shut the door. Close out earthly noises wren you want to hear God distinctly.

NEWS FROM FLOYD

Sunday School and Church services were well attended Sunday. After Sunday School Bro. Floyd Smith brought us a wonderful message which was enjoyed by all. We had lots of visitors which we were glad to have and we give you a welcome to come back anytime.

Mrs. T. A. Prickett is on our sick list this week. We all hope for her speedy recovery.

Mr. E. E. Williams and son Dannie of Birmingham spent the week-end with his brother, J. M. Williams.

Let everybody come to Sunday Scrool early next Sunday. There are some who want to attend the Homecoming at Shiloh.

We will not have any preaching service Sunday morning but will have Services Sunday night. Everybody bear this in mind and come to Sunday School.

THORSBY

The Institute wishes to thank publicly the Ladies' Guild for having the Dining Hall redecorated on the inside. Also it wishes to thank various individuals in Thorsby who have helped the school with money, provisions etc.

During this week the Thorsby Institute office will be open from 8:30 to 12:00 and 1:30 to 5:00. It would help in planning studies for next year if old and new pupils would register right away.

Mrs Emily Harding, librarian at Thorsby Institute, left on Thursday May 27 for Oberlin, Ohio to attend her 45th reunion. She expects also to to visit her son at Akron, Ohio. The Library will be open once a week from 8:00 to 12:00 on Thursday. Miss Lois Leech will be in charge while Mrs. Harding is away.

JOHN H. STANGE

John H. Stange, age 72, passed away at his residence, Verbena Route 1, May 31, at 6 a. m. Funeral services were held at White City Methodist Church Tuesday at 2. p. m. Rev. C E. Avinger conducted the services Interment was in adjoining cemetery

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Mattie Stange; 4 sons, Herbert of Verbena; John Jr. and Barney of Verbena Route; Charlie in Foreign Service. 2 daughters, Mrs Jack Courtney of Verbena and Mrs. Arthur Calloway of Ensley, Ala. 4 grandchildren also survive. Spigener Funeral Home was in charge.

MRS. LULA MAHAN

CHESTNUT CREEK

We had a fine attendance at Sunday School last Sunday but lets make it better next Sunday. Our Sunday School has been growing some and we hope to keep it going strong for the Lord.

The women are planning to organize a W. M. S. Plans will be discussed next Sunday at Sunday School. We want all the women and girls to make a special effort to be present. We need a W. M. S. very much in our Church. You may trink you cannot come or you are not needed or some other excuse but you can and you are needed to make a success of the W. M. S. If you have never been in a meeting and don't know anything about how it is carried on you should be the one to make a special effort to be present and be a regular member, not just for a while and drop out

But we must all fight and keep the faith if we win.

Everyone who has loved ones buried in this cemetery are requested by the Crurch to send donations to the Church Clerk to help pay for the upkeep of the same. This cemetery is very large and it is in very bad condition right now. If you cannot come and help clean it off, I'm sure you will be glad to give something to help this worthy cause. Any amount you feel like giving will be appreciated.

Everybody remember to write the boys who are in service and especially those who are sick and wounded overseas. Also remember the preaching days and nights every Second and Fourth Sunday. We are planing the Revival to be the Fourth Sunday in July and the week following we have not made definite plans about the visiting minister yet, but we are hoping to do so very soon. Now for the address of the Church Clerk to whom you are to send your donations. J. T Sorrell, Verbena, Ala., Route 1. He will see that it goes to the right place and cause. Come to Shnday Scrool next Sunday.

NEWS FROM MOUNT NEBO

A large crowd attended services Sunday night and heard an inspiring message delivered by Rev W. G Barnes of Deatsville, the pastor at Mt Nebo fifteen years ago.

Mrs T. F. Culp was the Sunday guest of Mr and Mrs A. B. Culp.

Imogene Williams and Louise Sims were the week-end guests of Margaret Williams.

Pfc Arthur C. Henley was home again last Friday.

Mr and Mrs W. W. Culp and family of Bessemer spent the week end with Mr and Mrs John M. Culp.

Mr and Mrs David Sanders visited the formers mother, wro is in a Selma Hospital, Sunday. We wish for Mrs Sanders a speedy recovery.

Mrs. M. C. Clack from Columbus Ohio is visiting her sister Mrs. A. R Scott this week.

The Fairview Home Demonstration Club will meet on June 8, at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs J. D. Culp instead of with Mrs V. C. McKee, as was previously announced. A demonstration will be given on the drying of fruits and vegetables. This is something that should be of interest to all farm women. All members are urged to attend and visitors are welcomed.

NEWS FROM

Alabamians On Committee For Economic Development

The Committee for Economic Development this week announced the appointment of four district chairmen for Alabama. The appointments are made upon recommendation of Harrison Jones, chairman of the Board of trustees, and H. Carl Wolf, regional chairman for the Southeast. Those selected were Barrett Shelton, publisher, Decatur Daily for District No. 1, comprising 14 counties in north Alabama; Milton H. Fies, vice president, DeBardeleben Coal Corporation, Birmingham, for District No. 2, embracing 17 counties in north central Alabama; Ray Ballard McLure, vice president, Parts Service Corporation, Montgomery, for District No. 3 covering 18 counties in south central Alabama; and J. Finley McRae, president, Merchants National Bank of Mobile, for District No. 4, covering 18 counties in south Alabama.

The Committee for Economic Development, organized nationally under the chairmanship of Paul G. Hoffman, president, Studebaker Corporation, and embracing in its membership a cross section of leading industrial, commercial, banking, publishing and educational organizations, has as its aim the stimulation of every community to use its own resources and abilities to their maximum in post-war planning and to provide on a national scale working answers to the question, "What conditions does business require from government and from all other aspects of its environment to enable it to do its maximum job?"

H. Carl Wolf, regional chairman, states: "It's a grass roots job. The Committee is not an over head planning organization. It is not over head about anything. Its work will be from the roots up and not from the top down."

Importance of the work of the Committee is borne out by the fact that to have a satisfactory level of employment in the post-war period, America must provide in the neighborhood of 57 million jobs, some 11 million more than in 1940, as soon as possible after hostilities cease. To achieve this employment objective, the nation must provide and sell on a profitable basis approximately 40% more than in 1940 The Committee for Economic Development has organized a National Research Division with Professor Theodore O. Yntema, University of Chicago, as research director and Professor Sumner H. Slichter, Harvard University, as chairman of the Research Advisory Board.

Regional Chairman Wolf expresses the hope that the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce, the local Chambers of Commerce, and other civic organizations will give the Committee for Economic Development their wholehearted support and cooperate with the Alabama district chairmen in setting up community organizations throughout Alabama to advance the aims of the Committee

FARMERS UNION AND THE CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENT

The co-operative movement is not in its infancy, only to those who have failed to inform themselves as to its origin and success.

There are two kinds of cooperatives The consumers co-op and the producers co-op. In Rockdale, England 1844, a group of 28 members of a woolen mill, banded themselves together and establisred a consumers co-op.

The earnings of these weavers were not sufficient for a decent standard of living. They could not get their wages increased, something had to be done and they did it. They came together and said "we cannot get more money for our labor but we can get more goods for our money if we will buy together. Wages were low, money hard to get but they would not give up. The 28 faithful members agreed to save their money for the next twelve months and then go into business for themselves. When the 12 months rolled around they put their money together and set up the consumer's co-op.

The 28 that founded the Rockdale Co-op has gone down in history as an achievement and a model worthy to be followed. The 28 although tre lie silent in the grave, their voices ring out the spirit of cooperation and brotherly love. These men were not distrustful of their fellowmen. They didn't stand back and say "I will wait and see if it's a success." They joined to make it a success.

Let us now turn to the co-op movement in the United States.

The hospitalization in Elk City Oklahoma, is serving thousands that would otherwise be impossible.

In North Dakota, the distribution of petroleum products, through the co-op system, has reached the rig high mark of 17,000,000 gallons annually.

The North and West are dotted with co-op's everywhere serving both producer and consumer. Cotton gins graineries, stock yards and creameries are owned by the Farm Union Co-op Membership. The builders of these great organizations are men who are not afraid, they have confidence in in their fellowman.

Let's not get the idea that these co-op organizations have all been easy going. Many have traveled the rocky road. Many co-ops have been started and some of them fell. In fact, all of them in the South went down. I think it necessary to mention tre course of their fall.

In fact, there were many members in the organization who were not union at heart. They did not put much time nor money in the organization but expected a large return. The commercial enterests took advantage of these poorly financed organizations They put on a campaign to burst the co-op movement. They sold goods below cost, the co-op could not compete with them.

The members of the co-op movement soon disbanded because they could get better prices elsewhere than they could at the co-op.

The trick worked; as soon as the co-op disbanded, the merchants raised the price of their goods higher than ever. The farmers being discouraged, poorly organized and poorly financed were slow to reorganize and establish their business. The failures back in those days handicap the co-op movement today.

We often hear the farmer say: "I will wait and see if it holds out and if so, I will join later."

I wish to say that the co-ops of today is incoraped and the management bonded. This makes your investment safe. If you are a farmer that have the interest of the farmer at heart; If you wish to join the group who is fighting for equity and justice, then we see no excuse why you should wait and see. If you are the type of farmer that works for yourself alone and have no interest in your neighbor or neighbor's children, then you may as well wait and see.

The co-op movement is doing business on a business basis and with the sacrifical spirit of men who are not distrussful of their fellowmen. We shall reach the goal of succeks.

Next week we will discuss, Education and organization.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allied Bombers Rip Axis Industries; British Delegate to Food Conference Asks 'Normal Granary' for All Nations; Reds Dissolve World Revolution Group

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Weary after hours of sandbagging the top of the mile long seawall at Beardstown, Ill., workers line up to refresh themselves with hot coffee served by Katherine White of the Red Cross Motor corps. An estimated 4,500 of the town's 6,500 persons already had been evacuated as the Illinois river rose to a height of 29.6 feet. Floods raging through the Midwest made 40,000 families with 160,000 members homeless, and thousands of fertile farm lands lay under cover of water.

FLOOD:
Thousands Homeless

More than 40,000 families or 160,000 persons were made homeless by raging flood waters that surged through the Midwest, pouring over into towns and covering thousands of acres of fertile farm land. Many communities joined with the Red Cross in sheltering the victims and providing immunization to disease.

As Food Administrator Chester C. Davis called a conference of governors and agriculture commissioners from six states to formulate a program for farm production in the rain and flood soaked areas, levees along the Mississippi tottered as the dark and muddy "Father of Waters" reached record crests.

At St. Louis, the Mississippi stood at 38.94 feet, highest in 99 years, and downstream at Cape Girardeau, it reached 40.5 feet, tops in 100 years. Even as these stages were being recorded, rolling torrents moved toward the Mississippi from the swollen Illinois and Missouri rivers. All along the Illinois side of the Mississippi levees cracked.

Adding to the flood, persistent rains continued to hamper farmers' work in the fields. According to experts, planting will be delayed till late in June, with harvests then depending upon the time frosts will appear in early fall.

BOMBERS:
Pound Axis Europe

Allied bombers struck at both ends of Europe, with Axis industries and defenses standing out as the targets.

Hit hardest by the raids was the metal, coal and communication center of Dortmund in northwestern Germany. More than 2,000 tons of high explosives fell on the city, with curling palls of smoke rising from raging fires often obscuring visibility.

Thirty-eight of the bombers failed to return from the attack, which brought to 100,000 tons the amount of explosives dropped by the RAF over Germany since the start of the war.

While the Allies were busy in the north, their squadrons were equally active in the Mediterranean area, where American and British bombers continued to plaster important enemy outposts of the Italian mainland.

Airdromes, harbors and shipping installations were pounded on the islands of Pantelleria, Sardinia and Sicily. The ferry linking Sicily with Italy was blasted, with the enemy admitting heavy damage.

COAL TRUCE:
Bargain Collectively

The United Mine Workers and the coal operators resumed collective bargaining even as the War Labor board denied John L. Lewis' demands for a $2 a day wage increase. However, the WLB, which must approve any agreement, recommended that the disputants come to terms on the question of paying miners for the time spent in traveling to and from the mine faces.

Also, the WLB indicated it favored the six-day week for the miners, with wage concessions for the extra day. It ordered the vacation payment boosted from $20 to $50. All told, these payments would represent an 8 to 15 cents a day wage increase.

ATTU:
Remnants Resist

Entrapped in the mountains on the northeast tip of Attu, Japanese remnants bitterly resisted the advance of American troops slogged by sleet and rain.

As the Americans' pressure increased, a formation of 16 Japanese bombers flew in to raid ground positions and shipping. A half dozen American Lightning fighters rose up to intercept the attackers, and the army reported that two-thirds of the enemy squadron was shattered.

The Japanese remnants made good use of the high ground both north and south of the village of Attu, their main supply base which had been razed by bombers. American troops bucked strong positions which the enemy had carved into the mountainside and on either side of the towering passes.

Meanwhile, American bombers continued to pound the main Jap Aleutian base at Kiska, 172 miles to the east of Attu.

FOOD CONFERENCE:
For Normal Granary

World-wide application of the principle of the "ever-normal granary" was suggested by Richard K. Law, chairman of the British delegation to the United Nations' food conference at Hot Springs, Va.

Declaring that the world must devise a system of international trade which will assure the passage of food from the producer to the consumer at fair and stable prices, Law recommended building buffer stocks which would be increased when supply outran demand, and drawn upon when output dropped.

Law hit the system of regulating agriculture trade by allotting importers specific quotas, say on wheat, etc. Instead, he advocated the creation of an authority that would be representative of the consumer as well as the producer.

Law's statement was followed by a suggestion of the American delegation that resettlement of millions of people may be necessary to promote adequate food production. The delegation said that only one-fifth of the world's population lived in those areas in the temperate zone in which food is produced by highly developed technology.

COMINTERN:
'Suspend' Revolution

Stating the war had made it impossible to co-ordinate its activity, the Communist party's organization for promoting world revolution known as the Comintern formally dissolved itself.

The action met with mixed emotion in Allied circles. While some interpreted the move as a step toward closer relations between Russia and the United Nations, others pointed out that in the U. S. the Communists had formally detached themselves from the Comintern in 1940, but maintained activity along the party line nonetheless.

Although the Comintern stressed that chief consideration for the dissolution lay in its inability to maintain communication with its various branches, it also declared that it had recognized that national Communist groups were in better position to frame and work out policies on the scene, than in some distant center.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO:
'The Child Is Born'

"The child is born!"

With those words Senator Arthur Vandenberg emerged from a conference of legislators to announce approval of a pay-as-you-go income tax measure, which would wipe out all taxes of $50 and under and forgive 75 per cent of the taxes remaining for one year, and put all taxpayers on a current basis July 1.

Agreement on the measure, which now has to be passed by both houses and signed by the President, came after months of bickering over pay-as-you-go taxation. According to terms of the new measure, taxpayers would select the highest of their 1942 or 1943 income tax liability for figuring out their tax. Of the remaining 25 per cent of the tax, they would clear up the arrears in two yearly payments, the first due in March, 1944, and the next in 1945.

To put taxpayers on a current basis, a 20 per cent tax on weekly wages would be applied after ordinary exemptions had been deducted. The 3 per cent victory tax would be included. The 20 per cent would cover the normal and first surtax. Any liability outstanding would then be settled later. Farmers would make quarterly tax payments on current earnings.

LABOR:
Study Lewis' Move

Labor circles are still buzzing with excitement over John L. Lewis' application for the United Mine Workers' readmission into the American Federation of Labor, from which they bolted when Big John undertook the formation of the CIO about a decade ago.

Lewis' application has been put under the study of the AFL executive committee, which will report back on the proposal later this summer. Although the application is expected to be received with favor, it was pointed out that Lewis' District 50 of the Mine Workers also takes in a number of other different unions organized in fields where AFL units already exist. Also to be solved is where the AFL's Progressive Mine union will stand if Lewis' United Mine Workers are readmitted.

PEARL HARBOR:
Final Accounting

Last February, workmen clambered over the 27-year-old hull of the battleship Oklahoma, turned almost upside down by the Japanese in their attack on Pearl Harbor, in December, 1941.

The workmen tied cables to her framework. The ends were tied to winches set up on shore. Then the signal was given and the winches began pulling on the cables. After 69 hours, the steady tug gradually drew the Oklahoma from the depths, righting her.

Salvaging of the Oklahoma reduced the final loss at Pearl Harbor to three ships—the battleship Arizona and the destroyers Cassin and Downes.

Repair restored the battleships California, Nevada and West Virginia and the destroyer Shaw, which had been struck and heavily damaged.

RUBBER STRIKE:
Higher Pay Demanded

Fifteen thousand employees of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company joined 30,000 other workers from the Firestone Tire and Rubber company and the B. F. Goodrich company in a strike protesting the War Labor board's refusal to grant a requested eight cent per hour wage increase. It allowed a three cent boost.

The strike paralyzed production in the country's three major rubber plants. Although Sherman H. Dalrymple as international president of the CIO united rubber workers expressed public disapproval of the stoppages, strong detachments of pickets prevented the return of employees to the factories.

Dalrymple hastened to Washington to confer with the WLB, while an official of the war department roundly condemned the stoppage as a violation of the union's no-strike pledge. In declining to grant an eight cent increase, the WLB said such an action would unstabilize pay levels throughout the industry.

POLL TAX:
Good Show

Amid the gymnastics of a gallery spectator, the house passed the anti-poll tax bill, 265 to 110. The bill abolishes the poll tax as a condition of voting in primaries or other elections for national officers.

A 21-year-old sailor from San Francisco provided the acrobatics at the session, standing on the gallery rail and hanging onto a pillar while shouting for passage of the bill.

In opposing the measure, Rep. Hatton Sumners of Texas said: "There is some expense to democracy. The individual who is unwilling to pay $1.50 or $2 isn't a good citizen of this democracy."

DRESSES:
WPB Cuts Frills

As part of the effort to make more garments from limited material, the War Production board imposed new controls on women's garments.

Trimming allowance for dresses is restricted. Hip measurements have been cut to 56 inches and sleeve lengths to 30 inches on the basic untrimmed dress. Skirt sweeps are reduced six inches to 72 inches. The limits are for size 16, with proportionate variations for other sizes.

Quiet and Studious Is the General in Fiery Patton's Post

NEW YORK.—The close-meshed infantry net of Maj. Gen. Omar N. Bradley dipped up whole divisions of the floundering Nazis in North Africa. Legends were already thick around some American general officers when they assumed conspicuous posts of command in this war. Marshall's admirers insisted that he had been a prodigy even as a shavetail. MacArthur was the century's Bayard, and still has no rival. Stilwell was a king of catch-as-catch-can fighters, talked Chinese besides a dozen dialects. Patton was a Paul Bunyan who could heave a tank like a potato.

There seem to be no similar flourishes in the history of Bradley, newly in command of the American Second corps in place of the sulphurous Patton. He is 50.

Bradley was graduated from West Point two years before the last war and at its end was a temporary major. But four years later he was back to a captaincy and after that made slow going over the peace-time hump in the officers' list. Fourteen years passed before he got his lieutenant colonelcy and he waited until 1941 for his brigadier's single star.

Meanwhile he had gone to the Command and General Staff school, the War college, and the Infantry school, advanced course, and with so much study rated the commandancy of the Ft. Benning Infantry school.

Now he moves into the tough headquarters that Patton has vacated, a quiet general who might pass for a professor. His wide forehead is cerebral, his long, narrow face full of thought. But he is an infantry expert.

As Their Needs Are, Steinhardts Gather Languages

WHEN Laurence A. Steinhardt set off to be ambassador at Ankara he spoke German, Spanish, French and Swedish well, and he was pretty sure that he would manage all right in Turkish, too. Sure enough, here he sits pretty now while the Axis rushes diplomatic reinforcements to tug at a Turkey leaning more and more toward the Allied table.

Steinhardt's performanoy is a score for President Roosevelt's original inner circle. He was of the coterie which counseled FDR when the latter would have settled, and in writing, for just one term. The group has been considerably broken but Steinhardt always takes his old place in the huddle whenever he gets to the White House.

He is out of the country so much that he doesn't get there often. He was sent on a special job to Sweden, the youngest diplomat President Roosevelt ever had appointed to a major post. Next he went to Russia. He got to Peru, also.

A nephew of the late legal swashbuckler, Samuel Untermyer, he used to practice law. He was born in New York City 51 years ago and, standing practically on his own doorstep, picked up three degrees from Columbia university. His wife has one only, but she is a better linguist. She speaks seven languages, and on top of that is breath-taking. His daughter speaks seven languages, too.

2,000 Foe Planes Downed, Now Going After Their Source

A QUARTER century of study, about half his life, goes into the plans Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur W. Tedder is making to strafe the soft underbelly of Hitler's citadel. Between the landings at Casablanca and Oran and the Nazi collapse before Bizerte and Tunis his air forces finished 2,000 enemy planes. Now he is free to go after the Italian cities which helped make the planes and other Nazi arms.

In World War I Sir Arthur fought over France in the paleozoic airships of the Royal Flying force. One time he won a decoration from the Italians, allies then; three times he was mentioned in dispatches.

When the Boche collapsed on the Meuse and in the Argonne and the RFF became the peacetime RAF Tedder stayed on and rose steadily. He has been chief of the Mediterranean Air command since February, holding authority over French and American flying units in the area as well as British.

A son of the air marshal, his eldest, was killed in a dogfight with the Luftwaffe when the air battle over England was in the touch-and-go stage. There is another son and a daughter living, but Lady Tedder is dead. She was killed in a plane crash, too, near Cairo.

When Sir Arthur was at Cambridge—Magdalene college—he took honors in history and in his spare time sketched. When his son died, and his wife also, he disappeared for a few days with a thick volume of other times and people, and some drawing pencils and paper.

What is the most welcome gift you can send to a man in the service? Well, surveys among service men themselves show that one of the favorite packages from home are cigarettes. And first choice among men in all the services is Camel, based on the actual sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens. Though there are now Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. Trial Sans Prisoner

When a man indicted for a crime committed in Panama is a fugitive from justice, his trial is held without his presence, while the witnesses for the prosecution are alive, available and of sound memory, says Collier's. Recently, a safecracker began a six years' sentence within an hour after being captured, his trial and conviction having taken place three years before.

I SAID GOOD-BYE TO CONSTIPATION

Harsh, medicinal laxatives only griped me—and never really stopped my constipation. It always came back.
Then I found out why. I just wasn't taking on enough "bulk"-forming foods. So—I started eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly and drinking plenty of water. And—I "Joined the Regulars!"
That's because KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN gets at the cause of constipation like mine and corrects it—by helping to form a soft, bulky mass in the intestines.
If your trouble is what mine was, why not try KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN? It's made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek and tastes swell.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. After taking General MacArthur and his party safely to Cebu, in the southern islands, Squadron 3 prepared to participate in a "great offensive" planned against the Japs. But our planes and ships that were supposed to come didn't appear, and Lieut. Kelly's boat and the one Lieut. Bulkeley was riding in were forced into hiding.

CHAPTER XIII

"They didn't get us then," said Kelly. "At midnight our escape began. The destroyer lost me with its light temporarily, so I did a ninety-degree turn so as to pass astern of her and lose her. I continued on that course five minutes, heading directly away from her, then to the left in another ninety-degree turn, and I started looking around the ship.

"I found Reynolds, my port gunner (he was also cook), had been shot through the throat and shoulder. I got him down below and had the chief torpedoman and the radioman give him first aid.

"I found our mast had been shot off a foot over my head, so we couldn't use our radio for sending. The port turret had been hit and its guns were out of action.

"Our objective now was to get Reynolds to a doctor. We were going like a bat out of hell. I couldn't see the 41 boat—it was so dark I couldn't even see the shore. I just had to look at the compass and make mental estimates as to how far we had gone in various directions since I last had seen land I recognized, and then guess where we now were. I thought we were near the narrow channel between the islands; would another Jap destroyer be laying for me there?

"Suddenly, directly ahead, a searchlight came on, less than a mile away—a Jap steaming full speed at me. I barely had time to give a hard left and a hard right and we went scooting past each other at a relative speed of sixty knots before he had a chance to fire a shot. He turned, holding me down with his light like a bug under a pin, and started chasing, blazing away with big guns—two splashes four hundred feet away, two more fifty feet away. I started zigging to squirm out of that light—wouldn't let my gunners fire a shot; it would help him keep our position. I was getting away, all right, but he kept firing for ten minutes, although his accuracy was going to hell. By 1:30 I could barely see his light, which was waving around, searching the water back of us.

"I kept on, wide-open, wondering how we'd ever get in, since we had no charts, it was black as pitch, and I knew coral reefs must be all around us. At four o'clock I slowed down and headed into where I hoped the beach was, taking soundings. The water suddenly shoaled off and bump! we were aground—a pinnacle of coral under her belly. Looking down with flashlights we could see the water was twenty feet deep with coral pinnacles all around us about every twenty feet, like a petrified forest, rising to within five feet of the surface.

"Studying the shore line, I realized we were about ten miles too far up the coast. I sent Ensign Richardson ashore in a rowboat to send an army doctor and ambulance out from Cebu for Reynolds, and also a tug for us.

"For the next hour we sallied ship-rocking it, trying to jiggle it off the pinnacle, backing with the engines [illegible] finally managed to roll it off. Reynolds was feeling fine now. I suddenly remembered a little [illegible] Peggy had given me on the Rock, went down to my locker and brought it up for him—a couple of codein tablets and a sedative pill. Now he was sitting topside smoking, although he couldn't drink because the water would leak out the hole in his throat. They'd been short of drugs on the Rock, but she sneaked these out for me just in case I got wounded out on patrol. A hell of a thoughtful present, and much more valuable and useful than a gold cigarette case.

"Dawn came with a low fog which shut out the coastal contours, and because of all the coral we had to stand well off the coast. The sun was well up but that didn't worry me; with air superiority we didn't need to stalk in the dark any more. By 7:30 the sun had burned the fog away and we started out on two engines—one screw had banged up on the coral but that didn't matter—we were crippled now, but 'Dad' Cleland would quickly fix us. At eight o'clock we spotted the entrance to the long channel and turned in.

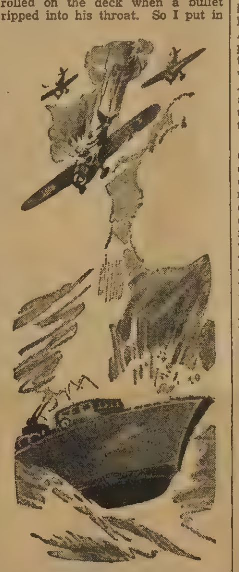
"So there we were, fat, dumb, and happy, heading up the narrow channel at fifteen knots, when all of a sudden—Wham! It was a hundred-pound bomb which landed about ten feet off our bow.

"Then I looked up, and here a second plane was peeling off, coming out of a cloud. But instead of the big white stars of the American air corps on her wings, there were the flaming suns of Japan!

"I didn't have time even to wonder what in hell had become of our big American offensive and the air umbrella, because I had to throttle back, stopping the boat momentarily so that the next bomb would land twenty-five feet in front instead of squarely on us. Then I gave her the gun and started trying to zigzag in that narrow four-hundred-foot-wide channel, meanwhile giving word to our machine guns to start firing.

"They bombed us for thirty minutes, and the farthest bomb was thirty feet away. We would wait for the bomb release, see it start falling, then I'd give hard rudder and it would miss by a few feet. All the while we had to keep in this narrow channel so we couldn't be beached helplessly on a coral reef, and work our way down it toward port, where presently some of the newly arrived American planes would see what was going on and come to help. We didn't doubt, of course, that they'd arrived. Four Jap seaplanes were after us, working in rotation—undoubtedly those from the second cruiser the army had reported as being around.

"When their bombs were exhausted they began diving down just over our mast stub to strafe us. With their first salvo they killed Harris. He was my torpedoman and also manning the starboard 50-caliber machine guns—a fine kid he was—he slumped down from his guns and rolled on the deck when a bullet ripped into his throat. So I put in Martino, or started to, but found they had also hit the gun and put it out of action.



"But meanwhile Ross had shot down one of the four planes."

"But meanwhile Ross, with the starboard 30-caliber machine guns, had shot down one of the four planes. The next plane got Ross in the leg, and also put out his gun. So we now had no guns, only two engines and a boat full of holes with three planes diving down to less than one hundred feet, raking us with fire which we couldn't return—only try to dodge.

"The engineer now reported the engine room was full of water and the boat was sinking, so there was nothing to do but beach her, if we were to save the wounded men. I headed her over towards nearby Kawit Island, and there she beached hard and fast. There were about twelve hundred yards of shallow surf, four feet of water over an uneven bottom of coral and sand, and then the palms. The planes kept up their strafing as we lay there, but there was nothing to do now but dodge while we got the wounded ashore.

"I went down into the engine room and there was Hunter, my chief machinist's mate, with his arm practically blown off—a bullet had entered his elbow and gone out a three inch hole in his forearm, but he was still manning the engines. I gave the order to abandon ship. It turned out that there were only three of us unhit, so it was a job getting the wounded out while the Japanese dived to rake us. We made the mistake of taking off our shoes, and the coral cut our feet to ribbons as we staggered carrying the men.

"I found Reynolds, who had been wounded in the throat during the night, now lying with his hand over his belly.

" 'Mr. Kelly,' he said, 'leave me here.'

" 'What happened?' I asked.

" 'When the planes attacked,' he said, 'there didn't seem to be anything for me to do, so I went below and lay down on Mr. Brantingham's bunk. They hit me in the belly while I was lying there. I'm done for, sir. I'll be all right here. You get out the others.'

"Well, the hell with that. So in spite of his protests, Martino and I carried him ashore. Then we went back for a last trip. Only Harris was left, lying where he had tumbled into the tank compartment. But the radioman and I carried his body ashore, because we hoped to give him a decent burial.

After reaching shore at Cebu Island, Lieutenant Kelly turned his attention to his casualties.

"I rounded up some native soldiers, who got stretchers, and in these we carried the wounded to the other side of the island where they could be loaded into a launch, putting them in charge of Sheppard, a first-class machinist's mate, to get them to the hospital.

"At this point a banca showed up, and it was a native doctor, the one we had sent Ensign Richardson ashore for, before dawn, for Reynolds, who by now was en route to the hospital. So I loaded the ship's papers, binoculars, and stuff into this banca, and with them I shoved off for Cebu.

"Halfway over the three planes came back and we tried to hide behind a fish trap—a net with bamboo poles sticking up out of the water. But they weren't strafing now. They were looking for the fourth plane we'd shot down. They scoured the area for twenty minutes. After they left we went on in, and of course I went straight to army headquarters, and met the colonel in charge—the No. 2 officer of the island. No, he hadn't heard from Bulkeley, but he'd send out a radio message to hunt for him if he was still alive. And maybe I'd better give my report direct to the general. I wanted to, and also I wanted to find out what had happened to our big American Offensive we had been asked to be part of, and that air umbrella which should have protected us this morning.

"The general had been having a conference at the bar of the American Club, sitting with some other officers and some civilians who were now all having a drink. Now a general is pretty important, and you don't just go barging into his conferences—not if you're a mere naval lieutenant in command of a little seventy-foot boat. So, following the lead of this conducting colonel, we stood off a bit and waited until the general gave us the signal to come on in and tie up at his table. He saw us all right, but he didn't give us the signal—just went on talking to the other officers and civilians.

"Now, thinking back, I realize it was a most important conference. But at the time I was excited, because I had just come from my boat in which I'd fought all through the war and with which we'd just helped to sink a Jap cruiser—my boat which was now lying beached across the bay, with one man dead, another dying, and all the rest but three wounded. I suppose I was unstrung. I wanted to have him make my report by radio about the cruiser. And then, although maybe it wasn't my business, I'd have liked to find out about that American offensive he'd invited us to join the night before.

"We kept standing there, the two of us, while I got madder and madder. I see now it was unreasonable, but I couldn't help it then. Finally it embarrassed even the colonel and he invited me to step over by the bar and have a drink with him. I said no, thanks, I had work to do, but I'd have a Coca Cola. I stuck around ten more minutes drinking it and then, since the general gave us no signal, I shoved off.

"I arranged to have the boat guarded. Because I wouldn't yet admit that maybe both it and we were expended now. High tide was at four o'clock. Couldn't we maybe patch her up, float her over to 'Dad' Cleland's, get torpedes and a crew from somewhere, and maybe fight her just once again?

"I went over there to where Brantingham and the 35 boat were, taking the stuff I'd salvaged from the boat, and they gave me some lunch as I talked about the fight and what had happened to us, and during it Ensign Richardson telephoned. He said Reynolds had died, and they were burying him and Harris in the American cemetery with a military escort and a priest, at four o'clock. I said of course I would go, and would meet Richardson at the bar of the American Club, from which we'd go over together.

"I got there but Richardson didn't show up. I stood around. I was tired and mad and lonesome as hell. Finally a civilian came up—and I got to talking to him. He was a very nice guy—vice president of the club. I told him our story and he said how sorry he was, and asked if he might go to the funeral. He was the first sympathetic person I'd met.

"Presently a truck arrived, driven by a Filipino soldier with a message for me that the funeral had been postponed until ten o'clock tomorrow. This American found out I knew nobody in Cebu, hadn't slept, and had no place to go, so he invited me out to his house for dinner and the night. Before I went, I located our three men who were unwounded. I gave them fifty pesos and told them to go ashore and get drunk and forget the whole mess—if they could.

WHY TEETH DECAY

At the beginning of the last war the regulations regarding teeth were so strict that I had a sergeant examine the mouths of the recruits before they were inspected by the medical officer. The simplest requirement was that the man must have one upper molar (grinding) tooth immediately above one lower grinding tooth, on one side of his mouth, yet about 7 in every 20 could not meet this requirement.

Dr. Barton

In this war medical officers are finding just as many men with infected or missing teeth as in the last war, but with an adequate dental corps men are taken into the army and the defects corrected.

What causes decay of teeth? Has the cause ever been discovered?

In the Journal of the American Dental Association, Robert G. Kesel, D.D.S., M.S., Chicago, states that 237 investigators report that dental decay begins with the destruction of the enamel by acid. This is not a new idea as a writer in A.D. 1530 stated that decay of teeth was due to decomposed food and acid moisture.

There appear to be two factors in tooth decay, the exciting or immediate cause, and the predisposing or underlying cause.

The immediate or exciting factors are organisms on the tooth surface capable of destroying tooth substances, and material (food particles clinging to the teeth) which are converted into substances harmful to the tooth. Without the organisms and tooth particles there likely would be no decay.

Yet, Dr. Kesel points out "that all living individuals have organisms on the tooth surfaces and most of them, at times, have upon their teeth materials that could form acid." Why then do not all teeth decay?

Teeth do not decay in some individuals despite the presence of organisms and acid forming material on the teeth, because these individuals do not have the predisposing or underlying conditions that enable the organisms and acid-forming materials to start the process of decay.

Six Pointers on Neurosis Prevention

While the curing of mental ailments has reached the highest point in history, nevertheless it must be remembered that many mental cases are not cured by our present methods including the shock treatment.

Why should there not be some method of preventing the development of mental ailments or preventing those with a tendency toward mental ailments becoming mental patients?

Today we see smallpox, diphtheria, scarlet fever, pernicious anemia, typhoid fever, diabetes prevented or controlled. Why cannot mental ailments be prevented, particularly in the young, just as diphtheria and scarlet fever are prevented?

In an article in Boston Number of the Medical Clinics of North America, Dr. Merrill Moore, in pointing out what psychiatry can do to prevent neurosis—patients whose odd behavior symptoms are not due to any organic cause, no change in brain structure—says:

1. Parents should not overexcite their children.
2. Children should be taught to relax and to concentrate (put their minds intently on a subject) when necessary.
3. Parents should remember that children are not their playthings to be poked and tossed about.
4. Children are assets; raising them is a serious business.
5. Parents should give their children a sense of security in the child's own small world.
6. All along the production line the parent should guide the child and try not to let him go off the track of normal development. For example, it is important for a boy (or girl) to keep abreast of his group and be able to do what his friends can do—in school, playground, or elsewhere—even if a little extra coaching is necessary. This prevents an inferiority complex. If a child does not hold his own in his own world, he may slink off on the sidelines and become critical or destructive. He may then more easily become a neurotic or an alcoholic.

A.—From your description it looks as if the eustachian tubes get blocked. Ask your physician about blowing them open. Special diet might help, but "you're in the army now" and must eat what is served.

Q.—What is nux vomica?

A.—Nux vomica is the parent drug of strychnine. It is a stomach tonic, increasing breathing power and stimulating nerves.

Kidneys Must Work Well—
For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.
Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Notice is hereby given that the passage and enactment by the Legislature of Alabama, of an act, will be sought at the present session of the Legislature of Alabama, a substantial copy of which, is as follows:

A BILL ENTITLED AN ACT

To Amend An Act Entitled:

"An Act

To establish an Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Alabama; to define its jurisdiction and powers; to provide for its officers, their powers duties and compensation; to provide that said Court shall be open at all times for the trial of cases and transaction of business, to provide for the election of the judge of said Court, his term of office, and how vacancy in judgeship shall be filled."

Be it Enacted by the Legislature of Alabama:

That an Act entitled; "To establish an Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Alabama; to define its jurisdiction and powers; to provide for its officers, their powers, duties and compensation; to provide that said Court shall be open at all times for the trial of cases and transaction of business; to provide for the election of the judge of said Court, his term of office, and how vacancy in judgeship shall be filled", be and the same is hereby amended to read as follow:

Section 1.—That there be and it is hereby established in the County of Chilton an inferior Law Court which shall be called the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County and which shall be a Court of record and shall have and exercise concurrent jurisdiction, authority, functions and powers now conferred or which may hereafter be confered upon the several circuit courts of the State of Alabama where the amount involved, exclusive of the interest and costs, do not exceed three hundred ($300.00) Dollars, and shall have and exercise jurisdiction of all midsemeanors and all offenses arising or committed in Chilton County under Article 3, Title 34. Section 89 to 104, inclusive, of the Code of 1940 of Alabama and Chapter 7, Title 13, Sections 350 to 383, inclusive, of the Code of 1940 of Alabama; said Court shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the Probate Court of said county under said Titles. Said Court shall also have concurrent jurisdiction with Justices of the Peace of Chilton County of all matters whatsoever, but shall not have final jurisdiction to try persons charged with felonies.

SECTION 2.—That the said Inferior Law Court shall be held at the Court House of Chilton County and shall be open at all times for the trial of cases and the transaction of business. In case of sickness or disqualification of the judge, the law applicable to the appointment and service of special judges in the Circuit Court shall apply. The Judge of said Court shall be subject to the same penalties for failure to attend upon the Court as Circuit Judges of the State. The Judge shall keep an office in the Court House of Chilton County, Alabama, or at such other suitable place as may be provided by the Court of County Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama, and it shall be the duty of the Court of County Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama, to provide such office and supply the same with necessary furniture and fixtures, stationery, telephone, lights, heat and janitor service. A session of said Court for the trial of criminal cases shall be held on the first Monday in each month and at such other times as the Judge of said Court may order, and a session for trial of civil cases shall be held on the second Monday of each month. The Clerk, with the approval of the Judge of said Inferior Law Court, is hereby [illegible] purchase all necessary [illegible] and supplies for the [illegible] Court. The same [illegible] of the County Treasury [illegible] manner as now provided [illegible] payment of such [illegible] and supplies.

[illegible] the Clerk of the [illegible] Chilton County shall [illegible] of said Court and [illegible] have the powers and discharge the duties, which will devolve upon the Clerk of the Circuit Court, and shall be subject to the same pains and penalties with regard to the duties of this office and shall be entitled to the same fees, commissions and emoluments of office in cases wherein the amount involved is more than $50.00 as are now or may hereafter be allowed to Circuit Court Clerks of Alabama and in cases where the amount involved is $50.00 or less the same fees as are now or may hereafter be allowed Justices of the Peace, and the same shall be collected as such fees are collected in the Circuit Court. The clerk of the said Inferior Law Court as herein designated shall make and enter into a bond in the penal sum of Three Thousand (3000.00) Dollars for the faithful performance of his duties as Clerk of the said court, said bond to be approved by the Judge of the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Alabama.

SECTION 4.—The Sheriff of Chilton county shall in person, or by deputy attend upon said Court and preserve order and all processes and writs issued from said Court shall be served as from the Circuit Court of said county and the Sheriff of Chilton County and his deputy or that of his deputy in attending such Court shall receive $3.00 per day to be paid out of the county treasury as bailiffs are paid in attending on the Circuit Court. The Sheriff shall receive the same fees for executing the processes and writs issued from said Court as provided by the law for the execution of the same processes in the Circuit Court or in the Justice Courts of the county and the same shall be collected as such fees are now or may hereafter be provided by law.

SECTION 5.—The Judge of said Court shall adopt a seal for said Court which shall be kept in the custody and control of the Clerk of the said Court.

SECTION 6.—The judge of said Court shall have power to issue search warrants, writs of habeas corpus, prohibition, certiorari, quo warranto, and all other special and extraordinary writs.

SECTION 7.—It shall be the duty of the Clerk of said Court to keep a record upon which shall be recorded all affidavits, and if any of said affidavits should be lost or destroyed, a certified copy thereof shall be used the same as the original, and the Clerk shall receive a fee of twenty-five cents for recording such affidavits to be taxed as costs in case the defendant is convicted.

SECTION 8.—The witnesses attending upon said Court shall be entitled to, and paid the same fee as are paid the witnesses in the Circuit Court of Chilton County.

SECTION 9.—That there shall be taxed against the defendant on conviction the same solicitor's or County Solicitor's fee and the same shall be collected in the way provided by law for taxing and collecting solicitor's fees in the Circuit Court and when collected shall be paid into the treasury of Chilton County, Alabama.

SECTION 10.—That the procudure practice and rules governing the Circuit Courts of Alabama shall in all things apply to and govern the proceedure and practice in said court of Chilton County, except as herein otherwise provided.

SECTION 11.—Prosecutions for misdemeanors committed in Chilton County may be instituted in this Court by making an affidavit before the Judge the writ on said affidavit to be issued by the Clerk of said Court, and when the defendant is arrested on said affidavit, said case shall go on the docket or trial, and be tried as though the defendant had been indicted by a grand Jury.

SECTION 12.—In all civil actions commenced in said Court the defendant shall appear, plead, answer or demur within fifteen days from the service of the summons or writs or be in default, and the Judge of said Court shall, after such default, on motion of the plaintiff, ascertain the amount due in said cause and render judgment for the plaintiff accordingly.

SECTION 13.—In all civil actions in said Court, interrogatories, as provided by law and depositions, may be filed and taken by the parties in like manner as same are filed and taken in the Circuit Court and all laws applicable to interrogatories and depositions in the Circuit Court shall apply and govern in said Court, however, the answer to the interrogatories shall be filed in said cause with in fifteen days after the service of the same.

SECTION 14.—It shall be the duty of the Deputy Solicitor or County Solicitor of Chilton County, Alabama, to attend the Criminal session of said Court and shall prosecute for the State all causes in said court. That in the absence of the Deputy Solicitor or County Solicitor, the Judge of said Court may appoint a special Deputy Solicitor or County Solicitor to represent the State in cases that the Solicitor for said court is required to represent the State in and shall receive for his compensaton Five Dollars for each day or fraction thereof, for the time actually engaged under said appointment.

SECTION 15.—Any party feeling aggrieved from the judgement of said Court rendered in any civil cause, may appeal from said judgement to the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Ala., by giving security for the costs, the same to be approved by the Clerk or Judge of said Inferior Law Court or if the party desiring to appeal, wishes to supersede the judgment of said Court, then he may give security for cost and a supersedeas bond in double the amount of the judgment. to be approved by the Judge or Clerk of said Court. All appeals from judgments in civil causes in said court shall be taken to the Circuit Court within thirty days after the rendition of the judgment, and all appeals taken from said Court shall be tried denovo in the Circuit Court in any case appeal from said Inferior Law to the Circuit Court. The appellant, within, ten days, after the perfection of his appeal and the appellee, within ten days after notice of appeal is served on him, may have the issues of fact tried by a jury in the Circuit Court by filing with the Clerk of the Circuit Court a written demand for a trial of said cause by a jury.

SECTION 16.—In all criminal cases of conviction in said Inferior Law Court of Chilton County the defendant shall have the right of appeal to the Circuit Courts of Chilton County on entering into bond, with sufficient surety, to appear at the term of the Court to which the appeal is taken and from term to term until discharged, the bond to be in such penalty as the Judge of the said Inferior Law Court may prescribe, and to be approved by Judge or Clerk of said Court. If the defendant does not make the bond required, he shall remain in custody.

SECTION 17.—Writs of garnishment may issue out said Court in aid of pending suits filed therein or upon judgments rendered in said Court as now provided in Circuit Court except, however, the answer of the garnishee shall be filed within fifteen days after the service of the Writ of Garnishment.

SECTION 18.—That the Judge of said Inferior Law Court shall be a qualified elector of Chilton County, Alabama; shall be learned in the law and shall not be less than twenty--five years of age; and shall be prohibited from engaging in the practice of law in the Courts of this State. Said Judge shall take and file with the Judge of Probate of Chilton County, Alabama the oath of the office required of Circuit Judges. The Judge of said Court may be removed from office, or impeached in the manner now provided for the removal of Circuit Judges.

SECTION 19.—The said Inferior Law Court or Judge thereof may punish for contempt by fine not exceeding Fifty Dollars and by imprisonment not exceeding five days, one or both.

SECTION 20.—In case of a vacancy in the office of the Judge of the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Alabama, the same shall be filled by appointment of the Governor and the Judge appointed shall hold office until the next general election thereafter.

SECTION 21.—That the Judge of said Court shall receive a salary of twenty-four Hundred Dollars per year, payable Two Hundred Dollars per month, out of the General Funds of the Treasury of Chilton County, at the end of each month payable on warrant drawn by the Judge of Probate.

SECTION 22.—In all trials, both civil and criminal, in said Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Alabama, the Judge shall determine both the law and facts without the intervention of jury, except as herein otherwise provided, and shall award the judgment and fix the punishment, which the character of the offense demands and in default of the payment of any fine and costs, the defendant shall be sentenced to serve the same as provided by law for the sentencing of persons in the Circuit Court.

SECTION 23—That within ten days after the passage and approval of this Act a special election shall be called by the Judge of Probate of Chilton County and held in Chilton County, Alabama, within forty-five days after issuing of said call, the expenses to be paid out of the General Funds of said County for the purpose of electing a Judge of the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Ala., by the qualified electors thereof, who shall assume the duties of the office of the Judge of said Court immediately after said special election and hold office until the second Tuesday of January, 1945, and until his successor is elected and qualified. That the successor in office to said Judge shall be elected at the General Election to be held on the second Tuesday of November, 1944, and the Judge of said Court shall be elected every four years thereafter and shall hold office until his successor is elected and qualified. That at said special election any person desiring to become a candidate for the office of the Judge of said Court may do so by filing with the Judge of Probate of Chilton County a petition setting forth that he is candidate for the Judge of said Court at said special election and said petition being signed by twenty-five qualified electors of Chilton County Alabama, and it shall be the duty of the Judge of Probate to place on the ballot for said special Election, the names of all persons qualified under the provision of this act as candidates for the office of the Judge of said Court who file said petition with him fifteen days prior to the holding of said special election and the person receiving the largest number of votes in said election for said office shall be declared elected Judge of said Court. After said Special Election nominations and elections for Judge of said Court shall be made as nominations and elections of all other County Officers are made for Chilton County, Alabama.

SECTION 24.—That if any section clause or paragraph of this Bill shall be declared unconstitutional and void the same shall not affect any other section, clause or paragraph which is not unconstitutional and void.

SECTION 25.—That all laws, general, special, or local, in conflict with the provision of this Act are hereby expressly repealed.

SECTION 26.— This Act shall become effective upon its final passage and approval by the Governor.

DEEP CULTIVATION HARMS VEGETABLES

Cultivation in the garden, particularly when plants are suffering from lack of water, may seriously harm the vegetables.

Hoeing 4 or 5 inches deep around the beans, corn, cabbage, beets and carrots, when the soil is dry, will do much harm and perhaps little good. The primary objective in cultivating the soil at this time of year is to kill weeds.

War Stamp Sales Over Half Billion Dollars, Album Drive Opens

SAY YES!
Take your change in WAR STAMPS

U. S. Treasury photo

Appealing Margaret C. [illegible] of the War Savings Staff tacks up this new Treasury poster which w[illegible]n from coast to coast. It pictures retailers' slogan, "SAY YES." A drive [illegible] way for Americans to buy additional War Stamps to fill albums and con[illegible] them into War Bonds.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The nation's retailers from the tiniest hamlets to the mighty cities are acting as a spearhead in a great Treasury Department campaign to sell the additional War Savings Stamps needed to fill more than 100,000,000 albums now in the hands of the American people.

According to a report released by the Treasury Department today, sales of War Savings Stamps totaled $559,777,000 for the period from May 1, 1941, through November, 1942.

Stamp sales have risen from less than three million dollars per month when they were first introduced to the public to an average of more than fifty million dollars per month at the present time.

The Treasury's slogan, "A half-filled album is like a half-equipped soldier," has been adopted officially by retailers for the campaign.

The importance of the drive is seen in the fact that a War Bond potential of nearly two billion dollars hangs in the balance.

Every War Stamp album, converted into a People's Bond, for which the purchaser pays $18.75 and which matures to $25.00 value when held for 10 years, adds its force to the war effort.

The Treasury Department is counting upon the country's school children to play a powerful role in the success of the SAY YES drive. The volume of stamp and bond sales is at the rate of $200,000,000 for the current school year.

New Chairman Takes Over In Bond Drive

Early in May Judge L. H. Reynolds found it necessary to resign as executive chairman of the war saving committee for Chilton County. For more than a year Judge Reynolds has done a splendid piece of work selling United States War Bonds and stamps in Chilton County. Each month Chilton County met its quota and with a little more than was asked of its citizens. Then came the big drive in April when the county was asked to buy $311,000 worth of bonds. Through the excellent work of Judge Reynolds, F J. Callen and several other men and women of the county, Chilton again went over the top in grand style These men and women are to be congratulated upon this fine piece of work. It was with much regret that failing health forced Judge Reynolds to give up this work in the county which he was doing in such a grand way.

Chilton County's quota for May was set at $31,200 and due to the intensive work done for the big drive in April the May quota was reached and passed by a neat little sum. The citizens of this county have every right to be proud of the fact that they have met every quota assigned to them. Fourteen counties of Alabama failed to meet their quotas for May while eight counties more than doubled their quotas. Washington County carried first honors when it more than tripled its quota.

The June quota for Chilton County has been set at $31,600.00. The writer has agreed to help with this work in the county during the months of June and July while a permanent chairman is being found to carry on this work I solicit the cooperation of every loyal citizen of the county in putting our county over th top again by buying more than $31,600.00 worth of bonds in June. I shall see some of you, and shall write to others, but do not wait to be seen or written to about this all important duty. The results of the war are looking very encouraging now, and with the full cooperation of every man, woman, and child in these United States we shall win the Victory and write a lasting PEACE.

BUY a BOND today, its is the safest investment in the world now.

Patterson Hicks,
Acting Executive chm.

Saving Committee.

USDA War Boards To Requisition Idle Farm Machinery

Speedy and far-reaching action was proposed in instructions received this week by Mr. Cofer, Chairman of the Chilton County USDA War Board which empowers these boards to requisition idle farm machinery where necessary in order to make machinery available for purchase by farmers who need it and can put it to full use.

In explaining the need for the requisitioning of idle farm machinery Mr. Cofer pointed out that all possible measures are being taken by War Boards to assist farmers in their task of producing food. This includes both the production of new machinery and obtaining the widest possible use of existing machinery. War Boards are also urging farmers to share their machinery and equipment as much as possible and farmers generally are doing so. The requisitioning procedure is being provided to take care of special cases where for various reasons machinery is not being put into the production program.

The requisitioning order is applicable to all idle agricultural machinery, mechanical equipment, and implements, (including all attachments) used for the production or care of crops, livestock, or livestock products as well as equipment for transporting these products from farm to market "Idle farm machinery," is defined in the new plan as being machinery which is not in use and will not be used for agricultural production in 1943 unless requisitioned. Action to dequisition by county war boards will be delayed until the owner of the idle machinery has been notified that the machinery is needed in the war effort and he refused to negotiate with a responsible purchaser for the transfer of it. Upon certification by county war boards to the State War Board Chairman that such a condi tion exists the war board chairman will exercise requisitioning authority delegated to him by the War Food Administrator. The disposal price of each piece of machinery will be the ceiling price less the cost to put the machinery in working order.

The provisions of the order are no applicable to farmers who are now members of the United States armed forces.

MAPLESVILLE MAN DIES OF GUNSHOT WOUNDS

M. B. Johnson, of Maplesville died Monday afternoon about 6:30 from what is reported to be self-inflicted gun-shot wounds. Complete details of the tragedy was not learned.

He leaves 2 small children, both boys, besides his wife who it is reported away from home at the time.

Funeral services were held from the Maplesville Baptist Church Wednesday morning with Rev. Hyman Atchinson officiating.

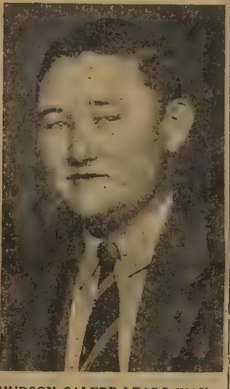
Local Farmers Pledge Aid In Crop Increase

Chilton County farmers in the Farm Security Administration program are matching the efforts of the nation's half million small farmers who have pledged themselves to increase production of war crops and livestock from 20 to 72 per cent with FSA aid Marvin Durbin, County Supervisor announced yesterday.

"Recent floods in the middle west have accentuated the need for greater food production," Mr. Durbin said "The FSA borrowers are doing their part. Although they represent only 7.6 per cent of all farmers in the United States they supplied 36 per cent of the total increase in milk production last year, 10 per cent of the increase in eggs and nine per cent of the increase in pork. And this year they will better this record by from 20 to 72 per cent."

The families have planted larger gardens and will increase their home supply of canned fruits and vegetables. The amount canned last year made unnecessary the use of ration book No. 2 in most families, thereby releasing an enormous quantity of canned goods for use of our soldiers and allies.

HUDSON CALFEE



HUDSON CALFEE LEADS WAY WITH PROJECT

Hudson Calfee, state F. F. A. reporter from Isabella, is striving to attain the coveted American Farmer Degree as is shown by his supervised practice program during the last three years.

At the present time Hudson has a part of his farming program a heifer that will freshen in May, two beef calves, 300 bearing peach trees, three acres of corn, 12 hives of bees and 2 acres of oats to be followed by soybeans or peanuts. During the past year Hudson has bought $100 worth of defense bonds with money made from his supervised practice program.

Realizing that variety is the spice of life, Hudson has carried other projects on hogs, sorghum, home garden home improvement, improving a field by use of legumes, soil conservation and forestry.

In addition to his farming interests Hudson is serving as state F. F. A reporter, president of the district F F. A., and president of the school Beta Club. He has served as local reporter of the F. F. A. and served on several important committees. As a member of the local bond and stamps committee, Hudson sold more than any other member. He was also a member of the football team.

Hudson is the son of Mr and Mrs O. O. Calfee of Clanton, Route 3. After his graduation from Isabella High School this spring Hudson is continuing his farming program thereby aiding the war effort by producing food for freedom. It is his ambition to receive the American Farmer Degree next year.

Chilton County Members Aircraft Warnin gService

~~An~~ officer ~~and two~~ enlisted men of the Mobile Air Defense Region in making an inspection of Aircraft Warning Service in Chilton County were pleased with the efforts the people of this county have made toward this patriotic duty.

Scattered throughout the county are observation posts under the leadership of Joseph E. Gore, A. W. S. Director for the county.

Each civilian of the A. W. S. is a member of the Ground Observers Corps which has been set up for the purpose of furnishing timely information to the Army Filter Center. Aircraft is sighted in this vicinity so that enemy raiders may be restroyed before they release their deadly cargo on our industrial centers and vital defenses.

The A. W. S. is really an important branch of our Home Defense, and should be taken seriously. The observer has the same role to play as a soldier with the same glory to serve—his task being a sentry guarding our home front.

The observers of Chilton who are giving much of their time and effort for the A. W. S. are:

MUSIC APPRECIATION CLUB HOLDS ANNUAL BANQUET

The annual banquet of the Music Appreciation Club was held in the Exchange Hotel on the evening of May 28th. A profusion of spring flowers in the club colors of pink and lavender and tapering ivory candles were used most artistically in the dining room. Attractive hand painted place cards bearing a swirl of gay musical notes also indicated the entertainment for the evening. Mr. Lars Sorensen of Birmingham, composer and violinist, was honor guest and delighted with a program of violin music playing several of his own compositions. About thirty five members and guests were present on this occasion the culmination of a most pleasant and active club year.

The average Korean tenant's share of his crop, when all deductions are made by the Japanese, gives him an annual income of about $10.00.

June 14th, National Flag Day

One hundred sixty-six years ago June 14, 1777 the Continental Congress then sitting at Philadelphia, Pa. adopted the Stars and Stripes as our national Flag. It has remained our national banner ever since, with minor changes being made to take care of new states that have come into the union. Ours is a beautiful flag and we all appreciate the many things for which it stands. It is very gratifying to see so many flags displayed in Clanton and Chilton County these days.

June 8 to 14 is National Flag Week and the United States is asked to celebrate this week this year by buying One Hundred Million dollars worth of War Saving Bonds. These bonds to be bought in addition to the regular quota assigned each county for June.

National Flag Week was founded in 1939 by the United States Flag Association and each year since that time this association has used this week for some special emphisis. This year the association ha sadopted the slogan "Save by Sacrifice" and every man, woman, and child is asked to go without something they want very much during this week and invest the value of it in war stamps, or bonds of the United States. You cannot show your patriotism for your country in any better way than buying these securities of your government. Make this the most significant FLAG WEEK that this country has ever experienced.

Patterson Hicks
Acting Executive Chairman.

CHILTON FARMERS URGED TO FIGHT COTTON INSECT

With maximum cotton production on reduced acreage a wartime necessity, it is imperative that Chilton County farmers control cotton insects says County Agent P. H. Smith, in advising that "Diligent and intelligent use of poison is the best way to control boll weevils, flea hoppers, cotton aphids boll worms, and leaf worms."

The cotton flea hopper puts in its appearance as soon as cotton squares are formed and often prevents the plants from fruiting where cotton is planted on heavy, stiff soil. It can be controlled by dusting the cotton every week with a mixture of one part calcium arsenate and two parts of dusting sulfur until two or three applications are made. Ten to 12 ponds per acre should be applied each time the cotton is dusted.

To combat boll weevil, the most destructive cotton insect, farmers must watch their plants closely through the growing season.

On light soils, the first application of calcium arsenate should be made as soon as 10 per cent of the squares are punctured. From five to 10 pounds of calcium arsenate will be needed per acre for each dusting. Applications should be repeated every four or five days until the weevils are controlled. If poison is washed off within 24 hours, repeat application. Contrary to common belief, the use of poison is most profitable in rainy seasons.

After the cotton crop is set, one or two applications are usually necessary to protect young bolls. This makes from five to seven applications needed to protect the cotton throughout the season.

Dust can be applied any time of day or night when the air is quiet. It is not necessary for the cotton plant to be wet with dew when the poison is applied.

Cotton aphids are small green insects that feed on the under side of cotton leaves and are generally worse on cotton that has been dusted with calcium arsenate. They can be controlled by adding five pounds of black leaf 40 to 100 pounds of calcium arsenate. Mix by placing the calcium arsenate in a tight drum; add the proper amount of black leaf 40 and agitate until all lumps disappear. Usually one application of this mixture will control the insects, but repeat it if it becomes necessary.

Boll worms and leaf worms can best be controlled by dusting cotton with calcium arsenate while the worms are small.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Hardest Fighting Still to Come: Byrnes; Chinese Forces Rout Foe Along Yangtze As Japs Drive Toward Wartime Capital; Allied Airmen Pound Objectives in Italy

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

BYRNES:
Reports to Nation

The 100,000th war plane rolled off the assembly line as the newly appointed War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes spoke to the nation.

"We have at length caught up with the Axis in our preparations and are forging rapidly ahead," he said. "We have a long, hard road ahead. The hardest fighting is yet to come. Now we must not only keep up our production but we must assume a major part in the all-out military operations of the enemy."

Recounting America's tremendous production achievements, Byrnes revealed that the U. S. turned out 100 fighting ships in the first five months this year; more than 1,000 cargo vessels were built during the 12 months ending May 31; 100,000 pieces of anti-aircraft cannon have been produced and 1,500,000 machine guns and sub-machine guns manufactured.

By April 1, Byrnes said, the U. S. will have spent 10 billion dollars in buying land and building camps and air fields in this country. Referring to his new position, he declared that he would seek to bring unity among the government agencies entrusted with carrying out the war programs, saying their teamwork was as necessary as that of the soldiers.

MANPOWER:
To Cut Deferments

Only 1½ million men will be deferred in industry by the end of this year, Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower commission, declared.

During the year, McNutt said, 6,000,000 physically fit men, including fathers, will form the pool from which 2,700,000 must be inducted to round out the goal of 11,000,000 for the armed services.

Of the number, McNutt continued, 900,000 will be deferred for farm work, 900,000 will be exempted for dependency, and 1,500,000 will be deferred for industrial work.

McNutt urged employers to prepare for replacement of the 3 million men now deferred in industry, including fathers, whose general induction around August 1 recently was predicted by Selective Service Director Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey.

FARM SUPPLY:
Simple Priority Needed

By merely filling out a form drawn up by himself or his retailer, a farmer will be able to obtain priorities on 176 types of supplies. Individual purchases, however, will be limited to $25.

The form must simply read: "I certify to the War Production board that I am a farmer and that the supplies covered by this order are needed now and will be used for the operation of a farm."

To facilitate its ruling, the WPB ordered manufacturers to get the supplies into retailers' hands. Among the scarce items are batteries, chains, cold chisels, pitchforks, hoes, harness leather, galvanized pails, pipes, horsecollars, pliers, ropes, shovels, barbed wire and bale wire, wrenches, tubs and poultry netting.

WPB also is seeking to speed up output of axes, boxes, feedtroughs, egg cases, sprayers, hand cultivators, milk pails, wagon hardware and plowshares.

CHINA:
Rout Japs

Five Japanese divisions of 75,000 men were routed as Chinese troops counterattacked along the Yangtze river. Even as the enemy was thrown back, American bombers and Chinese fighters swooped on the Jap air base of Ichang, and 10 tons of explosives were dropped.

The Jap rout came after they had thrust south toward the Yangtze in their drive to the Chinese provisional capital of Chungking, 295 miles to the east. According to the Allied communique, the Chinese armies developed an encircling movement, cut off the Japanese line of retreat, and then chopped up the entrapped units.

Besides raiding Ichang, Allied airmen were active over other sectors of China. Jap warehouses and railroad yards were blasted at Foochow.

GOP:
Post-War Committee

So that the next Republican national convention might have the basis for drawing up an appropriate platform dealing with the part America should play in the post-war world's reconstruction, 49 prominent members of the GOP were named to serve on a special committee to study the question.

Announced by National Chairman Harrison Spangler, the committee consists of 5 senators, 12 congressmen, 24 governors and 8 party officials.

According to Spangler, it will be the duty of the committee to chart a program embracing the extent to which this country should commit itself toward co-operating in maintaining world peace. Of equal importance, Spangler said, will be the committee's task of mapping a course for our own domestic reconstruction.

"We must plan for a free and prosperous agriculture; labor conditions which will insure labor its just share; and conditions which will permit industry to expand, grow, develop and produce the things which will add to our standard of living," Spangler declared.

ITALY:
Softened Up

Harbors, shipping and airdromes were left in flames as Allied airmen flew in from the east and west and pounded both ends of Italy.

Heavily hit were the port facilities of Naples, on Italy's western shoreline. To the east, the air base at Foggia was raided, with grounded planes, a gasoline dump and barracks offering the target.

In all, 150 Flying Fortresses and Liberators participated in the assaults. Despite the fact that fierce fighter opposition was encountered over Naples, the Allies reported no losses.

Meanwhile, other units of the North African air force continued to pound Sardinia, which sprawls in the Tyrrhenian sea west of Italy, and Pantelleria, the tiny island south of Sicily, where the Axis has developed underground hangars.

The Allies announced the loss of but one Lightning in these raids. Although admitting heavy damage from Allied raids, the Italians claimed to have shot down 57 British and American bombers over Pantelleria since May 1.

RUSSIA:
Nazis Claim Strength

Claiming that waves of dive-bombers and fighter planes had leveled the Russian base of Krimskaya and extended operations beyond in the Caucasus, the Nazis boasted of re-establishing their air superiority over their embattled bridgehead at Novorossisk.

Even so, Russian pressure continued against the Nazis' only foothold in the Caucasus, with the Reds developing another threat to Novorossisk by landing troops on the shores of the Taman peninsula to the Germans' rear.

Minor action flared on other sections of the Russian front. South of Leningrad, the Reds reported destroying a network of pill-boxes and dugouts, while shooting up a freight train. Before Smolensk, artillery fire was said to have wiped out two enemy companies.

COAL STRIKE:
Labor Crisis

America's wartime labor situation moved toward a crisis with the walkout of approximately 450,000 miners after a 30-day truce had failed to end in a new contract. Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, nominally the operator of the mines after the government had taken them over during the first strike threat, flayed both sides for the disruption of work.

As a basis for compromise, the UMW had suggested a settlement of the entire wage question by payment of $1.50 per day as a solution of the portal-to-portal question, or compensation for the time miners spend traveling to and from their coal faces above and underground. The $1.50 payment would be temporary until a mixed committee had worked out a final settlement of the issue.

The operators proposed portal-to-portal pay of 80 cents a day as a basis for discussion. The bone of contention entered into the issue of payment of overtime for 35 hours, which was a condition of the miners' last contract.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO:
At Long Last

The house took the first step in the passage of its conference committee's pay-as-you-go legislation.

One hundred and sixty-seven Republicans joined with 89 Democrats in approving the bill, which forgives all of one year's taxes of $50 and allows for a reduction of 75 per cent on the remainder over $50.

The legislation also provides for a 20 per cent tax, after exemptions on all salaries or wages. Persons obtaining incomes from other sources, like farmers, must estimate their yearly earnings and then pay off the liability on a quarterly basis.

Persons who are left with a 25 per cent tax after the 75 per cent forgiveness must pay off the remainder in two annual installments, due in 1944 and 1945. In all, the government hopes to recapture three billion dollars under the proposed bill.

CANNED MILK:
One Red Point

With canned milk production off 25 per cent from last year's output of 75 million cans, and with the government purchasing half of the supply, the Office of Price Administration placed condensed and evaporated milk on the rationed list.

Under the regulations, 14½ ounce cans, or several cans totaling 14 ounces or less, now are worth one red point. The 14½ ounce can is the size popularly bought for infants, and the payment of one red point from their ration book, of course, will not be felt as severely as by adults, whose purchase will reduce their quota of stamps for meat, cheese and fats.

Officials estimate that the average adult needs three or four pounds—three or four points worth—of canned milk a week, if fresh milk isn't used.

ATTU:
Kiska Next?

Facing the west, Japanese soldiers bowed in hallowed respect of their emperor, then with a wild cry launched a final, suicidal counterattack against American troops on Attu island.

Mowed down by American fire, the attack collapsed, and the last organized enemy resistance on this westernmost of the Aleutian islands came to an end, some 20 days after the first American troops stole ashore under the protective cover of U. S. naval units.

Conquest of Attu turned eyes to Kiska, main Jap base in the Aleutians, isolated by the U. S. victory. Operating from Amchitka, American airmen continued to hammer the Japanese airplane, harbor and camp installations at the base. Approximately 10,000 enemy troops are supposed to be stationed on Kiska.

FRENCH:

Interned and disarmed at Alexandria, Egypt, since June of 1940, nine French warships will be returned to service in the Allied ranks within six months.

Among the vessels are the 22,000-ton battleship Lorraine, with eight 13.4-inch guns; the 10,000-ton heavy cruisers Duquesne, Tourville and Suffren, with eight 8-inch guns; the 7,249-ton cruiser Trouin, with eight 6.1-inch guns; three destroyers with four 4.1-inch guns, and the 1,384-ton submarine, Protee.

GOD'S EXCEEDING GREAT PROMISES

LESSON TEXT—II Peter 1:1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—He hath granted unto us His precious and exceeding great promises; that through these ye may become partakers of the divine nature.—II Peter 1:4, R. V.

Growth in grace and in knowledge of Christ are as normal and expected of the child of God as bodily growth of the physical child. Tragic as is the failure of one to develop physically, it is even more distressing and sad in the spiritual realm. Yet it is a common thing in our churches, where only comparatively few believers even come to full stature in Christ, where more have only a partial growth, and some are forever babes in Christ.

God has made perfect provision for us, and has in His Word given plain and explicit instructions on how to gain spiritual development.

I. All Things Provided (vv. 1-4).

In the physical world we are able to provide, at least in some degree, what is needed. We also know where to find mental food. Spiritual provision can come only from God, and we find from these verses that He has provided not just a small portion, or a limited ration, but "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," through the knowledge of Christ.

The "exceeding great and precious promises" of God are the abundant portion of the believer. They are sure promises, based in the altogether dependable Word of God.

God's provision for us in Christ has made it unnecessary to look elsewhere. Here is escape from the world's corruption, the new nature in Christ, faith, grace, peace, power—all in Him.

The opposite is also true, that without Christ men have only the weak and disappointing help of men on which to draw. Of such foolish ones the Lord said through Jeremiah the prophet that they "have committed two evils: They have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water" (Jer. 2:13).

II. All Diligence Required (vv. 5-7).

There is something that the Christian can do to insure his growth in grace. He is to be diligent, that is, have an earnest purpose and zeal to go ahead spiritually. This calls for application and endeavor, just as progress in any other sphere of life, and possibly more.

Faith is the foundation of all such growth and without it there is nothing on which to build. But on it, or better, "in" it, we have all these other Christian graces springing up, as we give "all diligence" to encourage their growth.

Notice the ascending scale. Faith leads to virtue, that is, courageous, resolute Christian character. Then comes knowledge—the intelligent understanding and discernment of truth. This is bound together by temperance, meaning self-control. Next is patience, that steady endurance which keeps going in spite of trial or disappointment.

The sixth note in this octave of graces is godliness, which speaks of piety, true devotion to God, and reverence for His name. Such a believer will love his brethren in all brotherly kindness; and that leads us to the high point of love (the real meaning of "charity," v. 7). Here love for God is obviously in mind, as the crowning grace of the believer.

III. All Eternity Assured (vv. [illegible] 11).

We should look forward to that abundant "entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" spoken of in verse 11. There is such a thing as being saved "so as by fire" (I Cor. 3:15), slipping into heaven with nothing to show for our life as followers of Christ here on earth (read I Cor. 3:12-15).

God does not want for His people such an unseemly entrance upon eternity. Why should we be satisfied so to live that it may be true of us. Saved? Yes, but that is all! Are you satisfied with that prospect?

We should note, too, that this growth in grace will show itself in our daily life. It will keep us from being "barren (idle) and unfruitful" (v. 8). The Christian life must not be barren of true service for Christ, nor unfruitful of gracious harvest for Him. We are not on a sort of spiritual joy ride, sitting at ease as we speed on to the heavenly dwelling places.

Works do not save a man. We are justified before God by faith. But our faith is justified before men by our works of righteousness. Fruit grows on the living and healthy tree.

Observe that the Christian who lacks these graces (Do you?) is a nearsighted one who lacks both vision and grateful remembrance of God's loving-kindness (v. 9). How many members of our churches need their spiritual memory jogged and their spiritual eyes anointed with God's "eyesalve" (Rev. 3:18).

Looks as If This Backer of Blimps' Moment Is Nigh

NEW YORK.—Some day a hard-pressed U-boat commander may surface to find a dozen airplanes riding herd on his craft in mid-ocean. If he finds, in addition, a mother blimp drifting aloft until her birds do their job and come back to roost, all the blame will be Rear Admiral Charles E. Rosendahl's.

Rosendahl, a captain but up for promotion, has been ordered back to his favorite post, the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., after a tour of sea duty. All through this war he has been asking for blimp plane-carriers.

Since the wreck of the Shenandoah Rosendahl has been accepted as one of the best informed men on lighter-than-air craft. When that big dirigible broke in two he drifted away in the bow section, no motors, no rudder, no anything. He and a few helpers free-ballooned the fragment until he could land her.

Rosendahl is a Chicago-born citizen of Texas who finished Annapolis in '14, served eight years on surface craft and then volunteered for a tour at Lakehurst, then as now the navy's chief station for experiments with dirigibles.

He helped develop the stationary and mobile stub masts, he worked out mooring problems and ground-handling and he never stopped preaching the virtue of the big gas bags.

For a long time, catastrophes, such as the loss of the Los Angeles, the burning of the Hindenburg and the Shenandoah accident kept him from getting far. But now congress has ordered 200 blimps for anti-U-boat work.

Bat Boy to Baker In 13 Steps; Now Deputy Food Chief

YEARS ago the Kansas City baseball team was in a slump and had no bat boy to boot. Somebody remembered a smart kid making sandwiches in the refreshment stand. That afternoon the team sprayed hits all over, won hands down and the kid got a steady job, though he had to quit finally because he needed more money.

Now the War Food administration, judged by some to be slumping and certainly lacking a deputy administrator, remembers the same kid, a solid citizen these days, and E. Lee Marshall is drafted again. Since the old Kansas City days, Marshall has held a baker's dozen of jobs and in his last was, actually a baker. He quit the chairmanship of the Continental Baking company to go with the food administration.

He was born on a Missouri farm 58 years ago. When he was only 20 years old he owned his own food brokerage company. Later he managed a bakery, and after a merger was called east to become, eventually, head of Continental.

He is a big man, and a nose flattened at the tip lends an accent of good nature to his round aggressive face. On his family tree is a notable ancestor, John Marshall, first chief justice of the Supreme court.

75, He Heads Big Project for Less Than $1 Per Year

IN THIS year of grace the Bellamy blueprint for Utopia is like Hitler's uglier new world, behind schedule. After "Looking Backward" reached its first wide-eyed readers Be[illegible] in 18[illegible]d that 50 years would be[illegible] his happy revolution. [illegible] have rolled along and w[illegible]n't even those superheterody[illegible]s, state-owned and suited [illegible]ne tenant's "taste and convenience wholly."

Closest to them, maybe, are the different but promising projects of the private enterprise Bellamy snubbed. Consider the huge new construction with which the Metropolitan Life Insurance company and Chairman Frederick H. Ecker, mean to revive a blighted East side area on the still far from Utopian island of Manhattan.

This will be a major unit in a nation-wide apartment community program that Chairman Ecker is directing at the age of 75. And he is working for nothing.

He is working for only a little less than he got when he joined Metropolitan 60 years ago. He was a $4 a week office boy then. At 20 he had charge of all the company's real estate transactions and later was the treasurer and finally, president.

Two generations back, the Ecker family made their home in Alsace. That was the Jacob P. Ecker branch. Jacob served with one of Napoleon Bonaparte's generals. He came to this country when his son John was but seven years old. When the Civil war broke out, John fought in 32 engagements, on the Union side. He was left for dead once, but lived to become a major. When peace came, he moved from Phoenicia, in upstate New York, to Brooklyn. Here young Frederick went to school until he was 15 years old, then took a job as office boy with the Metropolitan.

Indians 'Bargained' Out Homes; Laugh Bes

The Osage Indian tribe has th last laugh on the white man. Dur ing the 19th century, the Osag were forced and "bargained" ou of Arkansas, Missouri, and Kan sas, retaining only the rocky hill of northern Oklahoma out of thei once great domain.

Then came oil, black gold gush ing from the Osage hills. One worth 70 cents an acre, this lan has since produced 273 millio dollars in gas and oil—more tha $120,000 in cash revenue for eac Osage Indian.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. Returning from what turned out to be their last raid against the Japs in the Philippines, the PT boats were bombed and strafed by Jap dive bombers. The men scattered, and Lieut. Kelly, separated from the others, accepted an invitation to stay at the home of a friendly American at Cebu. The Jap attack on Cebu had already begun.

CHAPTER XIV

"Then I went out to this sympathetic American stranger's home, which was on the outskirts on a hill overloking Cebu City and harbor. I went right to bed after supper, but first I turned on the radio by my bed. It said that Bataan had just fallen. Maybe if they could have been told that those seven fat interisland steamers were on their way loaded with food and quinine, maybe those poor brave, starved, fever-ridden guys could have held the line a little longer. Well, we in the torpedo boats had done what we could. And I wished that Peggy could know that, and that I could thank her for those two codeine tablets, and tell her how they let Reynolds sit out on the deck and really enjoy his last cigarette.

"It was a hell of an explosion which woke me up in the dark, and for a minute I didn't know where I was. Through my window which overlooked the town and the harbor beyond, I could see a fire rising on the outskirts. I looked at my wrist watch. It was 4:25. They were all awake in the house now. Then came an even bigger explosion and a flame ten times as high. My American host came back from the telephone and said that one was the Philippine Refinery; the Japanese were coming and the Americans were blowing up the town. I hustled into my clothes to get back into the city. I wanted to rejoin my three men, but I was stopped on the road by the army—no traffic, everybody must get out. It was 5:30, and by now one-third of the city was in flames.

"People were streaming out—some Americans, and a few of our navy. From them during the morning I heard that the Japs had come back and bombed what was left of our 34 boat on the beach. Well, that was over.

"Then I heard that Bulkeley wasn't dead—his boat escaped and was now in Mindanao. That Brantingham had burned his 35 boat sitting there on 'Dad' Cleland's marine railway—at least the Japs wouldn't get it. That Ensign Richardson had assembled what was left of our men, and joined up with our naval forces on Mactan Island, where they would all try to escape to the island of Leyte. It was the last I ever heard of them.

"The Japs had already landed twenty miles down the coast of Cebu—also at two other points.

" 'Well, what can I do?' I asked the army.

" 'Nothing,' they said. 'Maybe you'd like to join the other evacuees who are assembling at Camp X'—an army stronghold inland which was going to hold out all through the war until help came from the States.

"I couldn't make up my mind, so I waited at this American's house for something better to turn up, and meanwhile watched the Japs invasion from the second-story windows.

"The invasion of Cebu was on a penny-ante scale—we could have stopped them if we'd had anything at all," said Lieutenant Kelly. "They had a destroyer, two transports, a couple of interisland steamers a hundred feet long. This g[illegible] lay off the channel entrance for a while, and presently they loaded about a thousand infantry into the two steamers (five hundred in each), which set out in column through the channel. The leading boat had a little 3-inch gun on its bow, and every now and then it would bang away toward the city.

"I watched them tie up at about ten o'clock in the morning at the only remaining dock and disembark. Meanwhile the three seaplanes (yes, the same ones) were flying over the city, dropping leaflets in English telling the Philippines to surrender, 'We are your friend,' and offering a substantial reward for any American, dead or alive, and a handsome reward for any American Officer or his body. Nice guys. Meanwhile two Zero fighters were strafing the automobiles trying to get out on the road.

"Then we got reports on the progress of the street fighting, which we could also hear from the house. The general had apparently pulled out—maybe to fortify Camp X—but the colonel was staying behind with his soldiers to hold out as long as he could.

"Meanwhile I had been asking the army what was so good about Camp X. Well, it was way up in the hills, they said. It would take days of walking over footpaths, because all the roads into it were blown up.

" 'But won't the Japs come after you?'

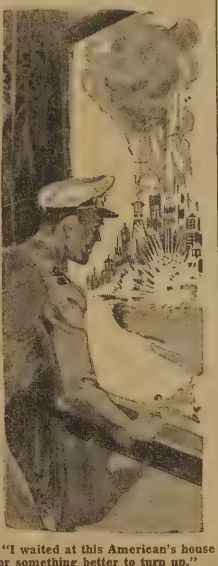
" 'Oh, they'd never do that—it's too hard to get to.'

"What about equipment and guns? Well, they had a radio station, food for several months, a few hundred troops and a few rifles. The more I heard about Camp X, the more distrustful I got, and meanwhile a report came in that the Japs had landed at Toledo. I looked at my map—it was the standard map the army used for operations, put out by the Standard Oil Company with all their filling stations marked—and saw that a good road led directly from Toledo to Camp X. So I asked the army why the Japs wouldn't use it.

" 'Oh, we're going to blow that up, just like the others.'

"But the whole Camp X plan looked lousy to me.

"So I started off by myself for the other coast, hoping I could get out to some other island where the Japs hadn't come yet. I joined up with some civilians who were going the same way—they were plantation owners and could speak the dialect. It was a forty-two-mile hike over steep trails which crossed five mountain ranges. We carried a few cans of corned beef, and at night would sleep in native huts with pigs and chickens under us and flies over us, and we would get the natives to cook us rice and corn, and buy chickens which they would roast for us. We used banana leaves for plates, and pieces of bark for forks.



"I waited at this American's house for something better to turn up."

"The second day we heard planes at dawn and all scrambled back out of sight in the hut—peering up through the palms. It was three bombers in formation about fifteen hundred feet.

"Somebody said, pointing, 'Why, look—they're ours!' But I could hardly believe it—even when I saw the stars on their wings, even when I heard the faraway rumble of their bombs dropping on the Japs in Cebu. They were the first American bombers we had seen since before the start of the war. Then we heard some more planes—looked up, and again they were American, a new type with a split tail I'd never seen before but which I learned later were B-25's, and now I realized that here was our big American offensive—the one which we thought had pooped out on us the morning after we sunk the cruiser. Here it was at [illegible]st—three days too late! Because in [illegible]e meantime Bataan had fallen, [illegible] Cebu.

"[illegible]ause we little guys—the ones [illegible]e expended—never get to see [illegible]ad picture of the war, never fin[illegible]t the reasons back of the moves or failures to move. We only see our part—look up through the palm trees at the seamy side of it, so when something poops out, and help doesn't come, and everything goes to hell, we can only hope help didn't come in time for some sensible reason like bad weather conditions in Australia. We hope, but at the time we can't be sure, and we get mad.

"That afternoon we bumped into a bunch of troops; they had come from Camp X. It seemed that at three o'clock in the morning a sentry heard a noise, called out 'Halt!' and was answered by Jap tank fire. Somebody hadn't gotten around to blowing up that road from Toledo. So now impregnable Camp X was no more, all American forces on the island were routed, and everything was going to pot.

"Finally we hit a little native village on the coast and started looking for boats, but the mayor said there were none—the native troops had used them to evacuate that day. But they were swell to us—always out in the country they were swell to us—ignorant guys, maybe, but nice and kind as they could be. I remember on the trail we overtook a ramshackle cart and a few natives, and an old native woman gave the cart driver hell for not putting the baggage in his cart—said we Americans were fighting for their people and they should help us.

"The driver tried to pile it on, but it broke his cart down. He wouldn't take any money—just said he was sorry he couldn't help us more. In those days in the jungle I learned more about how nice the simple Filipino people are than I'd learned in months in Manila; I also learned the more Americanized they are, the lousier they are.

"Leaving this village, we kept on down the road to an even tinier one on the coast—still looking for boats. We found a military headquarters and a Filipino third lieutenant—just a kid—in command of twenty native troops, no machine guns and almost no ammunition. Ten miles of hard-surfaced road connected it with a town where the Japs had landed. He said a Jap tank had come up the road the first day but had turned around and gone back. Why hadn't he blown up the bridges? No dynamite. What was he going to do if the Jap tanks came again? What could he do, he asked, but evacuate? I noticed they had all their gear packed into a bus, and that under their uniforms they wore their civilian clothing. And I couldn't blame them. But they helped us comb the place for boats, and we finally located enough bancas to carry us, and shoved off at dusk.

"We arrived at the next island soaking wet but thankful, and glad we were halted on the beach by native volunteer guards with homemade rifles, instead of by the Japs.

"Here I said good-by to the American civilians. They owned sugar and coconut plantations and wanted to get to their families. Then they would try to get them to safety, but where was safety? Or maybe, instead of wandering from island to island, it would be better to wait for the Japs in their homes. They couldn't decide. The whole easy, comfortable American world was cracking up fast in those islands. It wasn't nice to watch.

"Meanwhile I caught a ride in a car to the island's military headquarters where there was a general in command, and told the army lieutenant at the desk that I wanted to get over to the island beyond, provided the Japanese hadn't already taken it—what did he know?

"Well, he said, he didn't know for sure, but he didn't think the Japs had taken it.

"I asked him when he had last communicated with military headquarters over there.

"About a month ago, he said.

"Well, I said, this was urgent—I had to find out quick—wasn't there any way of getting in communication with them?

"Well, he said, he guessed he could pick up the telephone on his desk and call them. But, he explained, I was new around here and didn't understand the local situation. It seemed that his general and the general over on the other island didn't get on at all—hadn't liked each other since West Point. 'You fellows may think you're fighting the Japanese,' he said, 'but here we know better. The frontline trenches of the real war are between these two generals.' However, he said, my case made it different, and since I was a naval officer and therefore, so to speak, a neutral, he thought he could take it on his own responsibility to call up headquarters on the other island and ask in my behalf if the Japanese had landed yet.

"He rang them up, and then reported that at the other end of the wire they were talking something which wasn't English or Spanish. Maybe it was Tagalog, which he didn't speak himself, but just in case it was Japanese I had probably better find some other way of going to Mindanao.

"How the war between the generals came out I never learned; maybe their finishing it in a Japanese prison camp.

"It took me days to get to Mindanao around through the islands, begging rides in cars, hiring small boats to cross little island channels. My objective was to join Bulkeley, who, they had said in Cebu, had escaped the destroyer and was in Mindanao. I wanted to make my report of my part of the battle to him as commander of our squadron. General Sharp, who commanded the island, surely could tell me where he was.

"A Chinese mestizo who was doing a smuggling business of luxury articles among the islands finally landed me, for an enormous price in pesos, at a tiny village on Mindanao which had been abandoned by everybody but one old man, who said yes, a torpedo boat had been in there the week before, and with gestures drew a pretty good picture of Bulkeley's black beard. But he said they'd been there only a few hours, and left for he knew not where. Then he asked when the Japs were coming. Because all the villagers had left, because they were afraid they'd be killed, but I didn't think the Japs would kill an old man, did I?

"I hopped a ride on a truck on down to Iligan, and there was Bulkeley's 41 boat, tied to the dock!

"The first person I saw was Ensign Cox here, and his mouth dropped open. After a few seconds, he said, 'Good God! I heard you were dead!' One by one the crew would come up, stare, then step up to shake my hand and say, 'Gee, Mr. Kelly, we're glad to see you!' "

Army's Greatest Hazard? It's Question of Morale

Armed Services Do Everything Possible to Protect Mental Health of Servicemen; Parents Advised to Cooperate.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

What's the greatest hazard your boy must meet when he joins the army? Not the weapon of the enemy. We know only a very tiny percentage of those who don the uniform succumb to that.

It's the mental hazard.

Take it from a man who met it and who, since, has read the alarming figures which show the war's (any war's) mental casualties.

And to meet that mental hazard you need just one thing—mental health.

Let me quote a few words on the subject of morale from one of the books which the army and the navy and the wise ones in other professions say is a wonderful protection for the mental health of the boy who joins the army.

That book is paper bound. It costs 35 cents. It is called "Our Armed Forces." It has a lot of pictures in it and a lot of sound sense. It is printed by the presses of the Infantry Journal, 1115 17th street, Washington, D. C. It is not sold for profit.

And here is what it says on the subject of morale. (As I say on the air, "I'm quoting"):

"Morale is an important quality of citizenship in the crises of peace, when the internal security of the nation is threatened. It is even more important in war, when the very existence of the nation hangs in the balance. It is, therefore, an objective of army and navy leadership to build a high degree of morale in the soldier and sailor.

About Habits

"The state of mind we call morale has its roots in long-established habits of thinking and acting. A student seated alone in his room, bent seriously over his books, may be tackling his studies with a high degree of morale. He believes what he is doing is worth while. He is determined to overcome whatever difficulties the subject matter offers. He works with a self urge. He gives up the picture show and the ball game if doing so is necessary for success. He has confidence in his ability to acquire the knowledge and skill he is seeking. In the undertaking of hundreds of similar duties in the ordinary routine of living is created the intangible virtue called morale. The young man who enters the armed services may therefore bring with him the basis for the morale upon which his success as a soldier and the ultimate victory of our nation so greatly depend.

"While morale has its roots in the character of the individual and his past experience, it may be greatly strengthened by association and close co-operation with others who are engaged in the same enterprise. Morale is contagious. It is a quality easily transmitted from one person to another. The serviceman receives his uniform. It is the symbol of his dedication. With it he becomes part of the great tradition. Behind him into history is a long line of those who have been so dedicated. The men who walked barefoot in the snow at Valley Forge. The Green Mountain boys with Ethan Allen, thundering at the gates of Ticonderoga. Calm men in the gun turrets at Manila Bay. Marines at Guadalcanal . . . Chateau Thierry . . . Tripoli. Helmeted fliers of a torpedo squadron at Midway. Through the procession of heroes, still bright as it recedes into distant time, has been handed down the great tradition."

Environment

Now when Johnny Doughboy joins up, he changes his habits of life as much as Christopher Columbus would have to change his if he came back and took a job managing a big, modern corporation, or riding herd on a bunch of long-horns or bossing a section gang. It would be tough for Chris to adapt himself to his environment. If he couldn't manage it, he would probably go haywire and blow his top. The dinosaur and some of his fellow prehistorics who couldn't adjust themselves to their environment retired permanently to positions in museums. Man, some men that is, adjusted. They took the ice age, the floods and the famine in their stride and here they are oh-ing and ah-ing at the dead mastodons who weren't as smart at "fitting in"—that's all morale is, "fitting in," getting on when you, who have sat down to your meals three times a day as regularly as the clock, miss the chow wagon; you who have had a kind and solicitous mother or teacher looking after your private troubles are suddenly faced with sharing the troubles of your squad or company or squadron.

Now, how are you going to adjust yourself to this sudden change?

In the first place, you have to understand why everything seems topsy-turvy. Why you, a free-born American citizen, who did as he pleased when and how it pleased him, suddenly have to get up by a bugle, keep step, salute, eat, sleep, drink, walk, run, crawl when somebody else says so.

The first thing you have to realize is the purpose ahead. The next thing is why other people whom you never see insist on achieving that purpose the way they do, regardless of your convenience or your date at the post office.

Your Own Orders

"Your government controls the armed forces." That means that the men your folks elected, just the way it was planned by the makers of America, are really the ones who are telling you what to do. Which means, if you follow through, that you yourself and your folks are telling you.

I chose that phrase because it heads chapter two in this book "Our Armed Forces" I'm talking about. You had better read it.

The next chapter is called "Your Army." And you had better read that too because it tells you something of what to expect. I won't go any further and really I ought to have been talking all this time to parents, too, for they, of all people, ought to know what the boy is up against. What it is all about. One of the great tragedies of being a soldier is the way the folks back home don't understand it at all. They think their job is to feel sorry for you; they don't understand what an extra stripe really means, they can't get you when you talk about home and the things you want to hear about and they write and tell you how noble you are. You don't feel noble. You want to know if the barn has been painted or if your girl has been around lately. You would, though, like them to have some faint idea about this not-altogether unpleasant job of being a soldier. That's why it would be a good thing if your folks would read this book.

Broadcaster's Diary

As I came to work this morning—a little late and right in the midst of the crowds of war workers surging down to their offices, I was suddenly struck with the fact that this change in Washington which I have become used to is typical of other changes that are going to take place all over America.

I was walking down 16th street. That sounds prosaic but it used to be a street of beautiful mansions, many of them historic. It sweeps out of the Maryland countryside, down a hill and up another crest from which you can look down, through a vista of ancient trees to the blur at the end which is the White House with the statue of General Jackson on his rearing horse silhouetted against it.

This morning, as I say, the workers were swarming out of the houses—they are boarding houses now—to work. I glanced up as I passed one sedate old home, the wistaria still decorously draped over the doorway up whose curving drive once the carriage and later the limousine swept to meet milady descending.

I peeped, indecorously, through the beautiful leaded windows of the dining room. It was filled with little tables, the cloths stained with precious but too hurriedly imbibed morning coffee.

I thought a moment. How will Delaware avenue and Locust street and High street look after the war? Those neatly cropped lawns, even an iron deer or two if they haven't gone into the scrap collection campaign?

Sic transit gloria—but perhaps the past glory will be replaced by something more glorious. We can hope.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

In Washington there is a share-the-taxicab system. The driver takes as many people as he can going in the same direction. It used to be called the "pick-up" system. The name changed but not the practice. It's still a great date-maker.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

MRS MARK L. TUCKER, Owner

R. M. TUCKER, Managing Editor

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

Wonder how Uncle Sam expects the small farmer to survive with no help and all the while the government paying outrageous wages and taking the little help that he had left? We know a case in Chilton County this week where several employees quit and went to the Government Nursery at Thorsby because of better wages there. We do not think anybody minds an employee bettering himself under normal conditions, but if some government officials don't wake up and do something about such as the incident mentioned above, it will be the home front that will be in danger and not the battle front.

John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, now serves notice that he is only telling his boys to go back into the mines until June 20th. At that time if things are not to his liking he will probably call them out again. What John L. Needs is a calling out, himself—behind the barn. If you get what we mean.

Readers Digest carried a story in it's May issue about the "Delinquency of 'Teen Age Girls."

Every mother and father should read it. One doesn't have to go far or read much to learn of this evil in our country.

It's right here in Clanton. It is worse around Army Camps of course than places like Clanton, but it's here too, and why isn't something done about it?

The two main reasons given by the largest per-cent age of the girls when questioned was, "nothing else to do", and "helping, by entertaining the soldier who was lonesome."

If these be the reasons don't you think that it is up to us to supply that which they need most—something to do worthwhile, and somewhere to go to enjoy clean, wholesome fun, properly chaperoned.

"OUR FLAG"

Our Flag is the symbol of the blood, sweat and tears of our forefathers, the symbol of justice, loyalty, decency and self respect. Our forefarthers loved our Flag enough to give their lives for it, loved it enough to break away from their mother country to set up our present government. From New Hampshire to the Carolinas and Georgia we were one United Nation, one Free People.

In this moders age when all the war plants are going full blast, the workers are being paid enormous wages. We are getting careless, careless to our Flag, to the Flag of the United States of America. We must honor, respect and love our Flag and protect it at all times.

We have all noticed the beautiful Flags displayed by the business men of Clanton, we are all deeply impressed by their patriotic jesture.

The care of the Flag should be exercised with the utmost caution, less we break some rule of the Flag Code. Some of the main rules which should never be broken or forgotten are:

1. The Flag should never touch the ground, water or anything beneath it.
2. The Flag should be taken in at sunset or just before and should never be left out over night.
3. The Flag should be taken in at signs of rain so it may not get wet.
4. Never fly another Flag above the Flag of the United States of America.
5. When flown with other Flags on the staff, the Flag should be flown to the Flag's right or in front of the other Flag.

In this day of war and strife, I think we should all give more care to our Flag. Not because it is a piece of cloth, but because it is a symbol of justice, loyalty, and truth. The Flag is to every true American as bread is to life. Patrotism is the one sole way of establishing a United Nation like ours—Jimmie Walker.

THE AMERICAN FLAG—

Here are a few excerpts frow a discription of the flag, made by former Chief Justice Charles Evan Hughes

"The flag means more than association and reward.

"It is the symbol of our national unity, our national endeavor, our pational aspiration.

"Ie tells you of the struggle for independance, of union preserved, of liberty and union one and inseparable of the sacrifices of brave men and women to whom the ideals and honor of this nation have been dearer than life.

"It means America first . . ."

Those words were spoken in 1916 but they stand just as true today.—Rebel News.

NEWS FROM MOUNT NEBO

A large group of his friends and relatives of the younger set attended a farewell party for James Hosey who becomes a member of Uncle Sam's army this week. The party was held at his home on Saturday night of last week.

Masters John Evans and Harry Culp of Bessemer are spending part of their vacation with their grandparents, Mr and Mrs John M. Culp.

Several people in the community attended the Homecoming at Shiloh last Sunday.

NEWS FROM SHILOH

The annual Homecoming at Shiloh of Sunday June 6th was a big success with a large crowd attending. The morning program was splendid, consisting of a wonderful message at 11 o'clock by Rev M. Lockhart. All others having part on the program, well, filled their places.

At noon hour a large table was well filled with plenty of good things to eat.

The afternoon was spent in singing and a very inspiring talk on "Our Boys who are in Service," by Rev. Grady Williams.

Directors for the singing were:

Clarnece Billingsley, J. W. DeVaughn, Rev Sandlin, Lewis Kilpatrick, Phillip Headley, Clem Kilpatrick, Jimmie Williams, F. I. Popwell M. Lockhart, Sam Heiley, Charles Ingram, Raymond Brigance and Miss Sandlin. The Prattville Quartette and the Sandlin Family were with us and both did some fine singing.

Pianist were: Clarence Billingsley and Miss Sandlin, with Clarence Billingsley acting as chairman.

The larger part of the homes represented have boys in service, but they were remembered in a special way and in prayer. We hope that these boys will be permitted to attend our next Homecoming and let's all look forward to the time, always remembering them in prayer and ask that God's will ever be done.

Resolution

WHEREAS, June 14, 1943, will mark the 166th Anniversary of the adoption by the Continental Congress of the Flag of the United States of America, and recognition of June 14, as Flag Day is customarily extended by the United States Flag Association to a full week of celebration, and

WHEREAS, In this critical hour, the American people have neither reason nor disposition to celebrate but are devoted to winning the war in the shortest possible time, now, therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, that as a practical, wartime tribute to our Flag and all that it symbolizes, The United States Flag Association designates the week of June 8-14, 1943, as Flag Week with the purpose of selling one hundred million dollars worth of War Bonds and Stamps above and beyond normal purchases for that week, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that members of the Association will, during Flag Week, "Save By Sacrifice"; that we will forego the purchase of things we need, and place the money, through War Bonds and Stamps, out there on the firing line, where our Flag is being advanced and maintained with such heroic self-sacrifice; and that we will urge all Americans to subscribe to this resolution and "Save By Sacrifice" during this week of self-denial, not only as a tribute to our Flag but also as an expression of gratitude to our armed forces, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That we will ask Congress to pass a resolution designating June 8-14 as Flag Week and requesting the President of the United States to issue an appropriate Flag Week Proclamation.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, as members of the Executive Board, we have hereunto placed our signatures and caused the seal of The United States Flag Association to be affixed on this fifteenth day of March in the year of our Lord, Nineteen Hundred and Forty-three.

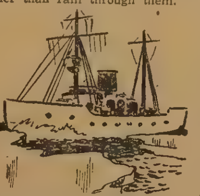
It is imperative that the ship lanes be kept free of ice. With American troops occupying Iceland and the Navy using the northern route for transportation of supplies to Russia, ice breakers are essential to Naval operations. The ice breaker is a specially constructed ship with heavily armored bows and powerful engines that crush the ice floes rather than ram through them.



Ice breakers of the Kickapoo class operating in the North Atlantic cost approximately $10,000,000. You can help our Navy build these ships by investing at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every payday. STANLEY-ALRED

The garden of the home of Mr and Mrs A. B. Stanley of Mitchell Dam was the scene of the marriage of their only daughter, Josephine to Joseph Guy Alred of Clanton and Leesburg Florida. The Rev. Roswell Owen of the Clanton Baptist Church officiated at the ceremony Sunday afternoon Nuptial music was rendered by Mrs Erle Ellis and Mrs Stokes Porch.

The improvised alter was banked with white lilies, gladioli, stock, snap dragons and queen ann lace.

The bride entered with her father by whom she was given in marriage Her wedding gown was white arganda with fitted bodice, full skirt and train. A coronet of seed pearls with a finger tips veil of illusion was worn and a garland bouquet of gardenias and stephanotis was carried.

Miss Faye McLure of Huntsville was maid of honor. Her dress was of green embroidered organdy and she carried garden and field flowers tied with tulle matching her dress.

Miss Geraldine Hollis and Miss Euginia Newton of Mitchell Dam were similarly attired in pink with their arm bouquets tied with pink tulle.

Jade Higgins, the flower girl, wore blue organdy and Louis Reynolds the ring bearer wore white gabardine

Sam Johnson served as best man and the ushers were Ellis Stanley. brother of the bride, and Thomas Patterson.

Following the ceremony Mr and Mrs Stanley were hosts at a reception. Mrs Stanley wore blue organdy and Mrs Hattie Alred, mother of the groom, wore aque crepe. Both wore corsages of gardenias.

The brides table was centered with the ring shaped cake, which was embossed with spun sugar flowers. Shasta daises were used as the flowers for the table.

Assisting the hosts were Mrs Omar Reynolds, Mrs Edward Waters, Mrs J. T. Hollis, Mrs Lee Smith, Misses Ruth and Helen Patterson, Judith Gibson, Betty Hollis, Sara Nell McCary, Betty Johnson, Peggy Page, Pearl Henley, Jerry Alred, Bess Hayes, Margaret Petty and Mrs Jefferson Miller.

For traveling Mrs Alred was attired in a brown suit of linen and silk, with a natural straw hat and brown accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of gardinias.

Mrs Bob White has as her guest for the week end Miss Bettie Deason and Miss Sarah Jordan of Anniston.

CONTROL COTTON INSETS

Cotton is too important and too valuable for insects to feed on this year. Both cotton and cotton seed and their products are vital war needs used in countless ways every day.

But insects will eat a lot of it unless they are controlled. Let's follow our County Agent's advice and adopt the slogan:

"Not One Pound Of Cotton For Insects in 1943."

Diligent and intelligent use of poison is the best way to control cotton insects, boll weevils, flea hoppers, cotton aphids, boll worms, and leaf worms.

We consider the small cash outlay necessary for cotton poisoning a very good investment. Any worthy person should be able to finance this operation.

Get in the Jam!

Bright little berries pushing their noses out of the greenery surrounding them makes you think of jam and jelly time, and rightfully so, for this is the time to start putting up those berries!

Strawberries are usually the first to arrive on the canning scene, followed very shortly by the other berries like raspberries, cherries, and then the fruits. Don't wait until the berries you are canning are too ripe, for those do not make the best jams and jellies.

To insure success in jelly making, use a commercial pectin. There's no sugar to waste on jelly that doesn't jell, and no time to spend re-cooking juices that won't work for jelly or jam. The recipes I'm giving this year are for smaller quantities of jam and jelly for most of us do not have too much sugar to spare on canning.

You'll like this standard recipe which can be used for making several different kinds of jelly:

Strawberry Jelly
Red Raspberry Jelly
Blackberry Jelly
Boysenberry Jelly
Dewberry Jelly
Loganberry Jelly
Youngberry Jelly
(Makes 11 glasses, 6 fluid ounces each)

4 cups juice
7½ cups sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

To prepare juice, crush or grind thoroughly about 3 quarts of fully ripe berries. Place in jelly bag or cloth and squeeze out juice. (If berries lack tartness, substitute ¼ cup lemon juice for ¼ cup prepared juice.) Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over the hottest fire and add bottled fruit pectin at once, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard for ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly into glasses and paraffin at once.

Do you like the new combination jellies? You may use the above recipe, preparing the required 4 cups of juice from 3 quarts of berries including 2 or more of the berries listed above.

Ripe Sour Cherry and Red Raspberry Jam.
(Makes 8 glasses, 6 fluid ounces each)

3½ cups prepared fruit
4½ cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

Lynn Says:

Jelly-Making: Don't be too ambitious. You'll have more success and be less tired out if you can only small quantities of fruit at a time and "do it right."

Unless you have all your neighbors and cousins and family helping you on canning, and have to tackle the job alone, do not try to put up bushels of produce.

Have a day for jelly-making and jam-making just as you set aside a day for washing and ironing. Make it a rule not to have housecleaning or any other big job on the same day for you'll be too tired to concentrate as you should on canning.

Select your jars and examine them for cracks or imperfections the day before you do your canning. Get them all washed, too, so sterilizing is the only big job you have left when actual jelly-making day comes up.

In getting strawberries ready for canning or jelly, wash them before hulling. They won't drink up as much water that way.

*Strawberry Jelly
*Ripe Sour Cherry and Red Raspberry Jam
*Strawberry and Pineapple Jam
*Rhubarb Relish
*Recipes Given

To prepare fruit, pit about 1 pound of fully ripe cherries. Crush or grind thoroughly. Crush about 1 quart red raspberries. Combine fruits.

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared fruit into a five or six quart kettle, filling up last cup or fraction of cup with water, if necessary. Place over hottest fire, add powdered fruit pectin, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour in sugar at once, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire. Skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once.

Ever tried a rhubarb relish? You can put this lovely fruit up in this way:

Rhubarb Relish.
(Makes 4 pints)

1 quart diced rhubarb
1 quart onions, finely cut
4 cups brown sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon allspice
1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon pepper
1 pint vinegar

Combine all ingredients and heat slowly to boiling. Simmer 45 to 50 minutes or until thick. Turn into sterile glasses and seal with paraffin. Serve with meat.

One of the most delightful of jams is the one combining our favorites, strawberries and pineapple.

Strawberry and Pineapple Jam.
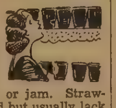
(Makes 10 glasses, 8 ounces each)

2 cups crushed strawberries
2 cups crushed canned or fresh pineapple
7 cups sugar
½ bottle commercial fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, crush completely or grind the berries. Cut fine or grind the fresh pineapple or use already canned fruit. Combine fruits. Measure sugar and fruit into large kettle, mixing well. Bring to a full, rolling boil over high [illegible] Stir constantly during boili[illegible] hard 1 minute. Remove f[illegible] [illegible]at and stir in pectin. Stir [illegible]m by turns for just 5 minute[illegible] cool slightly to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly and paraffin or seal at once.



You have often heard it said that perfect jelly or jam can be obtained even without the use of a commercial pectin. But, to make good jelly, the fruit must contain both pectin and acid in the right quantity to jell—be it for jelly or jam. Strawberries contain acid but usually lack sufficient pectin. That's why pectin of the commercial variety is added when making jelly or jam, or, as in this next recipe, lemon juice is added:

Strawberry-Lemon Jam.

4 cups washed, hulled strawberries
5 cups sugar
½ cup lemon juice

Combine sugar and berries, letting stand a few minutes, stirring occasionally. Do not crush fruit. Bring to a boil and boil 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Add lemon juice and cook 2 minutes longer. Pour into sterilized glasses and seal at once with paraffin.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

MANY a bride today is doing her furniture shopping in second hand stores where she finds a choice selection of the over-elaborate discards. These are not antiques and it takes a discerning eye to see any possibilities of beauty in them. The trick is in figuring out good proportions and modern comfort.

Chintz covers will hide padding over woodwork and carving. Legs may be cut off to give a low seat and if the back legs are cut a little shorter than the front, the backs of chairs and settees are given a comfortable tilt. Here, a loosely stuffed seat cushion fills in the edges of the rounded spring seat. Narrow cotton fringe trims the flowered cover and the resulting piece is full of informal charm.

Margaret

Margaret turned off the humming vacuum cleaner, and straightened the slipcovers of the armchair and the daybed that she had pushed up to go over the rug. Then she stood quite still in the doorway and looked at the small bedroom with its southern exposure. It was as neat and impersonal as a pin. It might never have been lived in. The door stood open on the clean, bare closet. There was not a pennant, not a team picture, not even so much as an old Arithmetic book left to show whose room it had once been.

Margaret stared at the walls, the furniture, and deeply, slowly, she realized that no matter what lodgers with their own trinkets and pictures might occupy it, she would always see it the old way. It was the old way that she saw it now. A pair of hard-worn gray pants lay on the floor where they had been dropped. Three baseball bats were stacked with a fishing rod in the corner. A battered red cap with a letter on it lay on the bed. And through the bed, as though it were transparent, Margaret saw another bed, smaller, and with high slatted sides.

She put the vacuum cleaner away and went down to her desk in the sitting-room. She took the fifteen dollars rent that the new lodger had paid that morning in advance for the room, and added to it, from her purse, three dollars and seventy-five cents more. Then she drew out a sheet of paper and began to write on it, slowly, gravely.

“To buy a bond to help train a young man to replace Don, Jr.—killed on June 6th in the Battle of Midway.”

MORAL ECHOES

By Rev. D. W. Haskew, D. D.

I was sharing the seat with a prominent Navy officer as our train approached the Huey Long bridge that spans the Mississippi river. The man had never seen the bridge and he coveted this privilege. Darkness had set in as the train slowed down for the crossing, and this fine young man arose and said, "Doctor, in this leather case there are papers valued far above the hundred thousand dollar mark, and will you keep this pouch for me while I go into the vestibule to catsh a glimpse of this great bridge" I reached my hand for the bundle. I felt greatly honored to have won the confidence of that officer and I guarded his trust until his return. You bet I did. God has given to me, He has given to you, a trust that is worth more than all the money in the world. God had confidence in us or He never would have entrusted a soul to our care. My soul is continually inmy hand" says the Palmist. I can turn that soul over to the enemy of my life, or I can keep it for my God who gave it to me. I will not betray my trust.

On our visit to Texas we had the great privilege of going to the top of that wonderful monument on the battlefield on San Jacinto. It is a rock shaft that pierces the sky for 577 feet The elevator carried us up and up until it seemed that we would be able to step out in the back yard of heaven. Standing there in the open sky we could see the great City of Houston to the West, and in all directions we could see the handy works of God We were lifted far above the noise and confusion of a rushing world, and yet the world that was down there was a thing of beauty. All along the way of life we are meeting with mountain top experiences. It is good to get above the world and to stand in the backyard of heaven. Paul stood there one day and he came down saying that he saw things that it was not lawful for him to utter.

While sitting on the porch of a beautiful pariarie home I heard the cry of distress coming from a Lily pool near by. Hearing a second call of distress I advanced to the pool to see a large snake in the act of swallowing a big frog. A yard tool being at hand, the snake was hit with a fatal blow, and the frog leaped to liberty and life. That frog did not have the sence of a human being, and yet he knew that he was in danger. Almost every day I see young people being swallowed by the reptile of sin, and yet I do not hear calls of alarm. Is it a fact that the life of today is so charmed with sin, until there are no calls for help. Men of God, up and strike these reptiles of sin with a teriffic blow. It is better to kill the snake than it is to lament the ruin of a child. Thrice blessed is that indi- sees it, and then will cry aloud for help.

vidual who knows danger when he

While our train crawled like a snake across the Southern part of Louisiana I sat with a fine young man who was a trusted officer of the Navy. Along came a drinking soldier and he stopped to urge this man to go up ahead and get a drink. The Navy officer refused flafly. In a few moments that drinking soldier came back and stopped a second time to urge the officer to drink with him. He refused in no uncertain terms. I saw the will power of this fine young man and commended him for his decisions. He told me that he had been raised in Christian parents and that he . w trying to live by their ideals. On our visit to Texas it was a source of joy to witness the orderly manner of the soldiers. Our boys in uniform have sobered down and like men who face death they are going here and there in a sober, orderly way. I found myself saying over and over, "God bless our boys in uniform, they have a great task before them." It is well for those of us who remain at home to pray for our boys, our husbands, our brothers, that they be not overcome with temptation.

THE little jeep which is serving so nobly from Guadalcanal to Africa has become the symbol of the gigantic efforts of millions of American school children in their War Savings program.

Thousands of public, private and parochial schools soon will be displaying a certificate of honor from Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., signifying that they have paid for at least one jeep by buying $900 in War Stamps and Bonds.

Countless others will be flying the Schools At War banner awarded to schools with 90 percent pupil participation in War Savings.

Ten thousand jeeps and a hundred bombers! This is the new goal of America's schools as 30,000,000 children continue their Schools At War program under the auspices of the Treasury Department and the U. S. Office of Education.

Results so far in the program reported by Dr. Homer W. Anderson, Associate Field Director in charge of the education section of the War Savings Staff, are:

More than 7,000,000 elementary and high school students from 30,000 schools have prepared special Schools At War scrapbooks for state and local exhibits.

War Stamp and War Bond purchases may reach a grand total of $300,000,000 for the school year.

OUR trains are killing an average of 1600 head of livestock per year.

Last year we paid claims in this connection totalling almost $50,000, and we would naturally like to eliminate this expense.

What is more important now, however, than the financial loss to this Railroad is the value to our country of the animals involved.

The cattle and hogs being destroyed on the GM&O per year have a ration value of approximately 2,400,000 points—enough meat to feed 3,000 people for one year.

Horses and mules have never been more in demand, and as mechanical equipment wears out and cannot be replaced they will be even more indispensable.

Furthermore, these killings slow down and stop our trains, causing loss of time—man hours. They mean delays in the handling of passengers and war materials.

And then, they can cause serious accidents which we cannot afford. Most of our equipment is irreplaceable.

May we not appeal to the patriotism of the citizens along our lines to cooperate, at least for the duration of the war, in keeping their livestock off of our right-of-way.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

AN ENTIRE apartment house, in sections, was constructed for Columbia's "The More the Merrier" (Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea and Charles Coburn starring), which is certainly the most amusing picture of the year so far. The rooftop was laid out across the floor of an entire sound stage, the four room apartment that's the scene of most of the action occupied another, the building front and a block of similar structures occupied another—the latter being the scene of the love scene which is likely to go down in movie history as one of the most delightful ever made.

The way James Cagney mauls his women on the screen is a Hollywood legend; actually, he has struck women only four times, never bruised one. But in "Johnny Come Lately" he's beat up by a girl, Marjorie Lord. She slapped him, hit him on the jaw, pounded his chest. He suffered no ill effects. But Marjorie sprained a wrist.

—*—

There's not a woman featured in "Bataan"—but the wives of the all-star cast include Barbara Stanwyck, Joan Crawford, Lucille Ball and Jennifer Jones, soon to make her appearance in the lead of "The Song of Bernadette." Her husband is Robert Walker, screen newcomer, who an enthusiastic press agent tells us has "the wistful appeal of Jimmy Stewart, plus a dash of Gary Cooper."

JENNIFER JONES

Now that we all have to read maps, to keep up with the war, Walt Disney's set to help us; in "Victory Through Air Power" he has introduced an entire sequence to acquaint audiences with the fundamentals of cartography and map-reading.

—*—

Freddie Bartholomew's last act before reporting for service in the army air corps was to say good-by to Miles Mander, who gave him his start in pictures. Freddie dropped in on the set of "Five Graves to Cairo," where Mander, formerly a director-writer-actor in English pictures, was playing the part of a British officer.

—*—

Till recently Dick Stark, announcer on "Abie's Irish Rose," would fight anybody who called him "Baby-face." Now he's changed his tune—Paramount likes that baby-face, and has signed him to replace Alan Ladd in gangster roles lined up for Ladd before he joined the army.

—*—

When a quizmaster makes a mistake listeners burn up the wires telling him so. On a recent "Take a Card" program Wally Butterworth said that hot dogs are made of pork; he's been snowed under by wires, letters and phone calls telling him an assortment of meats is used.

—*—

Brian Donlevy lost half his mustache during the final day's shooting for "America" at a steel plant; it irritated the workers in throwing his arms across his face after flipping a shovelful of ferro-manganese into a furnace, but took his arm down too soon.

—*—

Paulette Goddard predicts that Sonny Tufts, who appears opposite her in "So Proudly We Hail," will become a big star. A year ago he was trying to get extra parts on the air, but radio producers wouldn't listen. Recently she told Charles Martin of the CBS Playhouse that she'd bet him a pound of steak he'd be offering Sonny $1,500 an appearance after the picture's released.

—*—

Both radio and movies took a hand in the build-up of Jack Carson. Producer Vick Knight announced his engagement as star of an air series; then Mark Hellinger said he'd get star billing in "The Widow Wouldn't Weep," first meant for Jack Benny.

—*—

ODDS AND ENDS—Martha Raye dropped in on the "Let's Face It" set to tell Bob Hope what he'd better take along on his overseas trip . . . She hopes to go back herself soon . . . Jack Benny's been signed to star in "The Horn Blows at Midnight," the scenes of which are laid in Heaven and New York . . . They've changed the title of "The Pentacle" to "Conflict," much easier to understand—but "Five Graves to Cairo" is still a puzzler, since it doesn't mean what it seems to . . . Stage 29 on the Metro lot, where Gregory Ratoff is directing "Russia," has been christened "Ratoffgrad" by the members of the company.

Sorely Needed

Stubbs was feeling his way to the kitchen stove in the dark, when he fell over the coal scuttle.

"Oh, John," called Mrs. Stubbs, sweetly, "I know what you need. You should get what they have on all the battleships."

"What's that?" growled Stubbs, rubbing his shin.

"Why, a range-finder."

Heart's Desire

Waiter—How would you like your rice, madam?

Spinster (wistfully)—Thrown at me!

That's Out!

"Now we know that the earth is round," said the schoolmaster. "Tell me, Thomas, would it be possible for you to walk round the earth?"

"No, sir," replied Thomas.

"And why not?"

"'Cause," was the unexpected reply, "I twisted my ankle playing baseball."

Ready for Anything

After the optician had tested the professor's eyes and found them wanting, he asked:

"And now, sir, which shall it be—eyeglasses or spectacles?"

"Spectacles, please; and I think I'd better have three pairs."

"What ever for?" demanded the optician in surprise.

"Yes," said the professor; "one pair for home and one for my office, and a third pair to look for the other two."

AROUND THE HOUSE

An old orange wood stick from your manicure kit will be found helpful to get at the dirt in the corners when washing windows or floors.

Strong soap suds and hot water will remove stains from pewter which has become discolored and dark.

• • •

To save time and hosiery, just rub paraffin on the inside of the toes of your stockings. You will have no darning to do for a long time and one application lasts through many launderings.

Use a potato ricer to squeeze out that hot compress. With it you can use water much hotter than your bare hands can stand.

• • •

Here is a way to prevent loose casters from dropping from the furniture when it is moved about. Put melted paraffin in the hole and insert the caster before it is set.

• • •

In grafting fruit trees in the spring, keep the grafting wax from sticking to your hands by keeping a piece of pork rind handy and rubbing your hands on it occasionally.

Dirty clothespins leave their mark on otherwise clean clothes, and once in, the dirt is difficult to remove. Tub pins in warm, soapy water once a month, dry them in the sun and store them in a spotlessly clean bag from washday to washday. They deserve good care especially in wartime.

Odors on the hands resulting from peeling and slicing onions can be removed by washing the hands in vinegar.

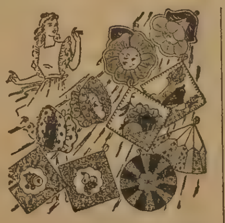
To make sterilized bandages at home, tear a clean old sheet into strips, roll them and then place in an airtight jar. Suspend the jar in water and allow the water to become boiling hot for several minutes.

• • •

Yellowed ivory knife handles can be whitened by rubbing them with turpentine.

THINGS for You TO MAKE



NOW, aren't you glad you saved those tiny scraps of muslin, prints and plain colors? Just see what an exciting array of gay panholders can be fashioned from these bits of material. Whether you prefer the vegetables, fruit motifs, flower faces, sunbonnet babies or pieced designs, your scrap bag can surely supply the "makings"—and those odds and ends of floss will do the rest.

• • •

You may indulge your preference in stitch, too, for embroidery, applique and piecing are all employed here. Hot iron transfer Z9542, 15 cents, brings motifs for this entire group of panholders. Send your order to:

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Improper brake adjustment is a rubber-waster. Have your brakes checked regularly. If one wheel "takes hold" before the others, its rubber carries the full brunt of stopping the car, with resultant excessive rubber wear.

In their search for rubber substitutes, scientists are now probing myrcene, a turpentine derivative discovered about fifty years ago. The list of rubber "sources" is growing almost daily.

It is expected that the 1943 harvest of crude rubber in the United States will total 600 tons, all guayule. Normally this country consumed about 600,000 tons of rubber a year.

FIVE ISABELLA FFA MEMBERS ATTEND CONVENTION JUNE 2

Five members of the Isabella Chapter of Future Farmers of America attended the State F. F. A. Convention held at Auburn on Wednesday, June 2nd. The members attending are as follows: Hudson Calfee, Hansel Groom, Gordon Conway, Joe James Wells, and Earl Wright. J. H. Camp F. F. A. adviser at Isabella, also attended

The Isabella Chapter was awarded a large banner for winning second place in the semi - final Public Speaking Contest. Jesse Culp was the speaker.

Four members from the Isabella FFA were awarded the State Farmers Degree. This degree is given to members who do an outstanding job in FFA work and who carry an outstanding farming program. Members receiving this degree are as follows: Quinton Cummings, Robert Cummings, Joe James Wells, and Gordon Conway. Robert and Quinton were not present to receive their degree but it was sent to them.

Hansell Groom, a State Farmer from Isabella was elected by the Convention to serve as State FFA Reporter for next year. He succeeds Hudson Calfee who is also from Isabella. This election was unusual due to the fact that a boy from one chapter seldom succeeds another from the same chapter as a State FFA officer.

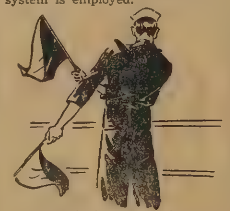
What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Wigwag

Frequently the Navy, the Coast Guard and the Signal Corps finds it expedient to relay messages without benefit of telephone, telegraph or radio. That is when the semaphore system is employed.

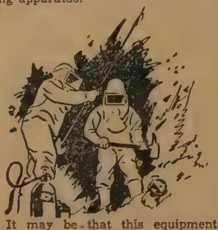


Like a single flag in the "Wigwag" system, the purchase of a War Savings Stamp or Bond, in itself has an infinitesimal effect upon the entire war effort, but when 130 million determined people set their minds to make our War Bond drives successful, the result is anything but infinitesimal. U. S. Treasury Department

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

"Smoke Eaters"

A battlewagon loaded with various explosives, bombs, torpedoes, oil and gasoline is not the safest place to be with a fire raging, so all but the smaller ships of our Navy are equipped with elaborate fire fighting apparatus.

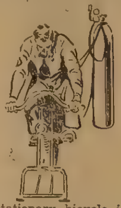


It may be that this equipment never will be used during the entire course of the war, but it must be paid for out of the War Bonds and Stamps that we are setting aside each payday. U. S. Treasury Department

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Prevents the "Bends"

Before our fighting pilots take to the air for stratosphere flying they must be "suped-up." To do this the pilot just before he takes off pedals a stationary motor driven bicycle to reduce the amount of nitrogen in his blood. Otherwise gas bubbles would collect in his blood stream.



The stationary bicycle is an inexpensive piece of equipment, but the vast quantities of this and other materials of war make it imperative for all of us to keep our fighting men well supplied by greater and greater purchases of War Bonds. U. S. Treasury Department

What could be nicer than the WITS organizing to get what they go after? That is what the Women In Teaching Service are calling themselves. They are by far the hardest working and the lowest paid of the lot and the whole future of the United States government is in their hands. They mold the man and the woman of tomorrow. Our destiny depends on their ability to build fine, upright citizens out of our boys and girls. We're for the WITS. May their new organization be successful and may they create force enough on Capitol Hill to get a full 12 month salary each year of a sufficient wage to justify their contribution to their country's future and her welfare.

Mr. C. P. Jones of Clanton Route 1 brought a pair of glasses into the News office Tuesday morning. He had found them on the street and was sure that the party losing them would come in and run a classified ad to find them. After being told that we would have the owner get in touch with him to pay him for his trouble he said, "If the party who owns the glasses calls for them, give them to him. I don't know who's they are, but I do know who's they ain't."

Received some pictures from Charles Simpson of a tank that he rides around in belonging to his Uncle Sam. It's the General Grant. He also sent a picture of a new gun they are using. It weighs 2 tons, shoots 20 shells per minute, each shell weighing 2 lbs. Charlie says the General Grant Tank has 7 others in it besides him to make up its complement.

Page Mr. Doyle Kinard Thomas. We have his ration book. The last time we never saw him he was 13 yrs. old, 5 feet tall. Weighed 93 pounds. He has blond hair and blue eyes. The book was found and brought to the News office Saturday. Anyone knowing Mr. Thomas please tell him to call for his book or that next shoe stamp or sugar stamp might go forth.

Little Billy Lawrence came to see us last week and brought a German medal that his brother Harold Lawrence had picked up on the sands in Tunisia. The design on the medal was the emblem of the Marble Arch we learned and on the back was the Nazi Swastika. Harold picked it up on a battle ground where 74 German planes had been downed the day before.

Shelby County Man Held On Charge Of Arson

Edward Ellison, about 22 years of age, is being held in the Chilton County jail, charged with arson.

The charge grew out of the burning Sunday night of the barn of Jim Johnson's in the Mineral Springs community.

According to Sheriff Nivens, after the call came in Sunday night he immediately called Kilby Prison and got bloodhounds, which he had to go after himself. Upon taking the dogs to the scene of the fire they picked up a trail at once and the trail ended at the home of a brother-in-law of the accused. Here they found Edward Ellison. The Sheriff brought him to Clanton an lodged him in jail

It is reported that Ellison, who is a former son-in-law of Johnson's is a resident of Shelby County.

Progress In Farm Labor Reported By County Agent

Headquarters for farm labor mobilization work in Chilton County have been established at Clanton, according to County Extension Agent P. H. Smith.

Mr. Smith said this week that all farmers who need labor are asked to contact this office as soon as possible This office will also serve as a clearing house for city people, who enroll for part-time farm work.

City people who want to render a patriotic service by working on farms can get full information from the farm labor office. County Agent Smith urged that men, women, and older boys and girls enroll in the U S. crop corps.

The worker will be paid for all work done. At the same time he will have the satisfaction of knowing that he is engaged in service just as vital to winning the war as making tanks or building ships.

Listen to Morgenthau-Marshall Tell Power of Payroll Savings!

Washington, D. C.—How important is the average worker's war bond purchases out of his pay every payday in the grand strategy of the Allied High Command? Does the extent of his or her War Bond allotment have a part in determining when, where and the strength of our military blows?

George C. Marshall

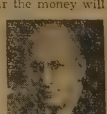
Any worker listening in on a recent conversation between General George C. Marshall, President Roosevelt's Chief of Staff, and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., learned the answers to these questions.

Said General Marshall:

"Mr. Secretary, I want you to answer a question for me and to answer it with complete frankness. Can we military leaders plan to fight this war in an orderly way—in the surest and most effective manner—or must we take extraordinary risks for fear the money will not hold out?"

Replied Secretary Morgenthau:

"General, the American public will take care of that. What they have done in the Second War Loan drive—the money they have produced and the spirit they have shown—is proof enough for me that they will not let our fighters suffer from lack of support until we achieve complete victory, no matter how long that may be nor how much it may cost."



Henry Morgenthau, Jr.

Up your War Bond allotment out of your wages today. Figure it out for yourself how much above 10 per cent it should be.

Vaccinate Against Fowl Pox Early

Fowl pox is manifested by wart like scabs on the unfeathered portions of the head, and the accumulation of cheesy material or "cankers" on the membranes of the mouth and the larynx. The latter group of symptoms is known as the internal or wet form of fowl pox or avian diphtheria ("canker"), while the appearance of scabs on the head is usually termed the external or dry form of the disease. The two forms are due to the same cause, a filtrable virus.

Fowl pox is a serious and economically important disease. It attacks birds principally during their pullet year and at a time when egg production is usually high. Very few deaths occur as a result of the disease unless it assumes the "canker" form and involves the larynx, in which case the mortality is usually due to suffocation. The pullet, however, drop in egg production to an alarming degree Several weeks are required before the flock recovers its normal egg production and the birds have gained sufficient flesh to warrant their sale as meat. The margin of profit is so small in the industry that this loss in eggs and flesh is seldom regained.

The necessity of using some treatment which will prevent the annual appearance of this disease is aparent. appearance of this direase is apparent.

Prevention

In order to diminish the possibility of interference with the productivity of the flock from fowl pox, the birds should be vaccinated at 8 to 12 weeks of age.

There are two methods of vaccination: The "stab" or "stick" method and the "follicle" method. The stab method is a more recent development and seems to rave several advantages over the older follicile method; vaccination can be accomplished much more easily and quickly, much less vaccine is required, and it is more sanitary.

In the stab method, a narrow sharp-pointed knife or lancet with adhesive tape wrapped around the blade about one-eighth inch from the point is used. Vaccination is accomplisred by dripping this instrument into a bottle of vaccine and making a quick stab sufficient to penetrate the skin The most convenient site to vaccinate by this method is on the outside of the leg near the knee (patellar) joint where the rows of feathers are far apart and the stab can easily be made between the rows.

A variation of the stab method recently reported is the use of two sewing machine needles pushed through a cork with the point one-fourth inch apart. When this instrument is used the wing is stretched out der side, thus making four vacinnations and the web is pierced from the untion points through tre double layer of skin simultaneously.

When vacinnation is done by the follicle method the procedure is as follows: Pluck out several feathers from the part of one leg, and with a cropped, bristle brush, or other suitable application, rub the vaccine into the empty feather follicles.

The reaction denoting a so-called "vaccination take" may be noticed in 7 to 10 days. The site of vaccination will show inflammation and later the formation of a scab, which will drop off in from two to three weeks.

PAINFUL FEET

While the word orthopedic means straightening of the feet, orthopedic physicians are consulted by patients who have any trouble with bones and joints of the entire body. That physicians would be of more help to patients if they studied foot pains more, is admitted by the medical profession.

Dr. Barton

That pains in the feet are very often due to infection—teeth, tonsils — is known and patients with painful feet who are not on their feet much are likely suffering with infection. In fact, some orthopedic physicians state that more than half of painful feet are due to infection. And when we think of the number of bones and joints in the feet, in which arthritis can get started, this is not hard to understand.

However, there are a great many cases of painful feet due to bearing the weight of the body.

In speaking of functional disorders of the feet (that is not due to disease or infection) Dr. D. J. Morton, New York, in the New York State Journal of Medicine, states that the commonest cause of pain in sole of foot is because the inner bone of the sole of the foot, corresponding with big toe, is shorter than the other four bones and the ligaments supporting it are loose or not as tight as with the other bones in sole of foot. Thus pain here is just like pain in any other joint that is being constantly strained. In other words improper weight distribution, too much at this point, causes the pain.

Suggestions for treatment of painful feet are: (1) less work or play and weight bearing, (2) rest, (3) many short rests during the day with the legs and feet well supported at level of hips, (4) removal of all irritation (corns, calluses, warts) which cause the individual to put his weight elsewhere when walking and avoidance of badly fitting shoes, (5) plunging feet first into hot and then into cold water a few times after the day's work is over to improve the circulation.

Dr. Morton gives a helpful working rule which is to assume (in general) that pain at top and sides of the foot is likely caused by the shoe; when pain is on the bottom of the foot, the trouble is generaly inside the foot. An X-ray should be taken from top of foot to sole of both feet.

Sulfa Drugs Reduce Influenza Death Rate

Physicians who went through the influenza epidemic of 1918-1919, and witnessed the hopelessness in the treatment of thousands of cases, now look with eager eyes toward future battles with influenza.

It was because influenza went on to pneumonia and bronchopneumonia and the heart already damaged by influenza was unable to sustain the continued fight against pneumonia and bronchopneumonia, that so many victims died. Now that the physician has at hand the sulfa drugs which have reduced the death rate in pneumonia from nearly 10 per cent to about 3 per cent, he is able to fight influenza and pneumonia successfully.

Some interesting figures were recently released by Dr. Louis I. Dublin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. The figures show that there has been a decrease in the death rate of influenza and pneumonia of 65 per cent from 1900 to 1940, that is from 202 per hundred thousand of the population in 1900 to 70 in 1940.

While this is gratifying, the use of the sulfa drugs during 1941 and 1942 has caused an even more rapid decrease.

How remarkable this drop in the death rate really is can only be realized by thinking of the rate of decrease in the years 1900 to 1940, or before the general use of the sulfa drugs. For the general population, the decrease in the death rate from influenze and pneumonia has been at the rate of 1½ per cent a year for the 40 years. During the last two years, judging the whole population by the millions of wage earners and their families of the Metropolitan Insurance company, the death rate has decreased more than 14 per cent a year. In other words, the sulfa drugs have decreased the death rate in influenza and pneumonia over nine times as much each of the last two years as in any of the previous 40 years.

HEALTH BRIEFS

Q.—Will you please advise on the seriousness of polypus for the benefit of my husband who has them in his nose, but refuses to have them removed.

A.—Your husband is like many others who haven't needed doctors much. However, the polypus is an obstruction and irritates passages so that it causes coughing. This coughing may cause more serious trouble. Removal of this soft growth is very simple.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for June 20

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

JOHN DESCRIBES TRUE CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—I John 2:1-6; 3:13-18; 4:15-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.—I John 1:7.

Religion and life go together. To hold the tenets of Christian truth in one's head and not to have them move the heart is to deny the very faith one professes. Yet this is the danger which faces the believer—a temptation before which many have fallen. The result is that much of "what passes for Christianity in these days is very thin stuff, very remote from the original" (Shoemaker).

John was not content with such a weak imitation, and in his writings he set up the true standard of a forgiven and transformed life, living itself out in love and sacrificial service. If we have forgotten what God meant us to bé in Christ, or are members of a church which has strayed from the true and living way, this lesson affords an opportunity for penitence and works meet thereunto.

The true Christian life must nave

I. Sin Forgiven and Life Transformed (I John 2:1-6).

Not only at the beginning of the Christian life is sin dealt with and put away, but day by day—yes, moment by moment—we have the cleansing power of the blood of our Divine Advocate.

This is of the utmost importance, for God can only use clean channels for the outgoing of His power and grace to the world. We know our own weakness and the defiling presence of the world. But unlike the unregenerate man, we do not submit and go down; we turn to Christ for forgiveness and cleansing.

The transformation of life which thus comes to the believer is shown in obedience to the commandments of God. In the early church there were those who said that if they only believed in Christ as Saviour it made no difference how they lived—and they have their followers in our day.

Be sure of this, the essential thing in Christian profession is not how you talk about Christ, but how you walk in obedience to His commandments.

Real Christianity will cause us to be

II. Hated by the World and Loved by the Brethren (I John 3:13-18).

The world, that is, unregenerate mankind, hates a genuine Christian no matter how kind and loving he may be. Why? "Because the Christian believer gives the non-believer an uncomfortable sense of inferiority. The presence of high Christian ideals in marked contrast to his own selfish policies arouses his anger and resentment" (Douglass).

The presence of a clean, godly life in a community makes every sinner look that much blacker, and the world, the flesh, and the devil will do everything possible to break down and destroy such a testimony.

We, as Christians, should not be surprised that the world hates us. In fact, we should be troubled if it does not hate us, for if our Christianity really means anything, it is distasteful to a God-hating world. Beware if sinners find nothing in your life which distresses them and convicts them of sin.

In the midst of enmity the [illegible]tian is not afraid, for he is [illegible]

III. Indwelt by God and [illegible]raid in the World (I John 4:15-[illegible]).

A sincere confession of Christ as Saviour brings a man into that close relationship to God which is expressed in the words, "God abideth in him, and he in God" (v. 15).

The full depth of meaning of these words is obviously beyond our limited understanding, but we accept the fact by faith and rejoice in it. We recognize that it means that we are brought by our faith in Christ, into the very center of God's love. Christ, the well-beloved Son, who stands in that blessed place, draws us into the circle and there we stand in Him.

God's love showed itself in the giving of His Son as the Redeemer of the world. It was and is unselfish and sacrificial devotion to the eternal welfare of those who merited only judgment. We do not love until we reflect that quality in our lives.

Such love casts out fear. Fellowship is impossible in an atmosphere of fear, but love rules it out. In Christ we realize that God first loved us, and then our hearts go out in warm devotion to him.

Not only does the Christian no longer fear the day of judgment, but he is unafraid in the present evil world. This is not because of his own strength or ability, but because through faith in Christ he is "in God," and "as He is, so are we in this world" (v. 17). No more perfect or blessed ground of assurance could possibly be provided. Let us recognize our position in Him, and be strong and unafraid.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS

One Whole Chicken Can Be Made Into Two Meals

You're the clever homemaker who saves on chicken by using only half a chicken for roasting. You can have the stuffing, too, by mounding it under the chicken when you roast it in the pan to get all the wonderful flavor of the meat in it.

Most families are so reduced that few homemakers find it necessary to stew or roast a whole chicken for their meals. Instead, it's much smarter to use one half of the chicken for stewing, the other half for roasting, or perhaps in making numerous and delicious dishes using cut up chicken.

Chicken is a good source of protein and we can use it in place of meat dishes regularly. In addition it's a delicious food that combines well with many other types of food, and goes with most vegetables and fruits in the menu.

Consider, for example, many of the chicken salads which can be made up with fruits or vegetables, and for sandwich fillings. Then, too, you can serve chicken either warm or cold with many vegetables and fruits, as a good start on getting what you need of the seven basic food groups necessary to health.

You probably have your own way of stewing and roasting chicken, but instead of using one whole chicken for either of these methods, split it, use one half for stewing, the other for roasting.

Cut the fowl in half, lengthwise, and cook one half with several carrots, celery, parsley, onion, and seasonings in enough water to cover until tender. Make dumplings, if you like, to go with the stew.

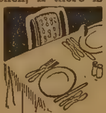
*For roast chicken, cook stewing hen split in half lengthwise until tender. Mound 4 to 6 cups of well-seasoned dressing in bottom of shallow pan, well greased where dressing is placed. Arrange dressing to keep outline of chicken. Press cooked half of chicken cut side down over dressing. Brush chicken with melted fat. Bake uncovered in a hot oven (400 degrees) until chicken is nicely browned, about ½ hour.

A few leftover pieces of chicken either from the roast or from stewing can go into a salad. You'll like this combination with fruit:

Chicken and Fruit Salad Bowl.
(Serves 4 to 6)

1 cup diced chicken
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups seedless grapes
2 oranges, peeled and sectioned
½ cup blanched almonds
French dressing

Add salt to chicken. Cover salad bowl with shredded lettuce. Arrange grapes over half of top, oranges over other half. Pass french dressing.



Still another way of stretching your meat, or chicken, if there is absolutely enough to go around is to serve it with potato salad. You may like it hot or you may like it cold. Here's one that's hot:

Hot Potato Salad.
(Serves 6)

6 potatoes, diced
3 slices bacon
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons chopped parsley
3 tablespoons chopped onion
6 tablespoons bacon fat
3 tablespoons vinegar

Cook potatoes in jackets until tender. Peel and dice. Cook bacon over low flame until crisp. Remove from pan and break into small pieces and add to hot potato cubes. Add seasoning, parsley and onion. Combine fat and vinegar. Pour over potato mixture and serve hot.

There are still a number of unrationed foods which may fill in nice gaps in menu-making. For example, cottage cheese is an excellent source of both calcium and protein, and you'll enjoy using it in this salad with summer greens:

Cottage Cheese Salad.
(Serves 4 to 5)

2 cups cottage cheese
½ cup sour cream
¼ cup chopped chives
½ cucumber diced
1 tablespoon chopped watercress
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped

Mix cottage cheese and sour cream lightly with a fork. Add vegetables and diced eggs, and season with salt and pepper. Serve in mounds, garnished with watercress or lettuce and tomato wedges.

Here's the way to stew chicken and bring out all its delicious flavor. Simmer gently until tender in seasoned water with onion, carrot, parsley and salt.

Cottage Cheese Salad Mold.
(Serves 8 to 10)

3 cups cottage cheese
1 cup crushed pineapple, drained
5 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon mustard
Dash of cayenne
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1½ tablespoons unflavored gelatin
1 cup pineapple juice

Mix cheese, pineapple and mayonnaise. Mix salt, mustard, cayenne and lemon juice; add to cheese and mix lightly. Soften gelatin in pineapple juice and dissolve over hot water. Stir carefully into the cheese mixture. Turn into mold and chill until firm.

A cool, delectable dessert that does not consume points and takes it easy on the sugar is this:

Frozen Apricot Shortcake.
(Serves 6)

1 cup dried apricots
2½ cups water
⅔ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin
1 tablespoon cold water
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 egg, beaten
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
Sponge cake

Cook apricots until tender, about 25 minutes. Add ⅓ of sugar and salt. Heat to boiling, remove from heat and beat to a mush. Soften gelatin in water and add to apricots. Cool. Add remaining ⅓ cup sugar and vanilla to beaten egg and beat until thick. Fold in whipped cream. Arrange layer of sponge cake cut about ¼ inch thick on bottom of refrigerator tray. Spread with apricots and cover with whipped mixture. Freeze. Cut in squares and serve cream side up.

Are you having difficulties planning meals with points? Stretching your meats? Lynn Chambers can give you help if you write her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply, in care of her at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Ceiling prices have been announced on many rationed foods, and it's a good idea to consult the lists when you go shopping. It will help you in buying and budgeting.

Most of the times we're concerned with buying foods in season, but it's more important to buy in season now when you're preparing to put up foods for the fall and winter.

In case you don't have your own garden, you might be of help in picking vegetables and fruits to some farmer who does not have enough help. If you are canning, this is a splendid way of getting fresh produce.

Those of you city dwellers who can neither have your own Victory garden or help pick produce should get to the market early to get as fresh produce as possible.

ON COLUMBIA'S "Appointment in Berlin" set: George Sanders, pretending to be a traitor for his country's sake, is under arrest: the bit player charged with handcuffing him bursts through a door and tries to wrap the steel bracelets around Sanders' wrists. Tries again and again and can't get them to clasp. "You're not putting mittens on a baby!" Director Al Green cries at last. "You act as if you were afraid of hurting Mr. Sanders." The bit player looks sheepish, and Sanders pulls his sleeves back from his bruised and bleeding wrists. "Really, you're being a bit hard on the fellow," says he. "He has tried it the other way, you know."

Two ex-choir singers kept the set of Paramount's "True to Life" filled with music. They were Mary Martin and Dick Powell, both of whom began their musical careers singing hymns in the home-town church. They sang in their dressing rooms and on the set; just couldn't seem to stop. When they weren't singing the music written for the picture they were rehearsing songs for their radio shows. The tunes for the picture were written by Johnny Mercer and Hogy Carmichael; no wonder the stars couldn't stop singing!

Looks as if Zasu Pitts is making a swell comeback in "Let's Face It," after concluding her run in her play, "Her First Murder." Zasu deserves a good picture, after working in the lamentable one called "Tish."

George Reeves spent four years struggling through small roles in big pictures, hoping for the break that would boost him to the top. He got it, opposite Claudette Colbert in "So Proudly We Hail"—and was inducted into the army when the picture was finished.

Way, way back Universal decided to follow its hilarious "My Man Godfrey" with "My Girl Godfrey," with Carole Lombard in the title role. Now it's scheduled again, with Deanna Durbin starring, along with Franchot Tone and Pat O'Brien.

You'll have to see "Stars in the Service" if you yearn to see what your favorite movie heroes are up to in the armed forces. It will be the first release of the 23rd year of Columbia's "Screen Snapshots," and will present virtually every male star and featured player who is in uniform. It was made by Ralph Staub—it's the 565th short he's produced, directed and photographed.

Ray Noble, of the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy air show, is excited over the announcement that Warner Bros. will produce a picture named for Ray's tune, "The Very Thought of You"; he wrote it in 1934, and it's still popular. It will be spotted in the same manner as "As Time Goes By" was spotlighted so successfully in "Casablanca."

The Andrews Sisters will return to radio on June 30, when they will be guest stars on Morton Gould's Carnival over CBS. Having finished the Hollywood chore for Universal—which they didn't want to do—they're glad to be coming back, even though they've made so much money already this year that they'll have to give their radio salaries right back to Uncle Sam!

Here is a model sewing cupboard from my new book Better Dressmaking.

The cupboard is six and one-half feet high; four feet wide and twenty inches deep. The dress form compartment is five feet six inches high and twenty-four inches wide. The ironing board compartment is four feet ten inches high and eight inches wide. This leaves ample space for shelves for the pressing cushions shown at the top; the sleeve board; iron; water pan and sponge; stout slide-in boxes for findings; notions and patterns; and a lower shelf for fabrics. The construction is of plywood.

"Why do we wait til lears are dead
  Before we speak our kindly word,
And only utter loving praise
  When not a whisper can be heard?

"Why do we wait till hands are laid
  Close-folded, pulseless, ere we place
Within them roses sweet and rare,
  And lilies in their flawless grace?

"Why do we wait till lips are sealed
  To light and love in death's deep trance,
Dear wistful eyes—before we bend
  Above them with impassioned glance?

Wry do we wait till hearts are still
  To tell them all the love in ours,
And give them such late meed of prais,
  And lay above them fragrant flowers?"

NEWS FROM
CHESTNUT CREEK

Sunday and Sunday night our pastor, Brother Williams gave two very good messages which was enjoyed by a goodly number. We appreciated every one who made the effort to come out to the house of the Lord It gives us courage to do more and will help every one to do something for the Lord even if it is a small deed.

The W. M. S. has been organized and part of the officers elected. We will meet next Sunday before Sunday School to discuss further details We hope every one will see the need of this great work in the church and make special effort to be present.

Remember we will meet every Wednesday evenng at 8:30 o'clock for the prayer services at the church until revival services begin. Brother Williams has promised to be with us and bring some good speaker with him. He is also working hard to find a visiting minister to help in the revival which will begin fourth Sunday in July.

The cemetery funds are beginning to come in now and if you are interested in this great project please send your offering to J. T. Sorrell, Verbena, Ala., or hand it to him some convenient time. We want to get it clean by revival time.

Remember we will be looking for you at Sunday School next Sunday Please do not disappoint us.

NEWS FROM ARCHER'S CHAPEL

Rev. Wiley Davis will preach at Archer's Chapel this week end.

MRS. J. W. KEMP RETURNS TO CLANTON

Friends and relatves of Mrs. J. W Kemp will be interested to know of her recent return to Clanton. Mrs Kemp is now a resident guest at the Thomason Hotel.

When interviewed, Mrs. Kemp stated that she left Clanton forty years agi with her husband, J. W Kemp, since deceased.

"I hardly know the place," she said "But I still feel as if I'd come home.

"For many years." she continued "I traveled all over the country with Mr. Kemp, and our children. That was some job because the children were small. Then we settled down in Birmingham.

Other yuests at the hotel take great delight in her witty accounts of her interesting life and of the associations she has made.

"Clanton was mp home for thirty years," said the seventy-year old lady. "I guess it will be for another thirty."

Free the Seas

Before we win the final battle with Hitler's Nazis all navy men are agreed we must win the battle of the Atlantic; that is to free the sea lanes of the German U-boats.

A year ago we were building 54 cruisers and nearly 200 destroyers or just about enough for a two ocean navy.

Now we have come to realize that this war is to the finish, "winner take all," and our Government is building a five ocean navy.

That is why we are being asked to increase our subscriptions for War Bonds. That is why we must do it.

When Pearl Harbor burst upon us our great expanse of territory was protected by a one ocean navy of about 350 first line ships with an addition of an approximate number building.

Now we are in a five ocean war and we are required not only to pay for the building of enough ships of the line but also for hundreds of Liberty ships and auxiliary craft. The amount of money you invested in War Bonds when we had a one ocean navy was all right then, it isn't enough now. Buy more and more War Bonds.

FUTURE FARMERS GONE TO WAR

Future Farmers of Alabama have really gone to war; records for the year are not yet complete, but enough final reports are in to show Alabama F. F. A. Chapters are practicing what they preach in doing their part in the all-out war effort.

FFA Chapters have bought more than $5,000 in war bonds in the name of their chapters. Add to these the $50,000 in war bonds bought during the year. Figures available also reveal that Alabama FFA Chapters have been in the "scrap" back home They have collected over 1400 tons of scrap metal, in addition to their regular supervised farming program including over 3,000 victory gardens Their shop programs at vocational shops have included more than 5000 pieces of farm machinery repaired. FFA is on the battle front as well as on the home front. FFA members in the armed services include 547 active and 3,157 associate members, making a total of 3,704.

It is expected that the Final Report of Year's Activities will reveal a wel rounded war time program by Alabama Future Farmers.

Isabella FFA chapter members have done their part in this statewide FFA Wartime Program as revealed in the above figures. The Chapter has bought $50 in war bonds Individual members have purchased over $700.00 worth, bringing war bonds bought by local chapter and FFA members this year to over $750 Scrap collections by Isabella FFA have included 13,080 lbs. of metal 1,170 lbs. of rubber some paper and rags. Other wartime activities of Isabella Chapter are increasing number and scope of home gardens, livestock and field crops.

Will Travel Rationing Become Necessary ?

In conformity with the wishes of the Office of Defense Transportation —an authorized Government agency with which the L. & N. is fully co-operating in the handling of war-time transportation problems—the Louisville and Nashville Railroad urges passengers to refrain from non-essentia travel, The need for this restriction grows out of the necessity of odating essential travel, and the present crowded condition of tra

WHAT IS NON-ESSENTIAL TRAVEL?

The following trips are defined as non-essential:

Visiting friends in other cities.

Going home for the week-end.

Those of a sightseeing nature.

Any trips merely for social or pleasure purposes, including thos lo attending conventions, class reunions, etc.

Attending sporting or athletic events.

The railroads today are carrying nearly four times the passenge traffic they did in 1939, with practically the same amount of equipment One-half of all available Pullman cars and one-third the number o coaches are being used now for transporting military personnel in cars or special trains.

VACATION TRIPS

It is desirable, first, that vacations be spent at, or as near, home a pos sible. However, where journeys are involved, observance of the foll would be helpful:

Spread vacation periods over the whole year, instead of the usual con centration during June, July and August.

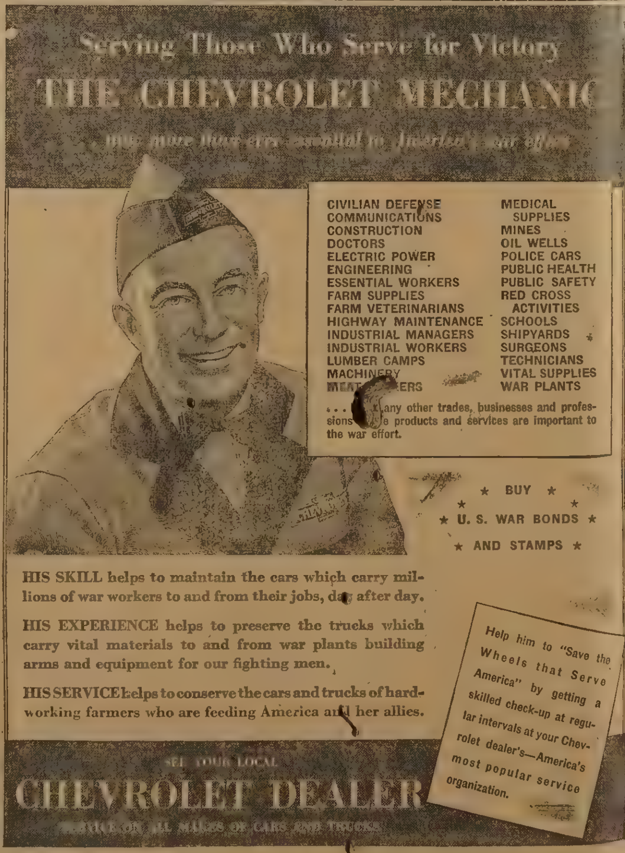
Commence and terminate vacations on Tuesdays, Wednesdays o Thursdays (relatively light travel days).

Vacation trips should, in no circumstances, involve travel during holi day periods.

Take entire vacation at one time instead of splittin into several shorter periods, involving perhaps more than one trip

Essential war needs prevent the construction of additional pas train equipment. Travelers must be prepared to encounter delay rivals and crowded conditions of the trains, and a lack of some of the usual travel comforts.

L&N LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROA



HIS SKILL helps to maintain the cars which carry millions of war workers to and from their jobs, day after day.

HIS EXPERIENCE helps to preserve the trucks which carry vital materials to and from war plants building arms and equipment for our fighting men.

Dates Named For Typhoid Fever Clinics in County

With the beginning of warm weather it is again time to think of typhoid fever. It is widely distributed throughout all parts of the world especially in temperate climates. We know that it is caused by a germ called the typhoid bacillus. Improper sewage disposal and contamiated water supply are two special conditions favoring the distribution of the bacilli Filth, over crowding, and bad ventilation ard accessories in lowering the resistance of the individuals exposed, while from an infected person the disease may be spread by the "4 F's", fingers, food, flies and filth.

For mass reduction in typhoid fever the degree of success obtained has been through innoculation with typhoid vaccine.

Th eannual typhoid clinics will begin June 21. Since it has been several years since there has been any large scale "giving of shots" by the Health Department in Chilton County a large numer of persons should receive the immunization this summer. It is our plan to hold forty clinics over the county. Three visits to each clinic will be made by the health officer or the nurse. All persons having had the vaccine within one year will need only one "shot" this year Immunity conferred by typhoid vaccine lasts only two years, but by taking three innoculations, and following with one yearly, one's immunity may be retained.

In addition to the typhoid vaccination, diphtheria toxoid and small pox vaccine will be offered. It is especially urged that infants above the age of six months and under six years of age be immuized against diphtheria.

Besides the clinics to be held in the county a weekly session will be held each Saturday from 9 a. m. to 12:00 noon at the healtr office in Clanton.

A partial schedule for the county is as follows:

Monday, June 21—Lomax and Jackson's Chapel—at Jacksons Chapel school 8:30 a. m.

Pine Dale—at Pine Dale school 10:00 a. m.; Cane Creek, at Cand Creek school 11:30 a. m. Mullins, at Mullins school 1:00 p. m. Lay Dam and Macedonia (beat 1) at Lay Dam school 2:30.

Tuesday, June 22—Collins Chapel New Salem, and Robinson Springs, at Collins Chapel Store, 8:30 a. m.

Mineral Springs at Mineral Springs Church 10:00 a. m., Union Grove at school 11:30 a. m. Smith school and Archers Chapel at Smith School, 1:00 p. m., Oak Grove and Rocky Mt. at Oak Hill church 2:30 p. m.

Wednesday, June 23—Mt. Pleasant at scrool 8:30 a. m.

Thorsby, Maynard Chapel, Cedar Grove, and Pates Chapel at Thorsby Grammar School 10:00 a. m. Pleasant Grove at school 11:30 a. m.

Freeman and Free Springs, at Freeman school 1:00 p. m., Mars Hill, at church 2:30 p. m.

Thursday, June 24— Providence (beat 13) at Church, 9:00 a. m.

Concord (beat 13) at abandoned school, 10:30 a. m.

Minooka, at Merrill's Store 2:00 p. m.

Oak Grove at school, 2:30 p. m.

Friday, June 25—Jemison and Center Hill at Jemison Clinic 9:00 a. m Maplesville, at Maplesville, Clinic 8:30 p. m.

Saturday, June 26— Clanton, Friendship, Walnut Creek, Thomas Jr., S. Clanton, Mill Village, Samaria Temple at Clanton, Health Office 9:00 a. m. to 11:00 a. m.

The schedule for the remainder of centers in the county will be publisred after the above clinics have been completed.

HORSE SHOW TO HAVE CHILDREN'S CLASS

Boys and girls of Chilton County start grooming that horse of yours for the Chilton County Horse Show that will be held at the High School grounds in August. There will be a children's class show for boys and girls with no outside competition and with plenty of prizes and ribbons and the like.

Start practicing your riding and horsemanship if you want to win one of those prizes and have a lot of fun doing it. There are a lot of good horsemen in Chilton County among the children we have noticed, so we don't think that it will be a walk away for anyone. Get your entry blanks now and join in making the show a big success. Age limit on the Childrens class is 16 years.

CONTROL COTTON INSECTS

Cotton is too important and too valuable for insects to feed on this year. Both cotton and cotton seed and their products are vital war needs used in countless ways every day.

But insects will eat a lot of it unless they are controlled. Let's follow our County Agent's advice and adopt the slogan:

"Not One Pound Of Cotton For Insects i n1943."

Diligent and intelligent use of poison is the best way to control cotton insects, boll weevils, flea hoppers, cotton aphids, boll worms, and leaf worms.

We consider the small cash outlay necessary for cotton poisoning a very good investment. Any worthy person should be able to finance this operation.

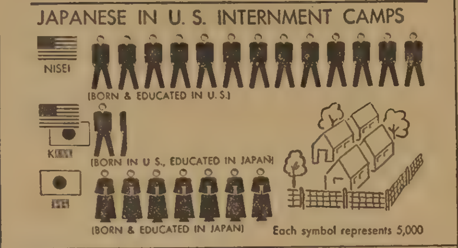
FDR: Retaliation if Axis Uses Gas; Allied Confidence Rises as Air-Sea Forces Pound Mediterranean Islands; Heavier Taxes Will Fight Inflation

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

TELEFACT



EUROPE:
'Mellow Light'

Even as Prime Minister Winston Churchill had declared that the "mellow light of victory" was already playing on the Allies, the Axis had been tensely alert for the long-promised invasion of Europe.

Axis communiques had early reported attempted Allied landings on "stepping stone" islands between Africa and Italy. First of these was the Rome and Berlin radio reports of a Commando movement on the tiny island of Lampedusa, bordering the Tunisian coast. Then came the Rome communique announcing that the garrison defending beleaguered Pantelleria had been called on to surrender by Allied forces. Pantelleria had experienced a pounding such as even Malta had not suffered, for here the devastating Allied bomb onslaughts from the air had been accompanied by withering bombardment of Italian positions by unopposed Allied naval forces.

Never before during the war had Prime Minister Churchill spoken so confidently as during his report to parliament concerning the European situation in which he described the amphibious operations of a "peculiar complexity" against the enemy. Concerning the Allied air offensive which observers had termed the actual first phase of the invasion, he declared that nothing will turn the Allies from their intention of accomplishing "the complete destruction of our foes by bombing from the air, in addition to all other means."

TAXES:
New Levies Ahead

With the pay-as-you-go bill now operative under presidential approval, congressional leaders began consideration of additional tax sources to meet the administration's request that new tax measures be undertaken as a means of closing the inflationary gap caused by the nation's tremendous purchasing power.

While President Roosevelt had left up to congress the type of new taxes to be adopted before summer recess, he expressed his opposition to a general sales tax on the grounds that it would impose too heavy a burden on the poorer people. While a compulsory savings plan is not necessary now, the President indicated that ultimately a combination of enforced savings and taxes would be required to meet his original budget request for $16,000,000,000 in new revenue for fiscal 1944.

The Federal Reserve board recently estimated excess purchasing power at $35,000,000,000.

SUBSIDIES:
Grange Head Demurs

Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, predicted that if the government employs subsidy payments to roll back food prices, "the nation is headed directly for inflation and inevitable chaos."

The farm leader added that in his belief, a system of price controls by subsidy would lead to a food shortage for America and her allies.

Testifying before a senate agricultural subcommittee, the Grange master predicted that a 10 per cent roll back in the retail prices of butter and meats, already ordered, would discourage production. "There are indications already," he said, "that the butter and milk output are being reduced substantially." Mr. Goss contended that instead of the present price control system as a control of inflation, an effort should be made to bring supply and demand into balance.

GAS:
FDR Warns Axis

President Roosevelt served blunt notice on the Axis that the use of poison gas against any one of the United Nations would result in swift and full retaliation by the United States with "terrible consequences" to enemy munitions centers, seaports and other military objectives.

This was the third time in 12 months the President had warned the Axis that the use of gas would be a fatal boomerang. He said evidence was "being reported with increasing frequency from a variety of sources" that the enemy powers were making "significant preparations" indicative of an intention to use poisonous or noxious gases.

Observers who noted that the President's warning was similar in character to one issued by the British government recently, believed he had both Germany and Japan in mind.

RUSSIA:
Tactics in Reverse

Using tactics in which the Allies had given them bitter lessons in Western Europe, the Nazis employed their waning air force in massed bombing attacks against Russian armament factories.

Typical of this effort were the attempts to wreck the giant Gorki works, 250 miles east of Moscow. While German and Soviet communiques differed on the extent of the damage, both agreed that the attacks were of a ferocious nature. Moscow radio admitted that casualties and some damage were caused, but maintained that German reports were grossly exaggerated.

Retaliatory raids were made on a big scale by Russian bombers which attacked the Unecha junction on the Bryansk-Gomel railroad, blowing up munitions dumps and fuel stores.

Meanwhile in the midst of counter claims about opposing losses in the Caucasus, a German transocean agency broadcast predicted a big scale Russian attack on Novorossisk.

TIGHTER BELTS:
Forecast for '44

Somber warning that American civilians may have to tighten their belts in 1944 was sounded by the bureau of economics of the U. S. department of agriculture.

The bureau in a review of the current situation said that while there are enough rationed foods on hand, together with expected production to maintain present eating levels for the remainder of 1943, the outlook for 1944 may not be so favorable.

The review stated that vegetable production is running about 13 per cent below last year; that early freezes have cut crops of apricots, cherries, peaches, plums and prunes materially below 1942. Supplies of eggs next fall and winter "will be considerably below current levels," the review added, while livestock may be adversely affected.

DRIVING BAN:
For All U. S.?

Extension to the entire nation of the pleasure driving ban and other restrictions on motoring in 12 eastern states was predicted by Maj. Jubal R. Parten, transportation director in the petroleum administration.

Specifically, Major Parten said that the petroleum administration had been considering for some time the advisability of halting pleasure driving in Middle Western states and that such action for the entire nation may be looked for soon.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

DIVIDENDS: Cash dividend payments to corporation stockholders amounted to $292,000,000 in April, or $21,000,000 less than in the corresponding month of 1942.

NAVY: A naval appropriations bill totaling $24,850,427,198 for the fiscal year 1944 was passed by the senate and sent to conference with the house.

LIVING COSTS: The cost of living for wage earners rose about 1 per cent in 60 out of 62 cities surveyed by the National Industrial conference board during April.

SHIPPING: A record-breaking peace time merchant fleet of 15 to 20 million tons under the American flag was visualized by Adm. Emory S. Land.

ARGENTINA:
Neutral for Present

The kaleidoscopic revolt in Argentina that had produced two new presidents in almost as many days had not shown the same speedy results with respect to the abolition of Argentina's policy of neutrality toward the Axis.

This latter was evident when the government of President Pedro Ramirez was pledged to an international policy of "neutrality for the present" and "loyal co-operation with nations of the Americas in conformance with existing pacts."

The Ramirez regime succeeded the brief provisional government of Gen. Arturo Rawson, who resigned after ousting isolationist President Ramon S. Castillo in an army-supported revolution.

Scanning the new government's personnel for possible clues as to future international policy, observers noted that President Ramirez's new cabinet included eight military men to only one civilian.

PACIFIC:
U. S. Airmen Strike

Allied airmen continued to strike heavy blows at Jap positions from the Aleutians clear across the Pacific to Central China.

Kiska was again the target of the Aleutians assault, with Allied Liberators and Vega Venturas joining in the battering drive against this last enemy outpost in the archipelago. Over in the Solomons, Choiseul island and the Munda air bases were attacked by American planes. In New Guinea, Allied attack planes supporting ground forces in the Mubo area strafed enemy positions on strategic Green's Hill.

American and Chinese air superiority in the middle Yangtse valley continued to be manifest, as fliers from both forces swept over the Hupeh-Hunan battle area without meeting opposition.

FATHERS:
Work or Fight Mixup

A misunderstanding over the details of the War Manpower commission's "work or fight" edict had been responsible for the induction of some fathers into military service in violation of draft regulations, WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt revealed.

Mr. McNutt pointed out that the "work or fight" order had directed that fathers and others of draft age with dependents be inducted if they were employed in any of the 70 "nondeferable" occupations listed by the War Manpower commission. Selective service regulations prohibit the drafting of fathers not in deferable jobs.

PLEDGE:
'Exploitation's End'

A world freed from international exploitation was listed by President Roosevelt as one of the postwar objectives of the United Nations.

The President declared that better use of human and natural resources must be assured in the postwar world if living standards are raised, continuing, "and I may add—the better use of these resources without exploitation by any nation."

Speaking to delegates from the recent United Nations Food conference, Mr. Roosevelt summed up "our ultimate objective" in this manner:

"It is to build for ourselves—meaning all men, everywhere—a world in which each individual human being shall have the opportunity to live out his life in peace; to work productively, earning at least enough for his actual needs and those of his family; to associate with the friends of his choice; to think and worship freely; and to die secure in the knowledge that his children, and their children shall have the same opportunities."

SLAUGHTER:
Nazis Massacre Dutch

Out of tightly censored Holland came news of fresh Nazi atrocities. These latest reports concerned the killing of thousands of Dutch citizens in mass executions following a general strike that had halted all activity for nearly a week. They were made public by the Office of War Information.

Allied sources learned that the strike had started when Nazi authorities announced that all members of the former Dutch army paroled in 1940 would be sent to Germany to work in Nazi war factories. Within half an hour, reports said, factories, shops, public offices and even courts stopped. Within a few hours public services and transportation ceased to function.

Ruthless executions then were undertaken by the Germans. Bodies of the slain Dutch patriots were left where they fell in public squares and outside cities. Work resumption was eventually ordered by "Good Patriots" in order to avoid further slaughter.

AIR FREIGHT:
Plans for Future

Prophetic of the future, the civil aeronautics board received a request for a charter for a vast network of aerial freight lines serving the United States and many foreign countries.

The petitioner, the Keeshin Air Freight company, asked authority to serve 200 major cities in this country as well as many points in foreign countries through an exchange of freight at 18 "gateways."

He's Getting to Be More and More Like Daniel Boone

NEW YORK.—Now here, now there, old friends put their brushes to the still incomplete picture of Brigadier Orde Charles Wingate who came out of Burma's jungles with a thin fringe of silky whiskers and a belt full of Jap scalps. He is related to Lawrence of Arabia. Certainly his three-months long commando raid was the only taste of victory that the British enjoyed in their newest try for the eastern shore of the Bay of Bengal.

Before this war Wingate was deft, politic in handling Arab-Jewish mixups in Palestine. In 1940 he flew to Abyssinia and steamed up the natives against their Roman overlords. The force he mustered finished off 40,000 Italians and when prim, trim Haile Selassie returned in triumph to Addis Ababa, Wingate rode beside him on a white charger.

General Wavell, commander-in-chief for Burma, himself called Wingate there and then stood clear while the 39-year-old brigadier trained stolid men of Lancashire, tough little Gurkas and loyal Burmese into the jungle commando which wrecked airfield, blasted ammunition dumps and bridges and cut railroads behind the Japanese lines.

Wingate's marriage was a sort of commando raid in reverse. Lana Paterson, pretty and 15, sighted him on a Mediterranean liner when he was 30. She announced on the dot that he was the man she would marry. They were married when she was 17.

After Office Hours He Laid Rules for Us Buying Victuals

PLAIN FRANK BANE is a rationing expert. The system on which the people of these still well-fed United States buy victuals is one he worked out along with Leon Henderson and a few other high-flying experimenters. But Bane, they say, was the hardest worker.

It was work that he did after office hours because he had, still has, one full-time job. He is director of the Council of State Governments, headquartering in Chicago, and, according to Governor Stassen of Minnesota, is the best administrator in the country.

Administrator Bane's story is that he earned Stassen's praise by doing next to nothing. He delegates all assignments and sits back until the hired hands drop in to say the job is cleaned up. This system gives him plenty of time for story-telling which he likes, and for rocking chairs, one of which he demands in any home his wife sets up. His stories, his rocking chairs, help explain why every new acquaintance, along about the second meeting, drops all handles and calls him Frank.

Fifty now, he has been married for 25 years. He was born in Virginia, went to Randolph-Macon college and Columbia university and served in the last war as a cadet-pilot before he buckled down. Prior to landing with the Council of State Governments he was a football coach, a school principal and superintendent and took a whirl at welfare work.

Most Optimistic Of Air Offensive Against Germany

THE Rt. Hon. Sir Archibald Sinclair's paternal grandfather was a blinking old codger out of Dickens by Poe who saw calamity in every cobblestone and lived fearfully on herring and hominy for all that he was a baronet.

The maternal grandfather, however, was an American who piled up much of the wealth Sir Archibald now enjoys, and his spirit must be the one that moves the British secretary of state for air to speak so hopefully of the air offensive against Germany.

Sir Archibald's mother was pretty Mabel Sands of New York. She went to London in the eighties with letters of introduction from the Vanderbilts, her kinfolk; married, and died when her son was eight days old. Her husband died, too, and young Archibald was raised by relatives, tutors and guardians, all watched sourly by the herring grandfather. He was educated at Eton and Sandhurst, decorated in the last war, then turned to politics.

Sir Archibald is 53 years old now. He has two sons and two daughters of his own, and there are close to 100,000 acres around Thurso castle. For more than 21 years he has been in parliament and for many of those years he has been leader of the Scottish Liberal party. He has had his present post since the desperate summer of 1940.

More than one full month has passed since the big Allied planes stepped up their sweeps over Germany. Pilsen and Mannheim are still carting off their rubble while Dortmund and Dusseldorf smoulder.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. The battle for the Philippines was nearly over when the Japs invaded Cebu. Separated from his squadron, Lieut. Kelly had spent the night at the home of an American civilian. When the Japs began their invasion he fought his way back to the dock where Lieut. Bulkeley's boat was tied to learn that he had been reported dead.

CHAPTER XV

"After Cebu fell," explained Cox, "an army aviator arrived—he'd left Cebu that morning. He said he'd talked to a Catholic priest who had said burial mass over you and another sailor, killed in an engagement."

"And I was very glad to hear it," said Kelly. "Because then I knew that Harris and Reynolds had gotten decent burial at the American cemetery in Cebu before the Japs arrived. But then I asked, 'Where's Bulkeley?' You see, the last I saw of him he was tearing around the other side of that Japanese cruiser, trying to draw its fire away from me, so I could get in to polish it off. I thought they'd probably got him. I heard he'd turned up later in Mindanao, but it was just a rumor."

"What actually happened was this," said Bulkeley. "They didn't get me, but three destroyers chased me until dawn, when I pulled away into shallow water, and we tied up under a pier to get some sleep—as I think I said.

"When night came I went on up to Iligan, where I intended to get gas and go on up to Cebu to see what had happened to Kelly, although I was pretty sure he hadn't got out alive. But at Iligan I was met by a radioed order from Wainwright; there were no more torpedoes for the MTB's, so he couldn't let us have any gas. They were needing it all for the planes out to Australia.

"So there we were—stuck at Iligan. I went on over to headquarters at Del Monte to report the battle with the cruiser to General Sharp—certain that the end was before us on the island. We'd be fighting here on Mindanao with rifles to the end. But that morning—it was April 13—General Sharp called me in to say he'd just got orders from Melbourne that I was ordered to report to MacArthur immediately on the plane leaving Del Monte that night. For a while I felt rotten.

"Then I figured it another way. If I could get to Australia, I might be able to persuade MacArthur to bring out the rest of the squadron. It looked like it was their only chance. 'I'm going to try to get out all your officers and key men,' he had said. 'I'm not going to let you die in a fox hole with a rifle.' I knew he had believed the MTB's had a great future in the war.

"So I sent word to the rest I would get them flown out if possible, and got aboard the bomber that night. As we left the field, the Japs divebombed it and put one motor out, but we got through."

"He left me in charge," said Akers, "and presently General Sharp sent me up to Lake Lanao in the middle of Mindanao Island on a peculiar mission. They were afraid the Japs might land seaplanes on it and I was to set up defenses there. I was to teach the army how to run the machine guns."

"Cox told me Bulkeley had gone home," said Kelly, "and, thinking I was dead, had made him squadron commander. And I didn't know what to do. There I was—no crew, no boat, no job, while they were busy dismantling the 41 boat, to take it up to Lake Lanao and end the war fighting with the Moros. So I decided I'd better get up to Del Monte and report to Sharp so he could tell Bulkeley I was alive, and send in my report by radio to the States on the scrap with the cruiser and what happened to my boat.

"The General was amazed to see me. 'Bulkeley said you'd been killed in action,' he said. He listened to my report on the battle. 'I'll send you to Kalasungay,' he said, 'near the airfield where the planes come in. But I warn you, there's not too much hope of getting out. There's almost no more gas to refuel the planes at this end, so I doubt that they'll send any more.' I said I was sure we were getting out—MacArthur had told Bulkeley he would do it if it was humanly possible.

"The town was forty-five miles away, and I reported to the army colonel there at noon. He asked me why I was here. 'Waiting transportation to Australia,' I said.

"'No use getting your hopes up,' he said. 'And since I've had no instructions, I assume you're here on a duty status and am going to put you to work.'

"'That's okay,' I said, 'if I don't have to leave the vicinity.'

"'I can't even guarantee that,' he said. "I'm organizing a carabao pack train to Lake Lanao. They're cutting the trail now. I have another man rounding up fifty carabao and drivers. When he gets them, you'll be in charge of leading the pack train.'

"I didn't say much. I figured he and I were in for a showdown. I didn't intend to miss a plane being off herding a bunch of milk cows through a jungle, but I thought there was no use being unreasonable now. After all, fifty carabao was a lot to round up. It would take several days.

"Back at the quarters I found an old navy captain who'd arrived the day before—used to be in charge of the industrial department at Cavite. He listened to my story, and MacArthur's promise, and then said, 'The way it looks, I don't think I'm getting out.' Then he talked about the thirty years he'd spent in the navy, all of them training so he would be useful in case of war, and you could see it was discouraging for him to end like this—apparently forgotten by the country he had wanted to serve. What had his life been for?

"On the night of April 22 my hopes were down. I was fiddling with the radio and cut in on a news broadcast from the States—a short-wave station in San Francisco. It was the navy news release on our fight with the cruiser!

"'Tell him the end here is drawing near.'"

"I went to bed sick as the silky-voiced commentator again repeated his account of our victory, when all out here knew we had only expended ourselves in the hope that it might slow down a Japanese victory, and we had failed even in this.

"Next morning the army colonel sent for me. He'd had a plane-less aviator hard at work who had collected thirty-nine of the fifty carabao. Soon the others would be here, so I was to start work today—a trail-blazing expedition to inspect the jungle path up to Lake Lanao. But suppose a plane came while I was away? I didn't even bring it up; it seemed so hopeless now. I went back to my quarters and had just packed to go when the phone rang. I was to report to General Sharp at the landing field at once, and bring everything I had with me.

"It was grim waiting at the airport. The priority list was made up in Melbourne and each man had a number. A plane would not hold more than thirty, they knew, but more than a hundred were waiting there. Because perhaps two, maybe even three, planes might come. Or perhaps someone whose name was called would not show up, and your number might be high enough on the list to claim his seat. So they waited—all young technicians, most of them aviators, for this last chance to get out, so they could fight again. General Sharp had told me he had telephoned Cox and Akers that they were on tonight's list; why weren't they here?

"At 10:30 the list was called—thirty names, mine and theirs among them, but only I answered present. So they put an army tank major and an air-corps captain in as substitutes, if they failed to arrive. But at 10:35 here they came on the run, so the captain and the major were turned aside. They were to go on the next plane—if there was a next.

"Just before we got aboard, General Sharp came over to tell me good-by. He is a grand old man, all six feet of him, a commanding person and every inch a soldier, as his father and grandfather were before him.

"He said this was probably the last plane out, and he wanted me to take a message to MacArthur. 'Tell him the end here is drawing near, and if help can't be sent, in a few days Mindanao will fall. Of course, probably he understands this, and maybe nothing can be done.'

"Then he talked about us. 'Everybody left here in the islands should realize,' he said, 'that those who are called to Australia are the ones who will be most useful for the work ahead. Those who leave are the men for the job, regardless of rank and years of service. The rest of us,' he said, 'consider ourselves as being expendable, which is something that may come to any soldier. We are ready for it, and I think they will see that we will meet it squarely when it comes.'

"Then they called my name, we shook hands, and I climbed aboard. Each of us who were leaving unstrapped our 45's and handed them out through the plane's windows to the fellows who were staying behind. They'd be needing them badly and we wouldn't."

"And Peggy?" someone asked.

"There were three seaplanes sent out from Australia to Corregidor at the very last," said Kelly, "which, among other people, were to bring out the nurses. One of them was shot down off Corregidor, but the other two loaded and got back to Lake Lanao, where they gassed up for the big homeward hop while Sharp held the Japs back from the lake. One of these two got safely away; the plane Peggy was in cracked up on the take-off. So now we won't ever know.

"But as our big ferry-command bomber swung wide out over the field after the take-off, you could see the island and then the path of moonlight glistening over the water, just as we used to watch it glisten from the tunnel entrance at Corregidor. And suddenly I remembered the last thing she said to me—her voice was just as clear as if it had been two seconds ago, instead of many weeks, over that signal-corps telephone in the army hut on Bataan, after I had told her this was good-by. 'Well,' she said, 'it's been awfully nice, hasn't it?' And her voice had sounded clear and brave, but seemed to come from far away."

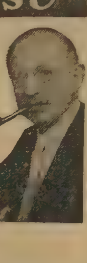
Victory Inevitable Despite Deadly, Undefeated Foe



Optimistic Americans Fail to Realize Enemy's Strength in Experienced Men, Naval Forces and Air Power.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

"But, General . . ."

The other day I said that after a long and enlightening talk by a high army officer who was patiently and painfully trying to show us why, despite the recent victories of the Allies, we still had a formidable enemy to meet, a dangerous, deadly and undefeated enemy. Victory, of course, is certain (eventually) but serious reverses, setbacks and sacrifices are still before us, he had said.

I believe my own exclamation, "but, general" is typical of some of those "buts" which have arisen in your minds.

America is the super-duper land of inventive genius, business genius, organizing genius, mass production, high standard of living, assembly line, giant industry, efficiency, wealth, central heating, apple pie and unlimited opportunity. True, we got our first real drubbing at Pearl Harbor but we came back; the British were licked at Singapore, too, but they won the battle of Britain. Latterly, we collaborated in the smashing victory of Tunisia . . . the Russians beat 'em at Stalingrad, the Chinese have held 'em off for what seems a lifetime. Why, then . . .?

The general looked a little weary but he went on politely—I can't quote all he said but will give you the parts the OWI says is "okeh."

"The enemy has the biggest, most effective fighting force in history."

Biggest? But America and Russia . . . and Australia?

Armed Strength

Figures (U. S. Army official): The enemy still has 17 million men under arms. The German soldiers and their satellites, some a little ragged, still total 17 million trained men. The Japs have at least three million in uniform. These (the good and the bad) combine to make "the biggest most effective fighting mass ever assembled in history." Remember, the enemy has been years building this force, and the civilians in these militaristic countries have sacrificed all the things necessary—things we wouldn't even think of rationing, including liberty and decency.

In cold numbers, the enemy still outnumbers us in land forces.

And even today, after Midway, Guadalcanal, Attu, Tunisia, Stalingrad, and the bombings, the enemy is still well equipped, well trained, well co-ordinated, can operate under adverse conditions and in the face of terrific hardships which our troops are just now beginning to master.

That is a brief sum up of the enemy land forces from a military man's point of view.

As to the enemy naval forces.

The Germans have, though you may not have realized from recent news, a small but highly specialized navy still afloat, plus the sub!

The submarine is still the biggest Allied problem. Submarines are tough animals now. Our own are tough enough and these animals are the German specialty. Depth bombs have to go deep to do any more than break the glass in the shaving mirrors and instrument faces. Even in the last war, it took a lot of depth bombs to get one sub. Now the subs can crash dive, shiver and rise to fight back . . . and fight back they can! They are mounted with guns, they can stand up to an escort ship, at least a corvette, and it takes a destroyer or a fast cruiser to catch them even when they stay on the surface where they can return fire. The small stuff (30 caliber) bounces off their scales.

Japan's Navy

The surface ships which Germany has are not so much of a factor. But Japan's navy is still to be reckoned with. It is not destroyed but it has to be before we can achieve victory in the Pacific. Just taking islands won't do the job—and see how long it took to take an island, first Guadalcanal; now (almost at this writing) Attu.

Airforce: America now leads the world. But remember Germany was the first to build a supreme "luftwaffe" and that luftwaffe and the men who made it are not all dead yet. Japan's vaunted Zeros which could outmaneuver us because of their lightness, it is true, exploded at one shot. They have been improved. Germany has improved a number of her models, too. She is holding back many for defense.

The enemy army, as a whole, is better trained by experience than our men. But those of our men who have had equal training and experience are as good or better, man for man, although not yet perhaps, officer for officer. Remember, Germany and Japan bred an officer class. We trained a few professional officers, limited their prestige, resources and opportunity. The majority of our officers in wartime come from civilian life. They are good, when they get the training and the experience.

As to the fighting man. Well, we've stood up to Hitler's finest in Africa at bayonet's length—we've beaten the crawling Jap at his own game, jungle fighting.

Long Range View

But still we have those odds which I (or rather the general) mentioned when we look at the long range vista. They are the things which the general brought up in answer to the "buts"—I'll name the "buts" in a second. The point is he showed me why it can't be done tomorrow—why we civilians have to be patient. He showed me what we have to do before we get over that "ridge."

After tomorrow, we can consider:

The enemy hasn't the initiative the Americans and British have. When things don't go according to plan, they are likely to "bust." We won't.

The enemy has had its best men in the army a long time—its replacements are not as good as ours will be.

Much of the enemy-held territory has a hostile population which will work with the Allies against the enemy when we move in.

Japan and Germany will fail on critical materials before we will—we can beat them at their own game of "ersatz," too; witness synthetic rubber.

We can manufacture and build faster because we have more to do it with than they have. Our home front is farther away from the battle front—and it is more in sympathy with the government, despite political difficulties.

But remember the "buts."

War Stimulates Changes in Education

One of the many changes which the war has stimulated is the change in education. Education is going to count more after the war. Many boys will come back partially trained in trades and professions which they can follow if they have the additional theoretical and practical instruction necessary to arm them for the stiff competition which is expected.

As a result, college entrance examination requirements will be greatly altered for many of these men will lack the traditional prerequisites. Reform in this field is one of the 11 major objectives, discussed in a report of the commission on liberal education of the Association of American Colleges.

"If an educational program is to be of genuine service to the men and women of the post-war world," the report of the college committee says, "it must perform two functions simultaneously. It must take them as they are and appeal to their immediate desires and special needs, and it must provide for their common and enduring needs in a post-war society."

It will be recalled that the boom after the last war created the coonskin collegian and the flapper coed. The word "collegiate" had a meaning then which took it far afield from the cloister of learning. The crop of students—veterans—will be more serious. They must be taken more seriously. They must have aptitude and achievement tests rather than book-learning examinations; there must be more individualized instruction, more tutorial and seminar methods, special attention must be given to co-ordinated instruction that will aid in the transition from army or industrial life to peacetime community and family relations and the responsibilities of citizenship.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Foods are "home canned" says OPA if: (1) they have been canned in a kitchen primarily used for the preparation of meals or to demonstrate the preparation of meals; (2) they have been canned in a separate building or shed which a farm house has equipped for canning purposes, if the owner has obtained permission from his local ration board to use such facilities.

Swedish Foreign Minister Christian E. Guenther, declaring that "no neutral power can maintain an absolute balance between warring camps" told an audience at Eskilstuna that Sweden was making "concessions" to Germany "in a higher degree than to the western powers," the Swedish Hoerby radio said in a domestic broadcast reported to the Office of War Information.

Lesson Frugal Manager Taught Stuck With Driver

The works manager of a certain railway company had a reputation for meanness.

The pet bee in his bonnet was oil and waste. He was always driving home the fact that if every employee was careful with oil and cotton waste, much money would be saved.

One day he was having a few words with a very new driver.

"Tell me," he ordered, "what would you do if you were driving one day, and saw an express thundering towards you on the same line?"

The novice thought hard. Then:

"I'd grab the oilcan, I'd grab the waste—and I'd jump!"

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Payroll Savings Buys Comfort For Your Fighting Relatives

Not all of your payroll savings and other War Bond purchases are used for tanks, planes and gunpowder. A part of your investment goes for the comfort of your father, brother, son or friend.

Put your war bond buying through your payroll savings plan on a family basis to do the most effective job in providing for the care and safety of your men in the armed forces. Figure it out for yourself how much beyond 10 per cent of the aggregate income of your family you can put into war bonds above the cost of the necessities of life.

Remember a single $18.75 war bond will buy for a fighting soldier on the front: Two cotton undershirts at 44 cents; two pairs of cotton shorts at 76 cents; two pairs of cotton socks at 34 cents; one pair of shoes at $4.31; a cotton khaki shirt at $4.64; pair twill trousers at $4.16; one web waist belt at 23 cents; two cotton neckties at 44 cents; 2 khaki caps at $1.26 and one twill jacket at $2.16. Total $18.74.

An $18.75 war bond should make a marine comfortable for the night with a 23-pound mattress at $4.20; two blankets at $13.54; a pillow at 56 cents and two pillow cases at 30 cents. Total $18.60.

Or he could be provided with a rubber poncho at $4.77; a helmet with its lining and other items of its assembly at $5.62; a rifle cartridge belt at $2.15; a marine corps pack consisting of haversack, knapsack and suspenders at $5.10; a canteen and its cover at $1.05. Total $18.69.

Those of you who worry about the comfort of your boy in service can help insure his comfort by buying war bonds. And 10 years from now you'll take back $25 for every $18.75 you put in.

U. S. Treasury Department

Back the attack by upping your payroll savings your very next payday. Measure your savings by your new higher income.

Thirteen billion dollars—the sum the Treasury must raise in the Second War Loan drive is only one sixth of the estimated cost of the war for the fiscal year of 1943.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furished. A total of 16 Rural War Production Training Classes have been conducted in the Isabella High School area with a total enrollment of 289. Two additional courses in Automobile Mechanics are being taught at the time. These course have been taught by people with an actual background of experience in the field they have been giving instruction in and the classes have been under the supervision of Professor J. H. Camp, local teacher of vocational agriculture.

Courses have been taught in Increasing Pork Production, increasing poultry production, operation, care and repair of tractors, trucks, and automobiles, repair, operation and construction of farm machinery and equipment, woodworking, and production, conservation and processing of food for farm families.

The Rural War Production training program in Alabama is admisistered by the State Department of Education and all classes in Chilton County are under the direction of Superintendent D. P. Culp.

As [illegible] rch 1, 1943 a total of 1,938 rural w[illegible] production classes have been a[illegible] ed in Alabama. This total includes 79 auto mechanics classes, 39 metal work classes, 167 woodworking classes, 45 elementary electricity classes, [illegible]37 farm machinery repair classes and 1,171 community classes. These courses are open to anyone from 17 years of age up.

A STORY OF TWO BOYS

(And a Thought for Dads)

First Boy

I left my dad, his farm, his plow
Because my calf became his cow;
I left my dad—'twas wrong of course,
Because my colt became his horse.
I left my dad to sow and reap
Because my lamb became his sheep;
I dropped my hoe and stuck my fork
Because my pig became his pork;
The garden truck I made to grow
Was his to sell and mine to hoe.

Second Boy:

With dad and me it's half and half—
The cow I own was once our calf;
No town for me; I will not bolt,
Because my horse was once our colt.
I'm going to stick right where I am
Because my sheep was once our lamb.
I'll stay with dad—he gets my vote—
Because my hog was once our shoat.
It's fifty-fifty with dad and me—
A profit-sharing company.

Highway Patrol Will Install Radio Network

One of the largest radio networks in the nation is being installed for the Alabama State Highway Patrol, in a move designed to raise the patrol's wartime and peacetime efficiency to the highest possible level, it was announced today by Chief Van Buren Gilbert, director of the State Department of Public Safety.

A system of 12 two-way radio stations of the most modern type will be established, Chief Gilbert revealed, with a main station, served by a 400-foot tower, located near Montgomery, and stations of 250-watt or 50-watt power to be located atop Monte Sano, outside Huntsville; on the peak in Cheaha State Park; at East Lake, Birmingham; and in or near the following cities; Mobile, Demopolis, Dothan, Selma, Decatur, Gadsden, Florence and Opelika. It is hoped to put the Montgomery station in operation within 60 days.

"The system will cost approximately $100,000," said Chief Gilbert. "That will include the cost of installing two-way radio equipment in all highway patrol cars, only six of which now have two-way sets. When the project is completed, about Sept. 1, we will have a communication system blanketing the entire state and enabling the patrol to save considerably in time and mileage. Every patrol car in the state will be in constant touch with headquarters and subheadquarters. At present the patrol has no radio system of its own, but Selma, Mobile, Birmingham, Montgomery and Gadsden police radio stations handle messages within their range."

Highway patrolmen already are going to school, studying for the radio operators' licenses they must obtain from the Federal Communications Commission. The commission and the War Production Board granted the permits which make possible installation of the system.

In charge of the radio hookup will be Chief Radio Engineer Bert Ussery of Montgomery, who has been with the patrol since 1935, except for an 18-month period which he recently served with WSFA, Montgomery. Engineering offices will be located in the Memorial Hospital Bldg., but the chief dispatcher's office will be at patrol headquarters, in the State Highway Bldg. Assisting Mr. Ussery will be Patrolman George Bennett, veteran of the patrol's Birmingham office. Mrs. Pearl Brown, at present with the patrol's equipment division, will be Mr. Ussery's secretary. Remainder of the staff will be announced later.

AMERICAN LEGION TO MEET MONDAY NIGHT

CHILTON COUNTY STUDENTS ATTENDING ALA. COLLEGE

MONTEVALLO, June 21 — The following students from Chilton county are attending the 1943 summer school of Alabama College, the State College for Women.

Jerry Alred, Clanton; Dorothy Nell Blalock, Clanton; Tommy Ellen Conway, Jemison ;Ethel Edora Gentry, Mountain Creek; Mary F. Hardy, Clanton; Betty Boo Hollis, Mitchell Dam; Helen Elizabeth McGee, Maplesville; Julian Annette Merchant, Thorsby; Helen Evans Parris, Clanton; Jessie Erline Powell, Clanton; Ruth Frances Primm, Thorsby; Susie Sell Sexton, Maplesville; Howard Nell Smith, Maplesville; Virgil Nell Smith, Maplesville; Billie Jo Varde, Calera.

The summer school enrollment this year is larger than it has been before. Classification of the students places them generally in the following groups:

(1) High school girls who desire to speed up their graduation; (2) high school girls who need more training to qualify for civil service or other commercial positions; (3) high school graduates who desire to speed up college graduation by beginning college work this summer; (4) high school graduates who desire to qualify in the shortest possible time fo ra regular teaching certificate.

By means of its summer quarter Alabama College makes it possible for a young woman to finish any course in three regular nine-month sessions and three full summer sessions. Many high school graduates who have begun their college course at this term of summer school plan to continue through both the regular and summer sessions and gradate at the end of what normally would be their junion year.

INTERESTING PAPER FROM T. W. BRYAN

T. W. Bryan brought into the News office last week a very interesting paper. It is an excerpt from the official files of the State of Georgia and gives the army record of his father, the late Joseph D. Bryan. He died in 1908 at the age of 83 years.

Here is the copy:

Unpublished records compiled for the statd of Georgia by Lillian Henderson show that Joseph D. Bryan enlisted as a private in Company B. 49th Regiment Georgia Infantry March 4, 1862.

Appointed 1st Sergeant Jan. 1st, 1863.. Captured Gettysburg, Penn., July 3, 1863.

Released, Fort Deleware, Delewar, June 12, 1865.

STATE SPEEDING ARRESTS DURING MAY TOTAL 811

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Director Van Buren Gilbert, of the Public Safety Department reported Saturday that speeding arrests by the State Highway Patrol totaled 811 during May. For April there were 789; March 821; February, 392, and last May 516.

Time To Apply For New Gas Books

MONTGOMERY.— District OPA officials this week urged motorists and motorcycle owners to act promptly in mailing applications to their local ration boards for replacements of "A" and "D" gasoline books.

Current books —"A" for cars and "D" for motorcycles—expire July 21. Because issuance of replacement books involves considerable bookkeeping work, persons who delay executing and mailing the applications run the risk of being without gasoline coupons when the next ration period begins on July 22.

Application forms are available at all OPA tire inspection stations — meaning that most filling stations and tire shops have them for distribution to car owners.

The application calls for the owner's name, address, tire serial numbers and descriptive dada on the car, all of which can be obtained from the face of the current ration book and the tire inspection reord.

Once executed, the application must placed in an envelope and mailed to the ration board, along with (a) the signed back cover of the present "A" (or "D") book, and (b) the current tire inspection record.

OPA officials said tre back cover, which the applicant signs along the dotted line and tears from the current book, is an important part of the application, since it is evidence that the owner held a preperly issued ration and is entitled to a replacement.

PUBLIC ADVERTISING

The Bankhead bill is a dastardly measure," shouts William Allen White's Emporia Gazette about the bill authorizing the government to use paid advertising in the newspapers. Which shows how widely opinions can differ Senator Bankhead thinks the government ought to pay in coin of the realm for necessary space it uses in newspapers. But Mr. White thinks a newspaper would become subsidized by accepting such advertising from the government. The state of Alabama does a considerable amount of official advertising but we have never heard that Alabama newspapers have been thereby subsidized by Goat Hill and become recreant to their trust.—Alabama Journal.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Mediterranean Victories Prepare Way For New Allied Campaign Against Axis; Essential Production to Be Increased By Simplification of Consumer Items

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Under the watchful eyes of U. S. guards, Axis prisoners march in internment camp in Camp Atterbury, Ind. Since fighting in North Africa, many of these camps have sprung up throughout the country, the average concentration holding 2,000 prisoners and 500 American troops. Prisoners of war are treated under rules of an international convention.

MEDITERRANEAN:

Eyes Turn to Sicily

With Allied shipping reported massed in the Sicilian straits, all Italy awaited invasion.

Preparatory to the expected blow at the "underbelly of Europe," Allied airmen ranged over the Italian islands of Sardinia and Sicily, the Axis' remaining bastions in the Mediterranean following the fall of Pantelleria, Lampedusa, Lampione and Linosa.

Airfields at Catania and Gerbini in Sicily were attacked. At Catania, enemy fighters rose in force to challenge the Allied assault.

Although Allied headquarters remained silent on their military movements in the Mediterranean, the Nazis reported that their airmen were engaging in running fights with large convoys off North Africa. The Axis also stated that the Allies had massed invasion barges at Bizerte.

Meanwhile, the Allies kept the Axis guessing about their next move. Strong aerial formations attacked Axis shipping in the Aegean sea, where the Nazis have fortified the islands leading to the Grecian mainland.

SIMPLIFY GOODS:

From Cradle to Grave

In an effort to increase production of necessary essentials, the government has ordered the simplification of more than 1,000 manufactured items. Elimination of frills and variety of sizes is expected to result in enough conservation of material to add to production.

The simplification order will affect Americans from the cradle-to-the-grave. Metal will be restricted in baby's cribs, and the length, width and depth of coffins will be limited. Cast iron kitchen utensils will be confined to 12 items, and 40 styles of enamelware have been eliminated.

Wood furniture will be reduced to 24 basic patterns. Whereas 1,150 types of tools formerly were made, only 357 now will be permitted. Production of electric bulbs will be cut from 3,500 types to 1,700. Feminine apparel will be simplified along with children's sportswear and rayon dresses.

AIR OFFENSIVE:

Cities in Flames

Bremen's big Atlas shipyards were rocked by a dozen bomb hits as American airmen continued their joint attacks with the RAF over German industrial centers. Results of the U. S. raid on the submarine base of Kiel were unobserved, as swarms of Nazi fighter planes arose to the defense.

While the Americans hammered the Atlas works, strong British units, bolstered by huge four-engined bombers, ripped Duesseldorf and Bochum in the Ruhr.

Blockbusters caused heavy damage in both cities, sweeping fires adding to the havoc. Mass evacuations were reported, and the German radio asked people in other districts to make room for the refugees.

Size of the raiding fleets can be gleaned from the Nazi claim of having shot down 46 planes, 29 of which were supposed to be the four-engined machines. German aerial activity meanwhile was limited to a short, sharp sally over a London suburb, where bombs were dropped.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS:

World Cooperation

American participation in the establishment and maintenance of post-war peace was unanimously recommended by the house foreign affairs committee.

In a simple, 35-word resolution which it recommended to the house and senate for approval, the committee declared: ". . . Congress hereby express itself as favoring the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace, and as favoring participation by the United States therein."

Introduced by Representative J. W. Fulbright (Ark.), the resolution was passed after being stripped of the phrase calling for the organization of an international body to prevent future aggression, and to maintain law, order and lasting peace. Since this section touched on the highly controversial subject of an international police force, it was eliminated.

FOOD CZAR:

Wanted by Congress

Shortly after a bi-partisan group of legislators conferred with President Roosevelt and suggested that he appoint a single czar to handle the food situation, the War Food administration prepared issuance of a report dealing with unfavorable crop and meat prospects.

Led by Senator Walter George, the five senators and four representatives urged that a single authority be delegated to co-ordinate production, distribution, preservation, rationing and pricing agricultural commodities.

It was reported the President suggested an appropriation from 1½ to 2 billion dollars for subsidies to be used in "rolling back" the prices of foods. Many legislators oppose the subsidies, contending the money used only will have to be repaid in taxes.

In commenting on crop prospects, the War Food administration declared floods in the Midwest and dry weather over the great plains have caused considerable damage. Meat slaughter and dairy production have failed to approach expectations.

DRAFT:

Fathers Due for Call

"Fathers will be placed in uniform at least by the last quarter of this year."

With this statement the War Manpower commission, headed by Paul V. McNutt, announced the Selective Service board's new draft policy in informing employers to prepare for replacement of married men with children in industry after October 1.

In addressing 5,500 employers who have filed replacement lists with state draft directors, the WMC said that after July 1 the employers also should plan to release the childless married men within six months.

Although the WMC's remarks were directed to the 5,500 employers, it indicated that its new policy would be broadly applied throughout all industry. Speaking before a house appropriations subcommittee, Draft Director Hershey said 10,900,000 men will be in uniform by December 31. During the first six months of 1944, 115,000 men will be inducted monthly, Hershey declared.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

SOFTWOOD: Softwood lumber will be made available for essential farm repairs. About half a billion board feet will be released by the War Production board.

TOBACCO: Possibility of a shortage of tobacco, caused by unrestricted buying for export, was voiced when government officials conferred with leaders of the industry recently.

SHIPPING: Shipping losses have been lower in June than in May, in which the smallest losses since Pearl Harbor were sustained, says the OWI.

ARMY: An army of about 2½ million men will be maintained for some time after the war, according to statements to a house subcommittee.

RUSSIA:

Action in the Center

Official announcements pertaining to the Russian front continued to be as confusing as the fighting.

While the Reds claimed to have thrown back German counterattacks in the Orel region in the center of the line, the Nazis reported the continuation of the strong Russian offensive in the Caucasus.

In neither sector, however, did either side claim any major advance. In relation to renewed Russian activity in the center, the Nazis said the Reds were massing huge forces there, apparently to press the initial attacks of a week ago when big holes were punched in the German line.

Bolstered by the addition of American planes arriving under lend-lease, Russian airmen continued sweeping attacks over the German rear. Military installations and transport were bombed.

OIL:

'Situation Worse'

"We are rapidly passing from an exporting to an importing nation in oil."

With these words Petroleum Administrator Harold Ickes forecast an increasing shortage of crude oil. Such a shortage, Ickes said, would not develop because of a lack of natural resources but rather because of a scarcity of labor, transportation and other factors.

While stating that imports of oil would have to be increased from Venezuela, the Caribbean and Mexico, he declared that California will not be producing sufficient crude by the end of the year to take care of the Pacific war theater and her own needs.

Ickes also blasted the Office of Price Administration for its handling of the gasoline rationing, declaring the OPA was too lenient in its allotments. He said home owners could expect fuel oil rationing next winter.

CORN:

Plan Call on Loans

Aiming at loosening the tight situation in corn for processors and feeders, it was reported Commodity Credit corporation planned to call its loans on 57 million bushels of 1942 corn.

Under the proposal, farmers would be allowed 30 days to liquidate their loans. The call would not interfere with the agency's previous move to redeem 35 million bushels of corn on the 1938-'41 crops, effective July 1.

Decision to call the 1942 loans was reported reached after the War Food administration, headed by Chester Davis, turned down proposals for requisitioning the corn. The WFA said requisitioning only would incense farmers and leave the government with the problem of shelling, grading and hauling the corn off the premises.

MEAT PRICES:

Down 10%

Answering to President Roosevelt's "hold-the-line" order, retail prices of meat have been "rolled back" 10 per cent, a move that will save housewives an average of three cents per pound.

The "roll-back" will be accomplished by government payment of subsidies to meat slaughterers to cover their costs of livestock.

Although the action will reduce meat prices, consumers will be compelled to eat even less beef. The War Food administration announced that federally inspected slaughterers had been ordered to reserve 45 per cent of their steer and heifer production for the army.

Flat price ceilings on meat have been drawn by the OPA for four classes of stores, starting with the small independent doing less than $50,000 worth of business a year, and ending with the large operator with an annual volume over $250,000.

NAZI SPY:

Intrigue in Hawaii

In November, 1941, Bernard Julius Otto Kuehn offered his services as a spy to the Japanese vice-consul at Honolulu. In a confession to the FBI, he said he volunteered to supply the enemy with information about the national defense of the U. S.

Shortly after, Kuehn worked out a system of signals to transmit intelligence of American fleet positions to the Japs. According to testimony, the signals were developed through a window light in the dormer of Kuehn's home near Pearl Harbor.

Mrs. Kuehn played a prominent role in the intrigue, according to the FBI. In 1939, her daughter operated a beauty parlor designed to attract "navy business," and in 1940 Mrs. Kuehn visited Japan, returning with geographical literature describing American and British islands in the Pacific. Kuehn, first sentenced to death, was later committed to 50 years at hard labor.

SUPREME COURT:

Bans Compulsory Salute

Reversing a previous decision by a 6 to 3 vote, the U. S. Supreme court ruled that the nation's public schools cannot require pupils to salute the flag.

Said the majority: "Compulsory unification of opinion achieves only the unanimity of the graveyard . . . No official . . . can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, religion, nationalism or other matters of opinion . . ."

Who's News This Week

By

Delos Wheeler Lovelace

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Maj. Gen. Eugene M. Landrum, who snatched the island of Attu back from the Japs, is exactly the type of man you could readily picture wresting a hard bitten strip of land like that away from a wily foe. Short, stocky, and firm jawed, he radiates pugnacity and courage. Those who favor the fashion plate genus in their military men would never glance twice at him. If they met him in civies on the street of a small town they would pick him out as the hard working village doctor, especially if he were carrying his battered Gladstone bag and had his well-caked black pipe clamped between his teeth. He is 52.

Here Definitely We Have a Man Not of Style but of Action

General Landrum is a man who got to the top the hard way. Back in 1910 he entered the army as a private in the coast artillery. By the time the United States entered World War I he was wearing the silver bar of a first lieutenant on his shoulders. Two months later he had become a captain. In the years following the Armistice he kept moving slowly and quietly ahead. He was not the kind of officer to make the headlines, especially in peacetime, but his superiors knew him as plugger and they approve of him. He was graduated from the Army War college in 1936 and just six months before Pearl Harbor, he received his colonelcy.

General Landrum is a native of Florida and he calls Pensacola his home town. Mrs. Landrum, however, is now in California. Like many another wife of an army or naval officer she likes to look at the same ocean her husband does.

IF IT had not been for the late Kaiser, William E. Lynd might still be practicing law in Idaho instead of being, at 49, a brigadier general in the army air corps. He actually started out as an attorney, in fact after earning his degree at the University of Washington. Then he took on military training as a sideline with the Idaho National Guard. In 1916 he went to the Mexican border in the fracas that served as a curtain raiser to the first World war. He had hardly settled back at his law books before the real show started. On March 27, 1917, he was called back to the colors and eight days later was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry.

Attorney Becomes Warrior to Make The Laws Stick

Christmas eve, 1917, is one he will always remember, for his outfit sailed for France just as St. Nick hitched up his reindeer. Overseas he was switched to the air service as an observer and he finally reached the front in a plane in August. A few days later he was the proud possessor of a Silver Star, earned in an air battle with the Germans.

Like many another veteran of the AEF, Lynd found civilian life dull and in 1920 he rejoined the army, this time for good. He has another air medal now. He won the second award for a spectacular reconnaissance flight out over the Pacific in the first year of the present war. More recently he was at Attu, and the other day he visited the White House to tell President Roosevelt what his fliers had done to lick the Japs there.

WHEN the censors finally released the news that Artemus L. Gates, assistant secretary of the navy for air, had been on a tour of the Pacific fighting front, his longtime friends said in unison, "We might have known it." In World War I his experiences were like something out of fiction.

Getting to Zone of Battle Is Second Nature to Gates

When the war clouds lowered over the United States 25 years ago, Gates was in his junior year at Yale. He had just been made captain-elect of the football team, an honor earned at tackle for two seasons. By April, however, he had abandoned his cap and gown for a naval uniform.

In the summer of 1916 he had had a fling at flying and it did not take him long to get into naval aviation, then still in its infancy. August, 1917, found him in France and long before the Armistice he was commanding the U. S. naval air station at Dunkirk.

While there he was decorated for saving the crew of a British plane which had crashed into the sea. Later the French drafted him for one of their bombing squadrons. In an air battle behind the enemy lines in October, 1918, his plane was shot down. When the Germans rushed up to grab him, they found him calmly trying to destroy his ship. On the way to prison, Gates managed to leap through the window of his train and escape. Just before he reached the Swiss border, he was recaptured, however, and on November 11 he was a prisoner in Germany.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

From 1907 to 1912, guayule rubber from Mexico represented about 7 per cent of the world's rubber supply. In 1941, it was less than 1 per cent.
More than 86,000,000 motor vehicles have been produced in the United States since 1900, with an average of five tires per vehicle. That gives you an idea of the number of tires that have been made to maintain motor transportation!
A Spanish historian back in 1519 described a ball made of the gum of a tree that grows in "hot countries." He was referring to what we now call rubber.

City Boy—Sis, look at that cow out there in the field. It's laying milk!

Sister—Silly, cows don't lay milk. You have to pull their tails.

Confusion Confounded

"Guv'nor," said the dusty traveler, "how far is it to Gloucester?"

"'But a mile and a half," replied the farmer.

"Can I ride with you?"

"Certainly. Climb in!"

At the end of three-quarters of an hour the traveler asked: "How far are we from Gloucester now?"

"'Bout four miles and a half."

"Great haystacks! Why didn't you tell me we were going away from Gloucester?"

"Why didn't you tell me you wanted to go there?"

History Will Write Details Of Lewis-Roosevelt Feud

Story Begins During 'Roaring Thirties' as the Forgotten Man Is Remembered by New Deal and CIO.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Today there came to my desk a mimeographed sheet from the Office of War Information. It was headed "The Nazi Slave Labor Society."

As I read that title, my mind shot back to a very few days before this writing, one of the days when your capital was tense over the coal strike from one end of Constitution avenue to the other, and on both sides of the Potomac. I say "Constitution" avenue instead of "Pennsylvania" (which you and I have come to feel is the main street of Washington) because this coal strike struck deep into a lot of offices and bureaus beside the White House at one end of this historic thoroughfare and the Capitol at the other.

Naturally, Harold Ickes, in his offices looking down the mall from that strange modernistic pile that is the new Interior building, was concerned. He was, at that moment, responsible head of the soft coal mining industry and the industry wasn't functioning.

Naturally the members of the War Labor board were concerned. The board's existence was threatened.

Two Worries

Over across the Potomac in that marvelous architectural achievement, the Pentagon building, where the army is housed, officers paced the floor of their pentagonal offices. They had two worries. One: Will there be a coal shortage that will hold up production of important war supplies? Two: Will we have to go out and push people around with bayonets?

I haven't mentioned what was going on at the Capitol or in the White House. Plenty. Every enemy of the administration, every friend of the administration who was angry at Lewis, everyone who was for 100 per cent prosecution of the war—and they weren't necessarily different people, but people with different ideas—was yelling for Lewis' eyebrows and some of them were threatening the President if he didn't bring them in (on a silver charger) for breakfast.

Inside the White House, there were meetings which, because of the presence and absence of certain persons, I would like to report in greater detail but I can't—that will have to be left to history.

As I write these lines, I cannot predict the aftermath of the action which began late one afternoon on June 3 when, contrary to reports circulated earlier in the day, a statement was issued from the White House ordering the men back to the mines by June 7. But between these lines of that statement was the story of "Franklinstein" and the creature which he created, as dramatic, if not as tragic, as the horror tale by the gentle Mrs. Shelly, written early in the 19th century.

Self-Destroyer

A copy of that book ("Frankenstein") is on my table as I write. On the last page are the lines spoken by this strange being which the hero had created, hoping to raise the standard of humanity but which, alas, had found itself heir to the human weaknesses and turned against his creator. The "being," just before it destroys itself, speaks to its creator:

". . . thou didst seek my extinction that I might not cause greater wretchedness; and if yet, in some mode unknown to me, thou hast not ceased to think and feel, thou wouldst not desire against me a vengeance greater than that which I feel. Blasted as thou wert, my agony was still superior to thine . . ."

(You really ought to read the book—it's far superior to the movie version.)

But why do I bandy with this ancient tale? Because I do believe that all of us build, materially or physically, creatures which come back to haunt us.

Look at the record of John Lewis and Franklin Roosevelt.

John, born to the pits, a man who won to literacy, yes, to scholarship the hard way.

Franklin, born to the purple.

Both endowed with that indomitable something that lifted them, in spite of their respective handicaps, to leadership. Egocentric enough to elbow their way up to the counter; altruistic enough to have something to contribute to the general welfare when they got there. Reader, be fair even if you have your honest prejudices—both these men are gifted.

A Quick Look

Pick up the story in the roaring thirties—the New Deal is beginning to strut its stuff. The "forgotten man" has been remembered and he's grateful to Roosevelt.

The forgotten laborer is being remembered; he's grateful to Lewis. I mean the man who couldn't because of the by-laws of the AFL, get into a labor union any more than he could get into the Union League club. Lewis stepped out of the AFL with his miners. The CIO was formed in 1935.

It looked as if John of the eyebrows and Franklin of the amber cigarette holder had something in common. They did. It began by being an ideal—a better deal for the man who hadn't had such a good deal before. Later, the issues became more complicated but we won't go into that now.

Anyhow, the Wagner act was passed in 1935. (Labor's Magna Charter, they called it.) That gave the poor, heretofore outsider, the workman who couldn't qualify, to join the snooty AFL, a chance to be somebody. If there were more of his group than there were of the AFL's in a plant, shop or factory, his outfit was recognized as the collective bargaining unit.

That was a real step forward in economic democracy.

The CIO thrived. It had the blessing of the administration. It gave its votes in return. It also gave the largest campaign contribution in return. Some of the starry-eyed young men in the New Deal (they have departed, most of them, for Puerto Rico and elsewhere on the fringes) dreamed dreams. They told their dreams to Lewis.

"Why not a real labor party, Jawn," they smiled encouragingly, "with you as the leader? We'll get rid of the democrats without imagination. You'll be vice president next time . . ."

The Siren's Song

But then Mr. Lewis made a great mistake. He went to Paris. Other men have erred in that once-fair city before this. (I visited it myself.) But John met another siren . . . he witnessed the sit-down strike.

Now, frankly, this is hearsay but I am told that it was Lewis brought that illegitimate Gallic child of the proletariat, conceived in a strange moment of aberration, back to America. It did not thrive. It needed a more rarified atmosphere than that which blows across the prairies and once flapped the cover of the covered wagon.

Mr. Lewis went to the White House, jerked the previously welcoming latchstring, and went in. But old man Vox Populi got there before him. Up to then, V. P. had been pretty satisfied with things as they were under the New Deal.

But things had changed.

In a chilly voice V. P. said: "No, Franklin, no John. No dice."

Franklin listened. John got mad.

That was the end of a beautiful friendship and the rest is history. Lewis turned against the man who had made his success possible and there is, as we know, no feud like the feud of former friends.

The soldier on the battlefield, utterly unable to comprehend why men strike while he is risking his life for a fraction of the pay the strikers demand, cursed and threatened; the miner, with many just grievances, stood confused, looking for his oracle to speak, but cringing under the sneers at his lack of patriotism. Small-minded bureaucrats, more interested in saving their faces than saving the country, sputtered and strutted. Lewis and Roosevelt, the two men who, working together, might move mountains (of coal and coalition) were forced to square off against each other, the public backed the government and, as usual, decided the issue.

Oh yes! That "Nazi Slave Labor Society"—it can't happen here!

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

MORAL ECHOES

A story of cowardice is recorded against John Callender of Revolution fame. George Washington ordered the captain to be court-martialed. In dishonor he was discarded from the army. No sooner had this thing happened to him than Callender re-enlisted in the army as a private and went about his duties in fidelity At the battle of Long Island he exhibited much conspicuous courage and fidelity, that Washington called him before him and publicly revoked his sentence and restored to him his position as captain. What he lost at Bunker Hill, he regained át Long Island. Any man who looks upon his faults and mistakes with an open eye and then determines to leave them off and make good, is a worthy man. We remember John Callender with inspiration because he made good after he had seen the error of his action at Bunker Hill. My brother, when you make a mistake, correct it and then make good.

On Mother's Day two children were talking together about wearing the flowers that were to be seen on the bosom of almost every on. One said, "I wish that I could wear a red flower, but my mother is dead." The other child replied, "I could wear a red flower, my mother is living, but I do not want to." What made the difference in the feelings of those two children toward their mothers? One could remember her sweet mother, as she was dying upon her bed of poverty, and she could still feel her feeble hand upon her head as she blessed her and died. The other child recalled the memory of a smoking, drinking, cursing mother, who deserted her and went away, leaving her to starve. Do you blame her for not wanting to wear a red rose in the memory of such a mother? The ways of many modern women are such that the glory of motherhood is being snatched from their brow. Mothers think a thousand times before you smoke, drink, curse and carouse before your children.

The under-world sat in conference, planning the death of a very porminent citizen. One who sat in on the conference decided that he would double cross the gang and inform the man of his danger. He wrote a note and delivered it to the man who was marked to die and warned him to be on his guard. But that night the man was reveling with his pals and when he read the note he laughed and said, as he tore it in two. "Danger awaits me, bah." That man never saw the next day, for that very night a deadly weapon went through his heart. So many people put away from them the serious warnings of the gospel, while they revel in myrth and wine, and then perish in ther sins. Sinner, "Danger is awaiting you." Better heed the warnings of the gospel. Tomorrow may be too late.

In the long ago a prisoner of war was shackled and thrown into prison to await his day of death. He knew that if he did not find a way of escape that cold steel would thrust him through. One night the feet of the guards hushed and in the stillness the door to his prison opened and before him stood his general. Quietly the chains were removed from his limbs and the general said, "Haste thee and escape from this prison." The general had risked his life to bring him liberty, but the man looked at him with astonishment and said, "Sir, allow me to think this matter over." He had no time to think it over, but he did any way, and the final result was that while he thought it over, the general slipped out and the door went shut. This is a picture of the sinner who is bound hands and feet by the shackles of sin. Jesus comes to his prison house and offers him life and liberty, but the sinner says, "Let me think the matter over." Man, it is now or never, and why do you delay? Jesus is before you with an open door. Walk through and live.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

There was a country boy who went to Birmingham several years ago for the first time. His highest ambition was to ride an elevator. While strolling around one Sunday afternoon his steps carried him past the Brown Marx Building and he went in to ride up and down on the elevator. To this country boy who had never been to the big city before this was "dreams come true." To operate one of those things was the height of his ambition. When he got off at the ground floor he gave the elevator boy a dime he was so thrilled with his new experience. The boy got a job in Birmingham and stayed, learning electricians trade. Exactly four years to the day, after coming to the city and riding the elevator, he was building electrician and in charge of all elevators at the Brown-Marx building. The man was Millard Lancaster.

A Negro walked into the office of the area rent control administrator at Memphis recently and asked if anyone could tell him who his landlord was. He was told that his landlord was the man to whom he paid rent.

"I don' pay no rent," the Negro said. "You see, 'bout nine years ago I found me a house vacant and moved in. I been there ever since and ain' never paid no rent."

"Well, then," said the clerk, "what are you worrying about? You have no complaint."

"Yassuh, I knows dat. But if somebody don' fix dat roof I'm gonna move out."

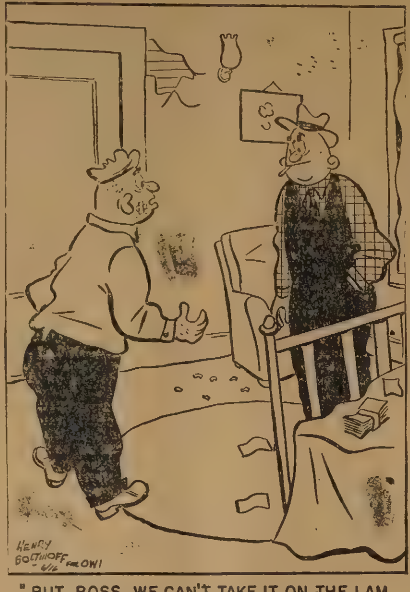
A mayor received a letter from a man in a nearby town which read: "Dear Sir: I got paper which says that Mrs. ——— ———, is going tew git a divorce. She is my wife. Leave her have it, I don't want her no more." Signed ——— ———. "P. S. You can have the one I got now tew if you want her."

WACC's WAVEs, SPARS or Marines have nothing on Mrs. Charlie Burnett. Mrs. Burnett can reline brakes or fix a motor as good as the next one. Speaking of joining one or the other of the lady's organizations to releave a man, well, that won't be necessary for Mrs. Burnett. When and if the army calls Charlie, Mrs. Burnett can don the trousers and do just as good a repair job on an automobile as a lot of the male mechanics hereabouts.

M. C. "Jack" Hayes, Tax Collector had something less than a hundred dollars worth of tax due property to sell last Monday morning. Jack claims that's good tax collecting . . . Julius Smith in town for the weekend. Working at Mobile now. Says that too many women on the job, can't stir them with a stick. Don't know why anyone would want to anyway. What's worrying so many of we males nowadays is the ladies taking over the jobs formerly held by men. After this thing is over it's the man who is going to be in the kitchen it seems. And by golly, it's too hot, we don't feel like cooking today. . . . Jimmie Bell didn't want to set the world on fire, he just wanted a little son. And that is exactly what the blessed event is at his home. A fine boy. Both Lora Rose and the "mean widda kid" are getting along okey-dokey . . . Wonder if that was Bonnie and Pearl Hand we saw in Clanton Sunday afternoon? He doesn't get around much anymore. . . .

You know this aiding the war effort is alright. No one appreciates that fact better than we do who are thrown in contact with dozens of departments and hundreds of human beings each day, al ltrying to do their best to do their part. But this here Ruben Lowe, our postmaster, takes the cake. The other night he was caught in his corn patch, plowing at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. That is what we call patriotism. And Reubin with not a son in the service. All of his boys are girls, like Eddie Cantor.

The first cotton bloom of the year was brought in last Wednesday, or rather mailed in, by J. W. "Pete" McCraw, of Clanton, Route 3. Shortly following Mr. McCraw's bloom was one brought in by Quinton R. Cummings of Thorsby Route 1. Now before you read this the cotton bloom will be numerous and just goes to shows you how fast they pop out when they do start.



"BUT, BOSS, WE CAN'T TAKE IT ON THE LAM. THE GOVERNMENT SAYS DON'T TRAVEL!"

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

A 10-cent wiskbroom or hearthbroom dipped in water will make a quick job of springling clothes to be ironed.

Vinegar, kerosene, ammonia, denatured alcohol or washing soda added to water for washing windows makes window claening easy. After washing, wipe the windows with a clean, dry cloth or soft paper.

When sewing buttons on a garment draw the thread through a piece of beeswax to keep the thread from "snarling" or knotting.

Good bedrooms have closet or other storage space for clothing, hats ,and shoes. A built-in shelf and a shoe rack or bag will keep the hats and shoes off the floor.

HARVEST KUDZU HAY NOW

Many of the hundreds of acres of kudzu in Chilton County are now ready to do their part in the production of beef, milk and pork.

Unless your kudzu is being used for temporary grazing, or will be so needed very shortly, it should be cut now for hay. Cut before mid-July it will make new growth, and with normal seasons be ready to furnish supplemental grazing to relieve dry pastures in September. Cutting now yields a higher quality of hay than later cuttings will, and volume of new growth will normally be greater than the additional growth made if left uncut.

If not grazed, a second good cutting can be made just before killing frost. Do not make the second cutting too soon—should frost come unexpectedly early you have not lost all since frosted kudzu has good feed value immediately after frost, and will carry dry cattle even into January.

Except in case of urgent need for the feedstuff do not cut kudzu in August or September. While a cutting in these months may not in one year on some soils do much readily apparent damage, points would be weakened, and habitual late cuttings will injure the stand. There have been cases where cutting in September reduced the stand and growth the following year to that of first year kudzu.

And cutting kudzu for hay is not the "hard job" you may have heard. A reasonably good mowing machine and just a little patience are needed the first year. But you do not have to rake it—there's enough in the swath to fill your fork. You do not have to shock it unless you are going to bale it in the field. It can be placed loose in the barn from t swath the second day. And in follo ing years, as the stand thickens, t growth becomes more upright, t stems smaller and the cuttin pr gressively easier.

Let's get started now. You'll li it. Ask any of the following far ers who, among others, are coopera ing with the North Central Soil Co servation District: G. C. Vance, V E. Henderson, C. R. Childress, C Stapp, Otho McKinney, C. C. Cofe Dr. W. L. Parrish

If you have not had experience handling kudzu, contact Broo Co nell or Robert W. Williamson of t Soil Conservation Service, or cons the County Agent's office. They w be glad to help you get started.

Have you visited your doctor thi year.

NEWS FROM

CHESTNUT CREEK

Our Sunday school attendance was off a little last Sunday. We are looking for you out next Sunday which is preaching day also. Be sure and be present. We are to set a day for cleaning the cemetery. Every one who can come work will have opportunity to do so but if you can't come and if you can possibly give some money we will hire some one to do the work.

The W. M. S. met after Sunday School and decided to meet next Sunday evening at 7:30. We are anxious to see all the women who want to do something for the Lord to be with us in every meeting. We want to do our best in this good work.

We would like to see more fathers out at Sunday School. There was only a few present today. This being Fathers Day every father should have come to Sunday School with their children. You fathers and mothers come on to church and see if your children will do the same. I believe they will.

No Unemployment Benefits To Farmers Who Are Deferred

Farmers deferred from the draft because of their occupation will not be eligible for unemployment benefits unless they have cleared with their draft boards and possess certificates showing that their employment in jobs other than agrnculture will be in the interest of the war.

This interpretation of the unemployment compensation law has been made by Frank R. Broadway, Director of Industrial Relations. Each person who wants to leave the farm temporarily (such as during the time between lay-by and crop gathering seasons) and take a job in an essential industry will have the right to submit evidence that it is in the interest of the war that he do so. Proper clearance with his draft board, presentation of an official referral card of the United States Employment Service of the War Manpower Commission and proof that he applied for a job to which he has been referred may be used in rebutting the presumption that he is ineligible for employment and hence ineligible for unemployment beenfits.

Mr. Broadway's ruling pointed to regulations of National Selective Service Headquarters and to the Employment Stabilization Plan issued by the Regional Director of the War Manpower Commission, and concluded:

"It is the policy of this Department which administers the unemployment compensation law of this State, that no person, while classified in either 2-C or 3-C of the draft (deferment for agriculture), is presumed to be available for work within the meaning of the eligibility conditions of the unemployment compensation law and especially during the weeks between the cultivating and harvesting seasons, unless he secures from his local draft board a determination that it is in the interest of the war effort that he take employment othe rthan farm work during this period."

Mr. Broadway said the presumption applies both to owners and operators of farms and persons hired to work on farms. The presumption of non-availability can be rebutted in each case by convincing proof that the claimant is available for work and is seeking work other than farm work. "As an illustration," concluded the ruling, "this presumption can be rebutted by presenattion by a claimant, in either a 2-C or 3-C classification, of an official referral card from the United States Employment Service and proof that he actually applied for the job with the employer to whom he was referred."

Mothers Invtied To Discuss Childs Military Future

Parents of young men between the ages of 17 and 18 have been invited for a discussion of their sons' military future by Chief M. H. Potter, petty officer in charge of the Montgomery Navy Recruiting Station.

"Most young men between the ages of 17 and 18 will see military service of some kind," Chief Potter said, "[illegible] we of the Navy Rercuiting Service offer all our facilities for guidance and placement of these young men in the proper jobs."

"The navy is thinking of the future of young men," Chief Potter continued, "and we offer them many opportunities. The Navy gives them the three-fold opportunity of learning earning and serving our country at the same time. The Navy will teach a young man, through its extensive trade school system, one of 49 different trades by which he will be equipped to make a good living in later life."

Attractiveness of Navy enlistment now was emphasized by the Navy recruiter. If a young man has two years or more of high school work and is interested in medicine or pharmacy as a career he can enlist directly in the Hospital Corps with a higher rating than apprentice seaman.

For the time being, a young man can choose the training station he desires for his training. After being sworn in, each man is asked which training station he prefers and he is sent to the one of his choice. Many from this area are being sent to the training station at Pensacola, Fla.

These attractive offers will not last long, Potter warned.

A navy recruitre is in Clanton every Monday at the Draft Board office.

High Spots In State News

MONTGOMERY — More than 3,250 convicted speeders have been listed by the State Department of Public Safety with the OPA, since the OPA last September 1 asked for such records. In a number of counties speeders have lost their gas or tire rations, or have had gas coupons deducted from their books, as the result of enforcement of the OPA policy by local rationing boards.

MONTGOMERY—The State Public Service Commission on July 13 and 14 will hear the request of the Alabama Water Service Company for authority to sell its water systems in Prichard, Attalla, Andalusia, Cordovia and Parrish to the municipalities involved. Commissioner Gordon Persons said the company was forced to take the steps because the federal government has ordered the Federal Water Service Co., a holding concern, to divert itself of its Alabama interests. Purpose of the hearings will be to establish fair prices on the systems involved, Mr. Persons explained.

MONTGOMERY. — The Merit System has weathered its first major test in this Legislature. Rep. E. C. Boswell of Geneva failed in two attempts to emasculate the Norman bill allowing the governor to authorize the Personnel Department to set up watrime, emergency standards for the hiring of temporary state employes. Boswell's attempt to authorize the governor, or any future governor, to take such a step at any time, failed, 49 to 34, and Boswell's effort to give such temporary employes permanent status failed 66 to 2p. His bill to abolish the entire Merit System was spiked by the House ways and means committee.

MONTGOMERY. — One of the most modern extensive police radio networks in the nation is being installed by the State Department of Public Safety. All patrol cars will be equipped with two-way radio sets, and Highway Patrol radio stations will be established on Monte Sano, near Huntsville; on the peak in Cheaha State Park; at East Lake, Birmingham; and in or near these cities: Mobile, Demopolis, Dothan, Selma, Decatur, Gadsden, Florence and Opelika.

MONTGOMERY. — The Legislature has increased the terms of tax assessors and collectors to six years, and the House has passed a bill proposing a constitutional amendment by which the terms of sheriffs would be similarly lengthened.

MONTGOMERY.-Favorable action is expected soon in the House on the Senate-passed bill to require written reports to the State Departmen of Public Safety, within 24 hours, from all drivers involved in accidents involving death or injury to any person or proyerty damage apparently aggregating $25 or more. The bill was introduced by Senator Sam High of Ashville.

SOLDIERS ARE KEPT FREE FROM INFECTIOUS DISEASE

How preventive measures have kept the American soldiers in North Africa almost entirely free of infectious and contagious diseases, is told in a report received at Headquarters, 4th Service Command.

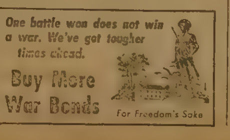
Before the Americans landed last November, the Medical Intelligence Service of the Army had complete details in hand as to the conditions to be guarded against, the report states, and the necessary measures were put into effect immediatly.

One of the most effective forces against the hordes of mosquitoes has been a new lotion which the soldier rubs on his face, hands and other exposed parts of his body. Only a few drops of the preparation are necessary and one application will repel mosquitoes for more than six hours.

Flies and other insects are fought with bombs, not the kind that blasted the Axis, but a device that a soldier sets off with a trigger. It contains spray that kills all the flies and other insects in a room of ordinary size ,but is harmless to humans.

The elimination of "ocoties" is accomplished by an entirely new powder which is sprinkled on the clothing and thi ssimple method does away with the elaborate apparatus which was used in the last war. As a general rule, however, the American troops in Nroth Africa are exceptionally free of these pests, the report declares.

Breeding places of the insects were cleaned up by the Sanitary Corps by spreading ful oil and arsnic dueest on stagnant ponds and pools, while the Engineers and Quartermaster Cors contributed their share in the war on disease.



One battle won does not win a war. We've got tougher times ahead.

YOU CAN TRAIN AT HOME FOR ARMY AIR FORCE

Young men of Alabama—between 17 and 26—who want to help fight their country's battles in the air, as pilots, navigators and bombadiers, can take the first steps toward becoming members of the United States Army Air Forces without leaving their home communities.

C. F. Anderson, Director for Alabama of the United States Employment Service, War Manpower Commission, today advised Mr. S. C. Patton, Manager of the Shelby and Chilton County areas offices, that a cooperative program had been developed whereby the United States Employment Service and officers of Craig Field at Selma will give preliminary tests to applicants at local offices of the Employment Service and those who qualify will be enlisted or voluntarily inducted for service in the Army Air Forces.

"Every man who has passed his seventeenth birthday and has not reached his twenty-seventh birthday has an opportunity to take the preliminary tests at an office of the United States Employment Service," said Mr. Anderson. "He need only contact the nearest local office of the Employment Service and advise that he desires to become a member of the Nation's air forces. Col. Charles H. Anderson, commanding officer of Craig Field has established a mobile examining unit and when a sufficient number of eligible persons have apliel, arrangements will be made to have this unit give the preliminary tests. No applicant will be required to go further than the local office serving his section to get preliminary information and the preliminary tests.

"This is an opportunity long desired by many young men of Alabama. They have wanted to get into the Army Air Forces but have not known what preliminary steps to take. Under the cooperative program representatives of Craig Field will visit all local offices of the Employment Service where a sufficient number of young men have registered their names and indicated an interest in this branch of the service.

"Young men who are 17 and have not reached 18 and who meet the tests will be permitted to enlist for service. Men between 18 and 26 who are qualified will be permitted to accept voluntary induction through their local draft boards and will be assigned for training in the Army Air Forces.

After they have been accepted their future in the army will be up to them. They will be given the training afforded to all cadets. Some will qualify as pilots, others as navigators or bombadiers. Others may be assigned to the ground forces. Our air forces are blasting the trails toward victory. Young Alabamians should contact the nearest local office of the United States Employment Service at once in order that they may be interviewed on the first visit of Craig Field representatives."

Per capita consumption of al lmeats in 1935-1939 was 126 pounds. Estimated demand in 1943 would run as high as 160 pounds, with about 125 pounds available under the rationing program.

Third Quarter Ration Books

Notice To Truck Owners

Beginning Friday, June 25th, the Board will issue third quarter TT-1 and TT-2 gasoline ration books. Truck owners are required to bring their ODT certificates when making application.

Warning

Holders of all ration books, gasoline and grocery, are warned not to tear out stamps and present them loose to the dealers. They will not be accepted when detached from the books, except in the direct presence of the dealer. Holders of ration books should be very careful about this as it is of utmost importance.

Filling stations are required not to issue gasoline on the new TT-1 and TT-2 books until July 1st; and on and after that date no gasoline is to be issued on old truck ration books.

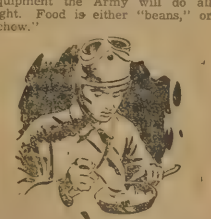
Soya products, in soups, bread cereals and mixed foods, will be a common indgerient by next winter.

The meeting continues to grow and there i sa standing invitation for all who wish to attend these meetings

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Beans

So long as a soldier can eat and think up disparaging names for his equipment the Army will do all right. Food is either "beans," or "chow."



"Chow" may consist of a well cooked meal or if circumstances demand our fighting men have learned to subsist on "Ration K," the concentrated food that all of them carry into battle.

With millions of men and women in the services it will require a lot of War Bond buying on our part to keep them happy.

Serve Perfect Little Cakes for Garden Party
(See Recipe Below)

Keep Cool!

Foods that don't cook the cook and leave a lot of K.P. after the party is over are two golden rules for summer entertaining. If you are baking anything, try baking in cool morning hours, and if there's a warm dish to be served, make it something that doesn't require more than 15 minutes of cooking.

If your table decorations and settings are cool appearing and the food carries this out further, then you will have done a lot toward making your guests comfortable. Refreshments may be simple, in fact, they should be, for then guests and hostess alike can enjoy themselves.

Here's a lovely salad that's the last word in coolness and smoothness, thereby filling the order for perfect summer refreshment:

Orange Ring Salad.
(Serves 8)

1 tablespoon gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ cup boiling water
1½ cups orange juice
Juice of one lemon
1 tablespoon chopped mint
⅓ cup sugar
1½ pounds white grapes, skinned and seeded
2 cups shredded lettuce
2 packages cream cheese
1 cup sour cream dressing

Soak gelatin in cold water 5 minutes. Add boiling water, lemon and orange juice, sugar and chopped mint. Stir until cool. Mash and form cheese into balls the size of large marbles. Pour a little of jelly into bottom of a mold and place balls at intervals while pouring on thickened jelly. Place in refrigerator and chill until firm. Unmold and fill center with grapes mixed with lettuce and dressing. Surround mold with peeled orange sections. Serve with crackers.

Sour Cream Dressing.

½ cup french dressing
1 teaspoon sugar
1 cup sour cream

Mix ingredients well and chill thoroughly.

A lovely combination of citrus fruit juices are included in this salad guaranteed to keep you cool:

Orange Ice Salad.
(Serves 6)

2 cups orange juice
⅓ cup lemon juice
½ grapefruit
1 slice canned pineapple
1 large orange
⅓ cup sugar
⅓ cup water
Grated rind of 1 small orange

Cook sugar, water and grated rind together for 5 minutes after coming to a boil. Strain and cool. Add to lemon and orange juice and freeze. Pack into a ring mold. Freeze until firm, then unmold on lettuce. In the center place a bowl filled with mayonnaise, and garnish around outer edge with sections of orange, grapefruit and pineapple.

Lynn Says:

Salad Pointers: Have all salad ingredients as cold as possible. Chill salad bowl and salad plates to assure absolute coolness to salads.

To skin tomatoes: Hold tomato on fork over flame and turn slowly for about 1 minute. Slip off skins.

To flute cucumber. Peel, lengthwise, and run prongs of fork through lengthwise, then slice cucumber thinly.

To sieve egg yolks or whites: This is pretty for garnishing. Separate yolks or whites from hard-cooked eggs, place in a small sieve, and rub through with wooden spoon on salads to be garnished.

To decorate lettuce: Dip edges in paprika.

*Recipes Given

Tiny little cakes attractively decorated with a cool drink may serve as refreshments for a garden party or evening:

Tiny Tim Cakes.
(Makes 8 cakes)

½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream shortening and sugar together until light and fluffy. Add egg, beating well. Sift dry ingredients together, and add alternately to creamed mixture with milk. Mix to a smooth batter. Drop from a spoon into well-greased muffin cups. Bake 25 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven. Frost with tinted frosting.

Grapefruit Swizzle.

1 quart grapefruit juice
Juice from 8 limes
4 sprigs of mint
Sugar syrup to taste

Mix lime and grapefruit juice. Stir in syrup. Add mint leaves, crushing them after added to drink. Stir thoroughly. Cool in refrigerator. Fill glasses with crushed ice and pour over swizzle. Garnish with a sprig of fresh mint.

Sugar syrup to keep on hand for cool drinks is made by boiling 3 cups of sugar to 1½ cups water for 10 minutes after it starts boiling. Pour into bottle.

Fruit Freeze.

1 fresh ripe pineapple
2 lemons
1 quart cold water
Fruit syrup to taste

Pare pineapple, remove eyes and core. Run pieces of pineapple through food chopper, add water, lemon and syrup to taste. Chill and fill glasses to within a third of the top and add a scoop of raspberry ice.

Sandwiches using unrationed food for fillings are always a grand way to take care of the refreshment problem:

Hostess Sandwiches.

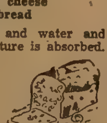
½ pound mincemeat, packaged
½ cup water
8 ounces cream cheese
Whole wheat bread



Mix mincemeat and water and cook until all moisture is absorbed. Cool. Cover thin slice of buttered whole wheat bread with cheese, softened with cream and slightly salted, then with mincemeat and another slice of bread covered with cream cheese. Cut in strips or fancy shapes and decorate, if desired with candied fruit.

Cheese Sandwich Filling.

1 package cream cheese
6 chopped olives
3 pieces finely chopped parsley
3 strips cooked bacon, chopped fine
1 tablespoon horseradish
1 tablespoon mayonnaise

Mix all ingredients together, add salt and pepper to taste, and spread on buttered bread.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

In one of the books of fiction there was a famous rider who ran out to his horse, flung himself into the saddle, spurred his horse furiously and I had some private thoughts of certain speakers and preachers who perform in a like manner. Have you not heard men of whom it can be truly said that they seized a subject and then rode madly in all directions? Have you not heard preachers of whom it could be said that they selected a text, stuck spurrs to their animation and rode around in a mad sweat in all directions? An oration should find a path in which to travel and a text should mark out a distinct line of thought to be given. It is all right to ride with animation, provided that we do not ride madly in all directions. In other words it is best to select a subject or a text and then stick to it.

There is no horse that we ride so swiftly and so contentedly as the horse that we have named, "Alibi." When we wish to be justified before ourselves and before our neighbors we jump astride this horse and ride him madly. Adam ate of the fruit and h blamed Eve. She was called in question and she blamed the Serpent. When a boy loses a race, he tells the grandstand that he would have won, had he not slipped, if he had not gotten a pebble in his shoe. When a preacher fails in the pulpit he blames the hot weather, or the duties of the pastorite. One of the basic requirements of a great personality is for him to deny himself the luxury of an alibi. We should face the realities of life with honesty and courage, and then determined that we are going to do something about it. A lot of blame comes down to me. All of us should learn how to tackle ourselves without becoming morbid or discouraged. Stop riding that horse "Alibi" and make a confession like the student did who wrote home to his mother after losing a foot ball game. Said he, "Mother, the other team found a big hole in our line and that hole was me."

The mother of a high school student who had just started the study Physiology, listened morning and night to her son who talked much of what was on the inside of him. Becoming a bit fearful that her son was learning more than he should know about himself, she wrote the teacher a letter saying, "I do not want my Sammie to learn no more about his insides." The most of us are too busy studying things on the outside of us to learn much about ourselves on the inside. Do you ever look within that you may know why you are doing certain things? What motives revolve within your brain and heart, to make the wheels of life go around? If you really want to produce a personality that is worth while, you had better study yourself and know what you have on the inside.

The most of us meet up with bad messes, we have to contend with difficulties and sometimes we have to overcome tragic situations. If we would succeed, overcoming is one of life's chief businesses. The power that is within us must assert itself. We have no time for self pity. An old Maine farmer was driving his horses along a dusty road. The hind wheels of his wagon had come off and the old man leaned forward, as his horses laborously pulled their load. On seeing a man by the roadside, the farmer inquired, "How much longer does this hill last" "Hill" laughed the man in his face, "You fool, your hind wheels are off." So goes the story of life. Often do we think that all of the outside world is a hill, when in reality the real trouble is within us. Wheels are off on the inside of our life. When a man is right within the road of life then becomes smooth and level.

Keep Livestock Off Railroad Tracks

MOBILE, ALA. The Gulf, Mobile and Ohio Railroad today appealed to livestock owners on its right-of-way to keep their herds off the tracks, where last year 1600 animals— the equivalent of 2,400,000 meat ration points—were killed.

The appeal, in the form of an advertisement in newspapers in its territory, was made under the signature of I. B. Tigrett, President of GM&O who said that keeping livestock off the tracks now was a matter of patriotsim, with meat and dairy products becoming scarcer by the day. He pointed out that in addition to the slaughter of cattle and hogs by the railroad's trains, a number of horses and mules, in increasing demand now because of the shortages in mechanical equipment, are being klled.

And every time livestock is killed by a train, Mr. Tigrett continued, the movement of vital freight shipments or passengers and mail is slowed considerably. The damage that such killings do to rail equipment is becoming serious, since most railroad equipment is now irreplacable, the GM & O prery said.

GM & O, familiarly known as the Rebel Route, extendc from St. Louis to New Orleans and St. Louis to Mobile, with freight branches running to Memphis, Birmingham and Montgomery.

July Is Proper Time Plant Fall Potatoes

Auburn, Ala.— Alabama farmers planning to grow a fall crop of Irish potatoes should begin making preparations for planting the crop in July.

The most dependable variety to use says Llye Brwn, Extension horticulturist, is the Bliss Triumph from the South Alabama spring crop. In securing seed farmers are advised to be sure that they come from clean stock and have had a sufficient rest period to give good stands of strong plants.

Moist, well-drained bottom land is ideal for fall potatoes. Fairly fertile sandy loam is the preferrer soil type.

Best seed pieces weigh one to two ounces and are planted 12 to 14 inches apart in three-foot rows. Fertilize with 800 to 1,000 pounds of 4-10-7 at planting time, applying on each side of the seed or one inch below the seed.

It is best to plant potatoes in North Alabama from July 20 to 25 o ras nera that period as practicable.

The Southern freight rate structure is greatly misunderstood, and hence receives unmerited criticism. This statement is not to argue with those who publicly criticize the rate structure, but to assure industry it will not be discriminated against—it will be supported. The major effort of railroads is now to win the war. Thereafter, "The Old Reliable" will resume its primary purpose of aiding in the inevitable development of the South.

It takes huge sums of money to finance America's railroads and other great industrial enterprises . . . money from the capital and savings of millions . . . from profits of business . . .

It takes large numbers of skilled and unskilled employees to operate the industries thus created.

But more important still—the financing and operation of industrial enterprises require ambitious men, spurred to great accomplishment by high reward for superior effort and merit. That indeed nurtures the American Spirit—the Spirit of Free Enterprise, which in one short year caused America's production to surpass the Dictators' ten-year start.

Alabama Pulpwood Needed For War Use

Auburn, Ala. — Pulpwood is rapidly becoming one of the most critically needed materials fo rthe manufacture of powder, medical supplies, food containers, parachutes, shell cases and hundreds of other indispensable supplies, points out Charles R. Ross, extension forester.

The WPB is making an urgent appeal to farmers and other woodland owners to cut pulpwood, pointing out that it seems impossible to overcome the present shortage unless many farmers do this. Pulpwood can be cut during "lay-by" time this summer, on wet days or at other times during the year when regular farm jobs are not pressing. The usual price is from $6.50 to $7.50 a unit loaded on cars. Railroad cars carry [illegible]n 10 to 15 units.

Woodland owners are advised to get in touch with the pulpwood con[illegible] territory so as to get [illegible] rice before doin[illegible] [illegible]. Whenever pulpwood is [illegible]ed or loaded on railroad sidings there is a market for farm-cut wood.

The following mills buy pulpwood in Alabama: Mobile Paper Company, Chichton, Alabama; Hollingsworth & Whitney Company, Mobile; National Guysum Company, Mobile. Southern Kraft Corporation, Mobile; Gulf States Paper Corporation, Tuscaloosa; Southern Kraft Corporation, Panama City. The Mead Corporation, Harriman, Tenn.

A[illegible]ERICANS are learning that war reaches deep into the lives of all. There are dislocations of accustomed practices—from torn homes to much l[illegible] consequential disruptions. Meat and shoes, soup and gasoline are on a share basis neighbor with neighbor, state with state.

The sharing of gasoline, for example, has thrown a nation-on-wheels out of gear. Daily going and coming have been revolutionized for millions. Yet with a minimum of confusion and complaint. For our part, we pay our respects to the motorists of the South for the spirit and aptitude with which they have met these wholly strange methods and procedures.

Thank you, Southern car- and truck-drivers. You have shared your gasoline without grumbling. You have quietly adapted yourselves to the coupon, to the tire inspection requirements and to the sometimes annoying details of regulation. Way Operate Pressure Cooker Is Outlined

Auburn, Ala.—With more homemakers planning to use pressure cookers this year than ever before many questions are being asked on the proper way to use the cooker.

In answering the questions, extension workers here list 15 points to follow in operating a pressure cooker:

(1) Pour boiling water in the canner to a depth of one inch.

(2) Allow space between jars for circulation of steam.

3. After canner is filled with jars or cans, adjust the cover.

(4) Leave pet cock open until the steam escapes in a steady stream for 5 to 7 minutes. (5) Close the pet cock. (6) Allow the pressure to rise until the gauge registers the desired point. (7) Count time from the moment the desired pressure is reached. Make a note as to the time the processing will be complete.

(8) Keep a close watch on the canner. Regulate the heat so that the pressure will remain the same. If the pressure goes up or down thre will be a loss of liquid. (9) At the end of the processing period remove the canner from the fire, allowing to cool away from draft.

(10) When glass jars are used, allow the canner to cool until the guage registers zero before opening the pet cock. (11) Do not hasten cooling of a pressure canner by applying cold water or wet cloths or by placing it on a cold surface as this may crack the canner.

(12) Remove the jars one at a time. Always use manufacturer's directions for sealing particular types of jar tops. (13) If tin cans smaller than No. 3 are used open the pet cock gradually at the end of the processing period and allow the steam to escape slowly. (14) When opening the pressure canner tilt the cover so that the steam escapes away from the operator. (15) Keep jars out of a draft. Do not cover.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

JOHN'S COUNSEL TO CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—II John 4-11; III John 5-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Beloved, I pray that in all things thou mayest prosper and be in health; even as thy soul prospereth.—III John 2.

Christians need guidance, especially in their home and church relationships. The apostle John, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, wrote the two personal letters known to us as II and III John. They abound in sound spiritual, practical advice. Note that these two words belong together, for what is truly spiritual cannot help but be tremendously practical and perfect for the direction of thought and life.

In these letters five admirable lessons are taught. Let us give heed to them. They are appropriate to our day.

I. Set an Example Before Your Children (II John 4-6).

We may not like to admit it, but our children are largely what we make them by their training—or lack of it—in the home. Parents have the grave and at the same time precious responsibility of being what they want their children to be. We set the mold of their thinking and acting, not only about material things, but mentally and spiritually, which is far more important.

Above all we must teach them by precept and example to love God supremely, and to walk after His commandments. Father, mother, have you done your duty? Are your children "walking in truth" (v. 4)?

II. Be on Guard Against False Teachers (II John 7-11).

We are not to countenance false teaching even by entertaining such teachers, or having close fellowship with them. To create the impression before the world and the Church that they are "not so bad," by appearing as their friends, is to partake of their evil works (v. 11). This is a serious matter, and one which is a problem in the Church today.

Such teachers may easily be recognized. They are aptly described by Dr. Douglass: "In all ages the Church has been plagued by those who want to substitute something for pure Christian faith, or to embroider it with bright ideas of their own conceiving. Such people may try to strip religion of its supernatural aspect and reduce it to a merely rationalistic system. They may seek to slyly loosen the moral standards of the Church because their own lives are deficient when measured by such standards. They may try to minimize the teaching of the cross because it stands for sacrifice." Watch against them, and stand against their destructive teaching.

III. Be Diligent in Putting Forward True Teachers (III John 5-8).

The door which should be closed against false teachers should be opened wide to those who are faithful teachers of the truth.

This refers primarily to the hospitality of the home, and reminds us of a grace which has been all but forgotten in these days of small apartments.

Whether we are able to open our homes to God's servants or not, we can show a Christian spirit of genuine hospitality in helping to bring them forward (v. 6) in their work. This may be done by gifts of money, by kindness shown in time of need, by a real interest in their work, by recommending them to others who wish to hear the truth.

Do everything possible, then, to hinder the false teacher, and be just as diligent to put forward the ministry of the true man of God.

IV. Do Not Trust Proud, Se[illegible] Seeking Leadership (III John 9-11).

A man may be orthodox, and intensely loyal to the denomination, and at the same time be a wicked man whose example is to be shunned. No word is said against the teaching of Diotrephes. He was not condemned for being careless about the affairs of the church, or unfaithful in his attendance and devotion to its interest as he saw them.

The sin of Diotrephes was pride, a desire to be the boss of the church, "No. 1 man" in its affairs. Lacking the true spirituality which always results in humility, he opposed the apostle. Not only did he refuse to receive him, but used pressure on others who were willing to be hospitable.

V. Emulate the Life of the Man of Good Report (III John 12).

A good man! No words of praise could possibly surpass such a testimony. The world is full of brilliant, skilled, wealthy and prominent people, but there is an appalling dearth of good men and women.

How refreshing to meet, and how delightful to know, such a man—such a woman. Like Demetrius, they have not only the witness of the Church, and of the truth, but also of "all men." But last week we said the world hates real Christians. It does, but it also respects them, and is forced to bear witness to their reality and goodness.

Professed fellowship with God in Christ which does not result in goodness of life may well be scrutinized.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1724-B designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) bodice requires, with short sleeves, 1½ yards 39-inch material; skirt 2⅜ yards; 6 yards ribbon trimming.

Favorite Apron

APRONS are certainly turning out to be fashion's pet these days and this one, with patchwork border, is one of the favorite models.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1741-B designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 (34) requires 2⅛ yards 35-inch material; 7 yards bias fold. Use scraps for bottom.

African Sergeant Major Is Permitted Four Wives

Among the troops who helped to drive the Italians out of Ethiopia in 1940 were sturdy native soldiers from the African Gold Coast.

The British carefully refrain from interfering with their customs. About half of them are Moslems, others Christians, but their marriage customs are peculiarly their own.

Some of the non-Christians may have as many wives as they choose in private life. But in barracks they are "rationed" according to rank; that is, one wife for a private, two for a sergeant, and four for a sergeant-major.

The Gold Coast soldier is about average height. He goes to school for an hour a day under British tutors, and serves under British officers. He lives in cement and white plaster barracks that are pin-bright. His boots shine like glass and he is scrupulously clean.

'Tickle Shirts' Still Worn

One of Britain's oldest and strangest industries, hair shirt-making, is surviving the war. In remote convents, nuns are still engaged in making the shirts for people who wish to do their penance with realism. Monks and very pious people wear the shirts, which are uncomfortable and painful.

The full-size shirts worn in olden days have nearly disappeared, and today a scapula, or a belt in which is woven horse-hair, and in some cases human hair, is worn instead.

This form of penance dates back to the saints, but only in rare instances today do laymen adopt it. The shirts are worn only a few hours a week, and not long enough to harm the skin.

AROUND THE HOUSE

So that they will not appear spotted, iron shantungs and pongees dry.

• • •

Never, never put electrical appliances into water to clean them. A damp cloth and a mild abrasive are sufficient in most cases. Guard wires against dampness.

No one particularly likes to iron curtain ruffles. Why not dip the curtains into cleaning fluid, two gallons for six pairs of curtains? If they are hung in the air to dry, and care is exercised, they will not require pressing.

Baked ham is glorified by pouring honey over the ham before browning. It gives a delicate brown color and a delicious flavor.

A cushion or pad underneath a rug not only makes it feel softer and warmer but will also make the rug last longer.

Several strands of wire placed from end to end lengthwise over the poultry feed trough will prevent chickens from getting into the trough with their feet and wasting and contaminating the feed.

• • •

When drying a sweater or sweat shirt, use a wire coat hanger and bend the ends almost together while putting the garment on the hanger or removing it. This prevents stretching the neck of the garment.

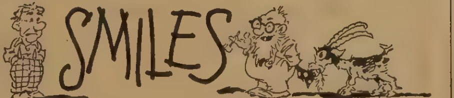
Start root vegetables in boiling, salted water, about one teaspoon of salt to a quart of water.



SMILES

Don't It?

"Pessimism never pays."

"Oh, I don't know! Look at all the money dentists make by looking down in the mouth."

The Question

Mrs. Newlywed—How do you cook pork and beans?

Mother-in-Law—Huh! How do you get 'em?

HEARSAY

Johnson—No one with any sense could believe that.

Thomson—How do you know what anyone with any sense would believe?

At Ease

She (thoughtfully)—Why do so many women rest their chins on their hands when they are thinking?

He (brutally)—To keep their mouths shut so they won't disturb themselves.

So, No Men

He—The artists whose paintings show that angels are all women certainly didn't know women.

She—That is perhaps true. It may be that they knew only men.

Not Scented

Girl Shopper—Do you have hyacinth bulbs?

New Clerk—No, just electric.

These Days

"I hear you've been doing very well at school, Alfred," said the fond grandparent. "What is your best subject—reading, writing or arithmetic?"

A look of quiet contempt crossed young Alfie's face as he replied:

"Don't be so absurd, grandpa! I produced the best plan for post-war reconstruction."

Without Priorities

"The price of everything has gone up since the war began."

"No, talk is just as cheap as ever."

Even though it's true that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, it doesn't mean he'll swallow anything.

Knew the Prof

The professor of chemistry was giving a demonstration of the properties of various acids.

"Now," he said, "I am going to drop this half dollar into this glass of acid. Will it dissolve?"

"No, sir," replied one of the students.

"No?" said the demonstrator. "Then perhaps you will explain to the class why it won't dissolve."

"Because," came the answer, "if it would you wouldn't drop it in."

EARLY American wall pockets cut out of light weight pine or scraps of half inch material may have many modern uses. In the kitchen they are just the thing for ration books and a pad for the grocery list. Just inside the front door one will lend a decorative note and make a convenient place for driving gloves and keys.

Originally these pockets were made in a great variety of designs and were used for letter boxes. They are still useful for this purpose or for a leave-a-note pad and pencil. If you enjoy working with wood you may want to cut these pockets out by hand with a coping saw as shown here. If you have a jig saw it is much faster, or you may mark your design and take it to a woodworking shop to be cut out for a few cents.

A General Quiz

1. What is the khamsin which was mentioned so often in news reports from Africa?
2. What country flies its flag upside down while at war?
3. What per cent of the numerical strength of modern air armies is in training planes?
4. How do military experts rate the two biggest factors, production and supply, and battle, in winning this war?

The Answers

1. It is a hot African wind which fills the air with sand.
2. The Commonwealth of the Philippines is the only country in the world that flies its national flag upside down while at war.
3. Approximately 60 per cent.
4. Seventy-five per cent rests on production and supply and 25 per cent on battle.

When you hear a Marine called a "Leatherneck," it has nothing to do with the epidermis of his neck. Years ago the Marine uniform was equipped with a high stiff leather collar. From that time on, "Leatherneck" has been the word for a Marine. The word for his favorite cigarette is "Camel"—the favorite cigarette also of men in the Army, Navy, and Coast Guard. What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Rural Electrification has made great strides during the past ten years, bringing to thousands of farm homes the conveniences of their city brothers. Today, however, copper wiring, fixtures—all the materials which are required for rural electrification—are "out" for the duration.

The farmers of the nation, however, can start now buying rural electrification and all the equipment which goes with it through purchase of War Bonds. Your War Bonds today will buy rural electrification tomorrow and give you back $4 for every $3 you invest.

Alabama Mills Contributes Much To Winnings Of War

WINS COVETED "T" FLAG FOR EMPLOYEE BUYING OF WAR BONDS

A trip to Alabama Mills last Friday [illegible]noon convinced us that to equal her contribution to the War effort, a [illegible]ation or an individual, would have to go a long way.

Mr. J. L. King, congenial Superintendent, escorted us through the entire mill where more than three hundred employees work tirelessly in the manufacture of cloth that goes eventually nearly 100 percent to the government.

Margaret Venable, cashier, stated that more than 90 percent of the workers contribute regularly to Bond buying and tht approximately $700.00 worth are bought each week. For this and the fact that more than ten percent of the payroll goes in Bonds, the local Mill was awarded the Government "T" Flag, which flies over the plant. All have only one thing in mind—the winning of this war as quickly as possible. Most of the employees have a husband or brother in the armed forces.

According to Mr. King, such a thing as labor trouble is unknown. The executive office and the day laborer work to accomplish the most good and their combined effort has the record of this mill outstanding.

WILLING WORKERS CLASS OF CLANTON METHODIST HAVE SPEND-THE-DAY E

Peeling Peaches Properly Gives More for Canning

Auburn, Ala.--- With a short Peach crop this year homemakers should not be wasteful in peeling peaches for canning.

Much can be saved by peeling peaches with a lye solution says Lavada Curtis, extension food preservation specialist, in giving these directions for making the lye solution.

Place two level tablespoons of lye in one gallon cold water. Heat to boiling; dip fruit in solution for five to thirty seconds; rinse lye from fruit very thoroughly. For peeling clingstone peaches, use one-fourth pound lye to one gallon water. Caution: Do not use utensils made of aluminum, for aluminum dissolves in a lye solution. If lye gets on hands, rinse with diluted vinegar.

Clothes sprinkled with hot water rather than cold makes clothes iron more easily and quickly.

LARGE PERCENTAGE FFA MEMBERS OWN SOWS AND GILTS

Twenty-one of the 36 active FFA members that were enrolled in Isabella High School at the close of school own purebred sows and gilts. This constitutes 58 and 3-10 percent of the total FFA enrollment at Isabella.

Hogs, as part of the students supervised farming program, pay off faster than most other phases of agriculture. During the last 3 years several hundred dollars worth of registered breeding stock has been sold in the state of Alabama by these students.

The Isabella vocational agricultural department under the supervision of J. H. Camp, local teacher, is striving among other things to mprove the quality and quantity of breeding stock and meat hogs in Chilton County especially.

Members of the Isabella FFA are successful with hogs because they follow these improved practices: (1) Use purebred hogs. (2) Raise large litters (3) Feed a well-balanced home grown feed such as possible including a good pasture (4) Manage the sows and pigs properly (5) Keep a mneral mixture before the hogs at all times (6) Control diseases.

Members owning purebred sows and gilts are as follows: Gordon Conway, Jesse Culp, Hansell Groom, Lloyd Jones, Marvin Scott, Erman Cleckler, Robert Cummings, Leonard Hayes, Walter Kendrick, Ernest McCary, Jack Mizzell, J. B. Sims, Earl Wright, William Henderson, Lamar Williams, Jerome Conway, C. F. Gandy, Calvin Rasberry, Arthur Tucker, Earl Wilkins and Joe James Wells.

Counter Jars Raise $125.80 For Soldiers

The campaign to raise money for buying cigarettes for United States soldiers in foreign service needs your support. Look for the Cigarette Fund Jars in the business houses of Clanton and put in your nickles. Each nickle you put into these jars will deliver a package of American cigarettes to some American boy who is fighting on foreign soil.

The Cigarette Campaign is being sponsored by the Clanton Kiwanis Club. During the first ten days of this campaign, the Jars collected $125.80. One Jar—located at Matson's Cafe—collected more than $19.00.

Our soldier boys in foreign lands enjoy American cigarettes more than any other luxury obtainable. Do your part and buy some soldier at least one package of cigarettes every day.

Series of Meetings To Start Friday Night At Assembly of God

DESCRIBED BY REV. SANDLIN AS "A SOUL SAVING EFFORT"

A series of Evangelistic meetings will start Friday night [illegible] week at the First Assembly of God Tabernacle. Each night the services will start promptly at 8:15 o'clock and each night a different pastor from one of our Protestant Churches will do the preaching

The scheduled plan is as follows: Saturday night, Rev. M. Lockhart; Friday night, Rev. O. C Lloyd; Sunday, Pastor H. M. Sandlin; Monday, Rev. G. G. Williams. Tuesday Rev Roswell Owens; Wednesday, Rev C. C.Wilcutt; Thursday, Singing Nite; Friday, Floyd Smith; Saturday July 10th, Jady Thomas; Sunday Pastor H. M. Sandlin, Monday N. E. Cook; Tuesday, Rev. Reese Farnell; Wednesday Grover Langston; Thursday night Singing Night; Friday night Rev. O. C. Hickman. These meetings will run nightly for two full weeks.

Jesse Jones and his organization of singers will play a big part in the Revival with their singing. Each minister will be expected to preach [illegible] evangelistic lines and the offering will go to the speaker of the night, each night. Come and hear these good preachers. You will be greatly benefited.

Peanut Marketing Quotas Removed For This Year

An executive order issued this week by War Food Administrator, Chester C. Davis, removed the marketing quota provisions on the 1943 crop of peanuts; simultaneously the Administrator issued an order designating the Commodity Credit Corporation as the sole purchaser of farmers' stock peanuts produced in 1943 according to Mr Cofer, Chairman of the Chilton County AAA Committee.

"Information we have received from the State AAA office indicates that Alabama farmers have planted more than one million acres of peanuts this year," Mr Cofer said. "Removal of marketing quotas on this crop will simplify and eliminate many of the marketing problems which we had last year. It also means that every farmer will receive the same price for his peanuts depending on the type and grade, since there will be no peanut acreage allotments, and peanuts will no longer be designated as 'excess' or 'quota' peanuts."

Support prices already announced by the Commodity Credit Corporation are for US No. 1 Spanish not less than $140 per ton and for US No. 1 runners, farmers will receive not less than $130 per ton. Peanuts grading below No. 1 will be subject to the usual market discount.

The Commodity Credit Corporation will contract with crushing and shelling concerns and peanut cooperative associations to buy peanuts from the farmers. The channel into which the peanuts will later flow is to be determined by the War Food Administrator according to the needs of food for the Armed Forces, our civilians and for lend-lease shipments.

Public Welfare Dept. Takes Over "Misfit" Investigations

In line with the policy of the State Selective Service System to prevent induction of men who may later become mental or nervous "misfits" in the army, the Chilton County Department of Public Welfare has been asked to cooperate with local selective service boards in furnishing to them any confidential information regarding potential registrants which may indicate mental, physical, or emotional problems of any kind, Miss Martha F. Burt, Director, sad today.

Procedures have been developed whereby, beginning July 1, 1943, local boards will furnish to county departments of public welfare lists of all registrants tentatively classified as 1-A. The public welfare department will clear its records for any information regarding these registrants which may relate to nervous or mental history, irregularities in school or work records, family backgrown, etc. Further, the public welfare department will clear with American Red Cross

TRUCE:
In Coal Mines

Under an agreement reached by Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes and John L. Lewis, the nation's 500,000 coal miners returned to the pits to work under a new truce expiring October 31. According to the announcement, production will be resumed under the terms of the old contract, which presumably include concessions granted by the War Labor board amounting to 23 cents a day.

The agreement followed Lewis' contention that the miners would return to work for the government only, which took over the supervision of the pits as a result of the first strike threat. Under arrangements, however, the government named the operators to run the mines and receive the profits.

Termination of the latest strike left the "portal-to-portal" pay issue up in the air. Lewis has argued for such pay, which represents compensation to the miners for time spent traveling to and from their working stations. The WLB declared it had no authority to pass on the question, suggesting court action or decision by the fair labor standards bureau of the government.

Possibility that Lewis might follow some such course was hinted in the miners' statement announcing their return to work.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO:
New Experience

July 1, 1943, will long be remembered in the United States. For, history will show that on that date, millions of American taxpayers will have begun paying their income taxes as they go instead of waiting till March 15 of the following year to settle their accounts with Uncle Sam.

Under the new pay-as-you-go system, employers will deduct 20 per cent from employees' wages or salaries. Farmers and others who obtain income from sources other than wages or salaries must estimate their yearly earnings and then make quarterly payments. In all cases, payments will be made after legal exemptions.

The pay-as-you-go law forgives all taxes for 1942 or 1943, whichever is lower, up to $50, and 75 per cent of all taxes above that figure. Although a person may not have to pay an income tax, the 3 per cent victory tax will be deducted from his check.

GERMANY:
Industries Hit

Eight hundred RAF bombers clouded the sky in a heavy raid on the German industrial center of Krefeld even as British bombers returned from an assault on Friedrichshafen farther to the south.

First used at Krefeld last fall, block-busters again were poured on the German city, center of special steel and parachute textile production. Site of hard coal mining, Krefeld also is known for its sulphur output. The British admitted the loss of 44 planes.

In attacking Friedrichshafen, the RAF blasted the former Zeppelin works housing a factory producing radio location equipment similar to the U. S. "radar." Hits were observed on all main buildings, including a huge hangar.

MEDITERRANEAN:
Warn Italy of Bombings

As Lieut.-Gen. Carl A. Spaatz stated that the Allies now could obtain air supremacy in the Mediterranean by concentrating their superior forces in any given locale, the Italian people were warned that their industrial centers would continue to be pounded as long as they produced goods for the Axis.

Commander of the North African air forces, General Spaatz said that any barrier before Allied troops could be reduced by the proper use of full air power.

Urging Italian workers to move with their families from factory areas, Allied radio broadcasts declared "Our airmen will bomb your war industries and communications as relentlessly as they have bombed your ports and ships during the African campaign."

Continuing their aerial assault, Allied planes, paced by British Wellingtons, plastered Sicily. Block busters were dropped on Messina, the terminal point for the ferry from Italy, and Sicilian airdromes. Meanwhile, the Italians were reported evacuating the civilian population from both Sicily and Sardinia.

RUSSIA:
Second Anniversary

On the eve of the second anniversary of the German invasion of Russia, the Reds called on the Allies to open up a second front in the west and claimed that 6,400,000 Nazis had fallen in action against them.

Declaring that delay in opening up a second front would only protract the war, the Reds said this would mean "a colossal increase in victims." The Reds also stated that they had reinforced their war economy with the erection of hundreds of new factories behind the lines.

In addition to Nazi losses in personnel, the Reds claimed they had knocked out 42,400 tanks; 43,000 planes, and 56,500 guns. They placed their own losses at 30,000 tanks; 23,000 planes, and 35,000 guns.

In discussing international relations, the Reds praised their coalition with Britain and the United States, adding "The Hitlerites' aim to split this coalition failed."

CORN:
Seek Stocks

In an effort to get corn moving to processors and manufacturers, Food Administrator Chester Davis named a committee representing all branches of the industry to work with him in breaking up the bottleneck.

Producers, traders and millers were brought together in the committee as Davis determined to attack the problem from all angles instead of considering it piece-meal.

According to reports, the conferees were studying a variety of proposals, chief among which was a plan that would limit the feeding of hogs to certain weights, and put the 1943 corn crop on an allocation basis, assuring processors' and manufacturers' needs first.

Other proposals studied included the cancellation of ceiling prices on corn; subsidizing farmers to release their farm stocks, and the requisition of terminal elevator supplies and allocation of such supplies among hard-pressed milling and mixing firms.

PACIFIC:
Supremacy on Guadalcanal

Braced by the arrival of Lockheed Lightnings and Vought Corsair fighter planes manned by experienced pilots, the Allies have achieved air superiority in the Solomons.

Work has been completed on the big air base of Henderson Field on Guadalcanal, and except for repair facilities, it is said to compare with the largest in the U. S. Meanwhile, the Japs have been bombed out of their forward aerial positions of Munda and Vila, 200 miles to the northwest.

Although the Jap Zero remains a formidable weapon, the Lockheed, with a climb over 30,000 feet, and the Vought, with a maximum efficiency between 20,000 and 30,000 feet, are not only proving better in performance but are also more heavily armored and gunned.

RACE RIOTS:
Spread to Detroit

With its attention to race riots first attracted by the "zoot-suit" uprisings in California, the federal government was forced to step in to quell outbreaks between blacks and whites which threw Detroit into an uproar.

Before 2,300 soldiers arrived in jeeps, trucks and armored cars to restore order, 23 people had died and 600 had been injured. Hundreds had been arrested and confined in the city's jails.

The trouble started after an altercation between whites and Negroes at the Belle Isle beach, then was fanned into flames with the spread of the erroneous rumor through the colored district that a Negro woman and child had been killed. Racial groups gathered quickly, stoning private cars and public trams and then beating the occupants.

When Detroit police could no longer control the situation, Gov. Harry Kelly of Michigan appealed to President Roosevelt for federal intervention. The President ordered the dispatch of the troops.

FREE FRENCH:
Agreement Reached

American and British insistence on settlement of the Free French wrangle resulted in the establishment of Gen. Henri Giraud as commander-in-chief of all French forces in North and West Africa. Gen. Charles DeGaulle was named leader of the forces in other French possessions in Syria and East Africa.

The appointment represented a victory for the Giraud faction, since the territories put under his wing are among the richest and most strategic of French possessions and contain the bulk of the French army. Furthermore, Giraud's leadership in the territory allows him a free hand in the disposition of many military commanders to whom DeGaulle was hostile.

At the time it announced the dual arrangement, the French national committee also revealed it had set up a military delegation composed of both Giraud and DeGaulle and their chiefs-of-staff to work out an eventual unification of both commands.

GOVERNORS' PARLEY
Marshall Sees Victory

Addressing the 35th annual governors' conference, Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. chief of staff, predicted certain victory, but not without great effort and heavy losses.

"What we need now is a stoic determination to do everything in our power to overwhelm the enemy, cost what it may, to reduce him to a supplicant under the impact of aroused and determined democracies," General Marshall said.

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL

We need stoic determination.

Although Tunisia gave the Allies an invaluable pattern for future operations, General Marshall said, the coming battle of Europe will not be a setup. Water-borne movements always produce complications, he declared, and they are merely a prelude to the heavy fighting remaining once the land has been reached.

JAP CURFEW:
Upheld by Supreme Court

In unanimous decision, the Supreme court affirmed the right of a military commander in imposing a curfew on Japanese residents of the Pacific coast in March, 1942.

Two American citizens of Japanese ancestry contested the army's action as applying against them as well as aliens. Of the 110,000 Japanese affected, 70,000 were citizens.

The court ruled the army had no time to make distinctions.

A LARGE detail of American soldiers stationed now at Accra, on the Gold Coast of West Africa, sat through a driving rainfall to see one of the "global" premieres of "Stage Door Canteen." Lt. Col. Flynn L. Andrew, who returned recently from an extended tour of the fighting fronts, reported on it. This was one of simultaneous showings of the picture on 38 battle fronts. It took place in an open-air theater, and a sudden rainstorm dampened the audience considerably, but not their enthusiasm.

W.N.U. SERVICE

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

IF FIRST SERGEANT CLARENCE A. GOLDSMITH, back in the old battery where I was supposed to have learned the art of cooking for the army, ever gets his hands on this, it will provide him with amusement throughout a long, hard winter.

When he reads that Private Edward Thomas Marion Lawton Hargrove, ASN 34116620, is giving advice to prospective soldiers, his derisive bellow will disturb the training program in the next regiment.

"My God!" he will roar. "Look who's learning who how to do what! My God! The blind leading the blind!"

It was once said, Sergeant Goldsmith, by the eminent vegetarian George Bernard Shaw that he who can, does; he who can't, teaches.

This, dear sergeant, is my contribution to the army and to posterity. Please go away and leave us young people to our studies.

CHAPTER I

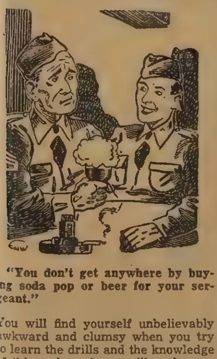
If I were giving advice to the boys who have already been called into the Army and will go away in a few days, I'd sum it all up in this: "Paint the town red for the rest of your civilian week. Pay no attention to the advice that is being poured into your defenseless ears for twenty-four hours a day. Form an idea of what Army life is going to be like. Leave your mind open."

Two weeks from now, you will be thoroughly disgusted with your new job. You will have been herded from place to place, you will have wandered in nakedness and bewilderment through miles of physical examination, you will look upon privacy and individuality as things you left behind you in a golden civilian society.

Probably you will have developed a murderous hatred for at least one sergeant and two corporals. You will writhe and fume under what you consider brutality and sadism, and you will wonder how an enlightened nation can permit such atrocity in its army. Take it easy, brother; take it easy.

Keep this one beam of radiant hope constantly before you: The first three weeks are the hardest.

For those first three—or possibly four—weeks, you will bear the greatest part of the painful process of adjusting yourself to an altogether new routine. In those first three weeks you will get almost the full required dose of confusion and misery. You will be afraid to leave your barracks lest the full wrath of the war department fall upon you.



"You don't get anywhere by buying soda pop or beer for your sergeant."

You will find yourself unbelievably awkward and clumsy when you try to learn the drills and the knowledge of this awkwardness will make you even more awkward. Unless you relax you can be very unhappy during those first three weeks.

When you are assigned to your basic training center you'll really get into it. You'll drill and drill, a little more each day, and when the sergeant tries to correct or advise you, you'll want to tear his throat out with your bare hands. You'll be sick of the sound of his voice before an hour has passed. The only comfort I can give you is the knowledge that the poor sergeant is having a helluva time too. He knows what you're thinking and he can't do anything about it.

You'll be inoculated against smallpox, typhoid, tetanus, yellow fever, pneumonia, and practically all the other ills that flesh is heir to. You'll be taught foot drill, the handling of a rifle, the use of the gas mask, the peculiarities of military vehicles, and the intricacies of military courtesy.

Most of what you are taught will impress you as utterly useless nonsense, but you'll learn it.

You'll be initiated into the mysteries of the kitchen police, probably before you've been in the Army for a week. Possibly two days later, you'll be sent on a ration detail to handle huge bundles of groceries. You'll haul coal and trash and ashes. You'll unpack rifles that are buried in heavy grease and you'll clean that grease off them. You'll stoke fires, you'll mop floors, and you'll put a high polish on the windows. You'll wonder if you've been yanked out of civil life for This.

All your persecution is deliberate, calculated, systematic. It is collegiate practice of hazing, applied to the grim and highly important task of transforming a civilian into a soldier, a boy into a man. It is the Hardening Process.

You won't get depressed; you won't feel sorry for yourself. You'll just get mad as hell. You'll be breathing fire before it's over.

Believe me or not, at the end of that minor ordeal, you'll be feeling good. You'll be full of spirit and energy and you will have found yourself.

You'll look at the new men coming in to go through the same hardening period, and you'll look at them with a fatherly and sympathetic eye. They will be "rookies" to you, a veteran of almost a month.

For practical advice, there is none better than the golden rule of the Army: "Keep your eyes open and your mouth shut."

At first, probably, you'll be inclined to tremble at the sight of every corporal who passes you on the street. You might even salute the first-class privates. Then, when the top sergeant neglects to beat you with a knout they rub GI (These two letters are the cornerstone of your future Army vocabulary. They stand for the words "Government Issue" and just about everything you get in the Army will be GI. Even the official advice. This story, on the other hand, is not GI.) salt into wounds, you might want to go to the other extreme. This way madness lies.

When corporals and sergeants are to be dealt with, always remember this: Make friendships first and leave the joking until later. When it's the top sergeant, it might be best to leave the joking permanently.

It can be very easy to start your military life on the wrong foot by giving your officers and noncommissioned officers the impression that you're a wise guy, a smart aleck. Soldiers, like senators, "don't like for a new guy to shoot his mouth off."

So much for the don'ts. On the "do" side, the most important thing for you to watch is your attitude. As a matter of straight and practical fact, the best thing that you can do is to reason that you are going into a new job. The job is temporary, but while you have it it's highly important.

As, when you go into a new job in civil life, you do your darnedest to impress your employer with your earnestness, your diligence, your interest in your work—go thou and do likewise in the Army. As in your civilian job, the impression is made in the first few weeks. You make that impression, starting from the very first day, by learning as quickly as you can, by applying yourself with energy to each task, no matter how small or how unpleasant it is. You don't get anywhere by buying soda pop or beer for your sergeant.

Brodie Griffith, managing editor of the Charlotte News, adjusted his ancient green eyeshade and began glancing through a sheaf of copy.

"Hargrove," he said, lighting a cigarette, "it beats the hell out of me what fate did mean for you. Dr. Garinger down at the high school said years ago that it didn't write a formal education in on your budget. Belmont Abbey found out that you weren't destined to be worth a hoot as a public relations man for a Benedictine college. The drugstore chain in Washington said you had neither the talent nor the temperament for soda-jerking. And you certainly fizzled as a theater usher. Maybe fate don't know you."

"May I have a cigarette?" I asked, reaching before he could protect them. "Day after day I work my fingers to the shoulder blades for neither thanks nor living wage. I am the feature editor of a progressive, growing newspaper. What makes it that? My heart's blood makes it that!"

"I would fire you tomorrow," he sighed, "if anyone else could possibly straighten out the chaos you have brought to this office. In the most underpaid brotherhood in the world, you are the most overpaid, two-headed brother."

"I am the most underpaid six-armed Siva," I snorted. "Look at me! I am the feature editor, the obituary editor, the woman's page editor, the hospital editor, the rewrite man, the assistant to the city editor, the commissar for paste and copy paper and cokes, the custodian of oral memoranda, the public's whipping boy, the translator and copyist of open-forum letters, the castigator of the composing room staff, the guest artist for ailing columnists, the tourist guide for visiting school children, the press representative at barbecue suppers of the United Brotherhood of Plumbers and Steamfitters, the butt of the office jokes."

"Period," said Mr. Griffith, "New paragraph."

"I lead a terrible, turbulent life," I wailed. "I am the man forgotten by Destiny."

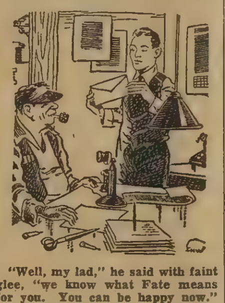
"If you will get your elbows off my desk," he said, "the boy can put the mail on it.

"What you need," he continued, sorting through a batch of letters, "is a tour of military service. The Army would make a man of you. I was in the Army in the last war. A top sergeant at eighteen. The Army did wonders for me."

"That's not much of a sales argument," I told him.

"Then again," he said, "if we must take up my whole busy day weeping over your sorrows, let's not burden the Army when it has a helluva job already. Concerning the whole matter, I would suggest that you apply yourself to making up the woman's page right now, lest you come down tomorrow morning and find someone else sitting in your chair. Leave my sight."

"There's not a letter there from New York," I asked, "with my name written on it in a delightfully illegible, feminine, and slightly red-headed hand?"



"Well, my lad," he said with faint glee, "we know what Fate means for you. You can be happy now."

"Is there ever?" he snorted. "Let's see—" and he went through the stack.

"Well, my lad," he said with faint glee, "at last we're getting somewhere. We know what Fate means for you. You can be happy now."

He handed me a long, white, innocent-looking envelope, addressed to me. The return address read, "Selective Service System—Mecklenburg County Board Number Three."

The President of the United States to Marion Hargrove, greeting!

The boy across the table in the Piedmont Grill lifted both hands and clapped his brow three times. He looked at the clock, then back at his breakfast, then back at the clock.

"My name is Hargrove," I said, handing him a cigarette.

"Mine is Piel," he said. "Melvin Piel. Tomorrow maybe you can make it 'Private' on the front."

"So long as you're healthy," I said, shrugging a shoulder. "It cuts down on the income tax."

"My hay fever," he wailed. "What will I do with my hay fever? In the jungles of South Carolina for maneuvers, with my hay fever! Oy!"

"Just look at it," he said on the way to the bus station, "maybe a posthumous medal my grandchildren will get. Private Melvin Piel, who gave his life valiantly and through the nose from hay fever yet. Sneezing to glory."

The bus station on that morning in July was a pathetic picture. Four large groups of boys, reconciled to the grim and gruesome life ahead of them, were bade farewell by wailing mothers and nobly suffering girl friends who had come down to see their loved ones off in a blaze of pathos. It was pretty terrible.

The buses swung out of the terminal, through midtown, and out toward the road to Fayetteville. The boys began to feel better, shouted farewells to startled girls on the street and finally broke into raucous song. Four flowers of the nation started a blackjack game on a suitcase in the back of the bus.

Brother Piel's spirits brightened a little. His smooth voice found its way through the hay fever and emerged in song. "It's a lovely day tomorrow," he sang. "Tomorrow is a lovely day.

"Look at me tomorrow," he said, breaking off suddenly, "Hay foot, Private Piel. Straw foot, Private Piel. Hay and straw and look at what I've got. Hay fever yet! Oy, what a life I'll lead!"

"Maybe what I'd better do when I get there, I'd better tell them I'd like to go north. They could use a good man in Alaska."

"The South Pole is your meat," I told him.

"That's it! The South Pole! Boy, I'm going to love the Army!"

The tumult and the shouting died about halfway to Fayetteville. The boys became quiet and thoughtful.

Philosophy of Governments Set Forth in New Fantasy

Antoine de Saint-Exupery's Delightful Fairy Story, "The Little Prince," Holds More Than Artistry for Adult and Child Alike.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

On a June day, when a gentle breeze brought the scent of new-mown grass in through the White House windows, President Roosevelt sat at his desk and read slowly to a group of correspondents from a typewritten sheet. It wasn't a formal document but it was an historic one—its purpose was to remind the Italian people that the military campaign against them which had just scored another Allied victory, Pantelleria, was the result of the misconduct of their rulers.

The message has been variously interpreted since, but to me, it contained one significant point—the reminder of the coming birth of a new nation; the new Italy which will emerge when the chains of arrogance and brute aggression which bind her are broken. There has been much talk about post-war policing of the re-made world; little thought of the philosophy which will underlie the forms which the reborn governments must follow. To me, such a philosophy is set forth in a work of pure fantasy. A hopeful note for nations and men is sounded in this delightful fairy tale by an author who found spiritual rebirth in the tragedy of the fall of his own nation.

I refer to Antoine de Saint-Exupery and his latest work, "The Little Prince."

Those who have read his "Night Flight," "Wind, Sand and Stars" and "Flight to Arras" are not surprised that he could create a fairy tale as delicate as this. Reviewers have disagreed as to whether it is for children or for adults. I believe it is for both, like "Alice in Wonderland." But the adult will find in "The Little Prince" something more than artistry and the children will sense that, too, I think.

Saint-Exupery is a brilliant aviator who built up night flying for the French airlines in South America. He fought against the Germans—"Flight to Arras" is the remarkable book which tells of that experience. He is now back with the French army in Africa, scene of the opening of "The Little Prince."

The Prince's Story

"Six years ago," the author says, "I made a forced landing in the Sahara alone, a thousand miles from help, and faced the necessity of repairing my motor by myself within the number of days my drinking water would last. The first morning, I was awakened by a determined but gentle voice which said: 'If you please, draw me a sheep.'"

So Exupery learned the story of how the Little Prince had found out what is really important in life.

The Little Prince is at once a delicate wisp of fancy, something so sheer that at moments he seems to float like a piece of thistledown before your imagination—again, he has all the reality of truth itself, he is eternal childhood, all that is gentle, and confiding and lovable, with the faint shadow of sorrow on his winsome face, he is the tug at your heartstrings that comes when youth looks at you in wide-eyed confidence, reaches up to take your hand—the same reminiscent tug when you look back and see the surprised and longing sorrow in the eyes of your own lost youth.

The Little Prince lived far away, it seems, on a tiny planet with three volcanoes so small that he cooked his breakfast on one of them. A flower came to his planet and the Little Prince loved her and cared for her but he couldn't understand her and so he left to try to find out why. He finally reached the earth, and here the fox taught him.

The Little Prince had never seen a fox—"Come and play with me," he said, "I am so unhappy." "I cannot play with you," the fox said, "I am not tamed." The Little Prince did not understand. He told the fox that he was looking for friends and asked him what tame meant.

Philosophy of a Fox

"It is an act too often neglected," said the fox, "it means to establish ties . . . to me, you are still nothing but a little boy who is just like a hundred other little boys. And I have no need of you. To you, I am nothing more than a fox like a hundred thousand other little foxes. But if you tame me, then we shall need each other. To me, you will be unique in the whole world. To you, I shall be unique in the whole world."

"I am beginning to understand," said the Little Prince, "there is a flower . . . I think she has tamed me."

"If you tame me," the fox went on, "it will be as if the sun came to shine on my life. I shall know the sound of a step that will be different from all others. Other steps send me hurrying back underneath the ground. Yours will call me like music out of my burrow. And then look: you see the grain fields down yonder. I do not eat bread. Wheat is of no use to me. The grain fields say nothing to me and that is sad. But you have hair that is the color of gold. Think how wonderful that will be when you have tamed me. The grain which is also golden will bring me back the thought of you. And I shall love to listen to the wind in the wheat . . ."

The fox gazed at the Little Prince for a long time. "Please—tame me," he said. "I want to very much," said the Little Prince, "but I haven't much time, I have friends to discover and a great many things to understand."

"One only understands the things one tames," said the fox, "men have no more time to understand anything. They buy things already made at the shops but there is no shop anywhere where one can buy friendship, and so men have no friends any more. If you want a friend, tame me . . ."

And so the Little Prince did, and another day when he came back, the fox said: "It would have been better if you had come back at the same hour. If, for example, you come at four o'clock in the afternoon, then at three o'clock I shall begin to be happy. I shall feel happier and happier as the hour advances. At four o'clock, I shall already be worrying and jumping about. I shall show you how happy I am. But if you come just anytime, I shall never know at what hour my heart is to be ready to greet you."

But finally, the Little Prince had to go.

"Ah," said the fox, "I shall cry."

Source of Comfort

"It is your own fault," said the Little Prince, "I never wished you any sort of harm; but you wanted me to tame you." "Yes, that is so," said the fox. "Then it has done you no good at all." "It has done me good," said the fox, "because of the color of the wheat fields."

And there, I think, perhaps some of you may find comfort—in the memories that come from the wheat fields, for the common and the beautiful things that remind you of someone from whom, perhaps this war has parted you.

That is only a flash I have given you of the story of "The Little Prince" which is not written for children only but for those who have the faith of little children and the understanding to see how tragedy can bring forth something which can light the long shadows which it leaves—out of the tragedy of his nation and the searchings of his own soul came this charming fantasy from the pen of the soldier-writer with the secret he learned from the Little Prince who learned it from the fox—

"It is only with the heart that one can see rightly; what is essential is invisible to the eye."

Kidneys Must Work Well-
For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

According to our way of thinking a little bit of squash is a mighty lotta squash. But, now comes John Broadhead and Chester Little with one that weighs five pounds, we got the stomachache just looking at it. Said vegetable was 34 inches in circumference and 12 inches in diameter. You know, squash being on the knotty side we're counting from bump to bump.

This one comes from the Cotton Mill by way of Claudie Wyatt. Seems that Mid Robinson was questioning one of his colored boys in regards to the new witholding tax. When he got to the one about dependants, he answered in the affirmative. He said that he had a sister and his mother. Now a child after reaching the age of eighteen is not considered a dependant unless physically or mentally unfit. "Is your sister mentally unballanced"? he was asked by Mid. "Yas suh," replied the negro. "Well," continued Mid, "what is her condition"? "You see, Boss, she has a terrible time wid constipation."

We surely must apoligize this week to Jean Donovan for naming someone else as presideht of the Y. W. A. last week when she is the president. Says Jean: "It is bad enough that I could not attend the meeting without having someone named in my place as president." Which of course we will have to agree. We always agree with women.—well, that is, nearly always.

Yep, it's watermelon time again. This week one of our friends asked us over to his house for a watermelon cutting, and natcherly we accepted. The best part of the melon was, that it was raised in his own patch—he said.

Next Sunday is July 4th. Most everybody is going to celebrate July 5th, because July 4th comes on Sunday and everything in town would be closed anyhow. And being as how the merchants say they aren't making any money anyhow, they'er just taking off the following day. Remember, stores will be closed Monday, July 5th.

We received word this week that John VanDerveer is on his way home. Now to you that might not mean so much. But to those around the old Chilton County News office it is a day to celebrate. Long and weary years John spent "putting the paper to bed" each week, and the "back shop" has never been the same since he left it. He is stationed at Camp Adair, Oregon and is scheduled to arrive here about Friday of this week.

An employer was trying to find out from one of his negro workers why he objected so strenuously to working on Saturday night. Said he, "Geo. you are willing to work Saturday afternoons and Sundays and Sunday night, when necessary. Now why won't you work on Saturday night?" Well, Boss, came the reply, "if you had ever been a colored man on Saturday night, you wouldn't ever want to be a white man again as long as you live."

NOTICE

CLANTON, ALA. June 28, 1943

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN—

Since there has been so much said in the Press and so many laws passed against labor, I would like to state a few facts about what the American Federation of Labor has done. I would like to state in the beginning that there has been no strikes in the A. F. of L. Unions since Pearl Harbor was bombed and there will be no strikes during the war. We are determined to win this war if we have to work 16 hours per day. for nothing, and will state after the war is over we will whip the Hitlerites and Tojos in this country.

This Carpenters Union in Clanton has bought $2000.00 worth of War Bonds. Paid in donations to the Red Cross, Community Chest, Crippled Childrens Clinics, sick benefits etc., $1267.00.

The records show that every War Plant, Army Camp and every defense job that has been built with organized labor has been completed ahead of schedule. Many is the time that the carpenters from here have driven 2 and 3 hundred miles at night and worked on the job all the next day. I wonder if the Legislators who are in the fight against organized labor have done as much toward winning the war as they? The Birmingham Post stated that the reason that the Bradford Bill was passed in [illegible] was because labor made the threat that if the Bill passed they would go on a strike. That is as baseless a lie as was ever printed. I was there all day June 22. lobbying against the Bill as we feel that it is not fair to Labor. Our Representative, Mr. G. C. Walker, stated on the Capitol grounds in the presence of W. L. Sanders, Franklin Patterson, Jr., Ben Lawrence, George Johnson of Tuscaloosa and Myself that he was opposed to the Bill and that he. (Mr. Walker) would vote against the Bill, if the Governor didn't want him to vote for the Bill. Do we need a Representative from this County or let the Governor represent us?

As you folks know we had one strike here at the Laundry and not one of those belongs to Organized Labor. So under the Connaly Smith Law I suppose someone would acuse me of being instrumental in causing that strike if it should happen again and I would go to Jail.

COLORED NEWS

The Alabama Women State Convention held its 58th Annual Session in Birmingham, June 16th through 18. Those attending from Clanton were: Messers L. M. Draper, M. B. Coker Emma Benjimen, L. M. Gunn, Lena White, Miss Martha Moore and five children to represent the Clanton Sunbeam Band.

During the session a statewide Princess Parade was held. More than 100 women took part in the march. Among the number was Princess Martha Moore who reported the sum of $20.00, which was the fourth highest raised in the group. The parade was beautiful with all wearing lovely evening gowns..

The War Food Administration is providing measures to requisition idle farm machinery where necessary and make it available for purchase by farmers who can put it to full use.

The total production of lint cotton in Alabama in 1941 was 378,798,905 pounds from 1,753,280.2 acres, an average yeild of 216.1 pounds. In 1942 the state produced 443,083,418 pounds on 1,707,342.1 acres, an average of 259.5 pounds of lint per acre.

Mulching Garden Crops Saves Moisture, Labor

Auburn, Ala.--- Mulching garden crops with any suitable litter against hot dry weather helps to hold mois- and is particularly valuable in late ture, control weeds, and save labor summer and fall gardens, points out Lyle Brown, extension horticulturist.

Most garden crops that grow to any height may be mulched to an advantage, especially corn, tomatoes, Irish potatoes, beans, raspberries, blackberries, and even others if care is taken not to let the mulching material cover up and smother the plants.

Straw, spoiled hay, leaves of any similiar coarse material may be used for mulching vegetables.

Mulches should be applied deep enough, 3 or 4 inches deep after settling, to keep down all but the larger weeds. There are futher advantages to mulches which outweigh their value in controlling weeds: They keep the surface soil cooler n hot weather; the soil beneath becomes loose and open, absorbing heavy and frequent rains better than bare soil; and the moisture from light showers is held instead of being largely evaporated into the air, as is the case with uncovered soils.

The Sub Deb Club composed of the following girls, Jean Waite, Martha Jean Stewart, Kathrine Bell, Elizabeth Andrews, "Teena" Wyatt, Ruth Jones and Kathryne Newell, were invited to spend the day at the home of Elizabeth Andrews.

"Teena" Wyatt was unable to attend on account of illness and was greatly missed by the club members.

A delicious dinner was enjoyed by all.

Everyone had fun and the Club was adjourned for the summer vacation.

Miss Ada Bennett has gone to visit her brother and family in Piedmont where her mother is visiting.

Mrs Frank Hogan of Spigener was in Clanton visiting friends and relatives last Wednesday.

Tuesday July 6th has been set aside as the day to clean up the cemetery at Chestnut Creek. Everybody who is interested is asked to come or send someone with the necessary tools to work with and help get the cemetery in good condition.

Millard Lancaster left Sunday night for Seattle, Washington where he will visit a brother whom he hasn't seen for 29 years.

Mrs J. H. Williams of Clanton, Mrs J. H. Apperson of Billingsley, Mrs. E. E. Headley of Jemison, three sisters, left Tuesday night by bus for Hot Springs, Ark., where they will spend a month.

Mrs Mary Bell Dobbs and little daughter of Anniston were here for a visit with her parents last week-end.

Mr and Mrs Hamp Harris and son Joe, have moved back to Clanton. Mr Harris leaves soon to take his place in the Army. Mrs Harris and Joe will make their home here with her mother for the duration.

Little Sue Cargile of Birmingham is visiting her grand mother, Mrs Mark Tucker and the R. M. Tuckers this week.

Miss Frances Elaine Mims, daughter of Mr and Mrs Charles Milton Mims and James Carl Martin, son of Mr and Mrs J. Mell Martin were married on June 19th at the First Baptist Church in Ashville North Carolina, with Rev John W. Inzer, reading the marriage vows.

Members of the Labratory Staff of Moore General Hospital were the attendants.

The altar was beautifully decorated with flowers and palms and the bride was lovely in an ensemble of egg shell white with navy accessories and corsage of orchids. The groom was in the official dress uniform.

The couple will make their home for the present in Swannanoa, N. C. where the groom is stationed.

Members of the Sub Deb Club were invited to attend a farewell supper given in honor of Miss Jean Waite by Misses Willodeen and Martha Stewart on Monday night. Tokens of friendship were presented the honoree and a delicious supper was served by the hostess.

Those enjoying the party were: the honoree Miss Jean Waite, Teena Wyatt, Ruth Jones, Katherine Bell, Kathryne Newell and the hostesses.

Miss Waite is the acting president of the Club and will be greatly missed by all the members.

Miss Margaret Tyus of Miami, Fla. spent part of last week with her parents, Mr and Mrs A. J. Tyus.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

NEWS FROM

THORSBY NEWS

By J. ARCHIE OGBURN

Among the many new comers who have recently come to Thorsby to live are Mr and Mrs Heida who have purchased the place known to most of us as the Townsend Place. Mr and Mrs Heida have come here from South Dakota, Mr Heida having come frm Holland some twenty years ago, and Mrs Heida being a former Tennessean. These people are fast making friends here and will no doubt be a wonderful asset to Thorsby. Mr. Heida is deeply interested in the Milk Plant which is soon to open here, since he has been in the dairy business most of his life. He intends to bring some fine cattle here from the North and will be interested in talking to anyone who wishes to talk to him about the dairy business. We welcome the Heidas to Thorsby.

Another deal which has just taken place here is the sale of the Charles Cleckler place, formerly owned by Mrs. Christ. This property has been purchased by Mr and Mrs Ashcraft from Sylacauga. We wish to welcome them, and wish for them happiness in their new home.

While we are speaking of other improvements let's not miss the new Clinic which is being established here by our Dr. Franklin, who has recently moved his office into the home located just below the bus station, perhaps better known as the home owned by Mrs. Spurgeon Calloway. This home has been re-decorated throughout and when the set-up is completed, will be something of which will be a credit to Thorsby.

Let's all pull for our little town—we've got what it takes—the finest people you'll find anywhere, and if we all get together, clean up our premises and do all we can for the betterment of our town, people will be bound to see and hear about us, and more good folks will come to our town.

NEWS FROM

LIBERTY HILL

There will be a working at the Church on Wednesday July the 14th for the purpose of cleaning off the cemetery and Church yard. We hope everyone who is interested will come and bring tools to do the work. We are hoping everybody will cooperate in letting everyone they can know about the working as some do not read the papers, that would come if they knew it. If it is raining that day come the next day. Our Revival will begin on Sunday, July the 18th. Hope everybody will come praying for a great meeting for we feel we need to get very close to the Lord in these trying times.—J. E. Littlejohn and Zack Lowery, Committee.

It Must Be Love

In their younger days they had been sweethearts. Now in old age, they sat and talked of those long-gone times—their first kiss, their first quarrel, their last kiss, their last quarrel.

Gradually the glamour of the past held sway, and the old man said:

"Ay, Maggie, I have never forgotten you. I've never loved another!"

"Andrew," she replied, with moisture in her eyes, "you're just as big a liar as ever—and I believe you just the same!"

Don't Bank on It

I'm the happiest man in the world tonight, Sammy. Your darling sister has just promised to marry me.

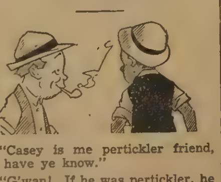
"Aw, you can't believe anything she promises. She promised to take me to the movies an' she didn't."

Good Combination

Investigator—What's your name, little boy?

Pickaninny—Ah'se named after mah parents, Ferdinand and Liza. Ah's called Ferdiliza.

NOT CHOOSY



"Casey is me pertickler friend, oi have ye know."

"G'wan! If he was pertickler, he wouldn't be yer friend."

Right Word!

Jones—I see you're carrying a new rake and hoe, Tom. Do you have a Victory garden plot?

Smith—I'll say so. The bugs and worms are planning to eat everything of ours up.

Frogs Croak Too

Billy—A cat isn't the only thing that has more than one life.

Tommy—No? What else has?

Billy—Well, our cow kicks the bucket every time we milk her.

Really Hot

Having attended first-aid lectures, the young wife was quite pleased when hubby came home looking and feeling seedy.

Proudly producing her thermometer, she proceeded to take his temperature.

The result so startled her that she scribbled a note to the doctor and sent it by the maid.

"Please come at once," it ran. "My husband's temperature is 136."

Soon back came the reply:

"The case is beyond my skill. Send for the fire-engine."

Inviting Warning

She—My little brother will tell if he sees you kissing me.

He—But I'm not kissing you.

She—Well, I thought I'd tell you anyway.

No Loss

Mabel—I'm so upset, I don't know what to do! My husband just ran off with another woman. I can't control myself.

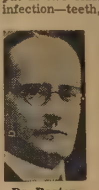
Marge—You mustn't try. You'll feel better after a good laugh.

TO YOUR Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

LOW BACK PAIN



Dr. Barton

For many years cases for low back pain and sciatica have been put in two classes (a) those due to infection—teeth, tonsils, gums, gall bladder and other organs and (b) those due to injury—lifting a heavy object, a misstep, swinging at an object (often a golf ball) and missing it, a fall, braking a car and other accidents. The injury usually causes a strain or sprain of the ligaments and other structures surrounding the joint between the last bone of the spine and the hip bone. This is called sacro-iliac sprain.

During the past three or four years we are learning that many of these cases called sacro-iliac sprain are really cases where the little cushions or disks between the bones of the spine have been broken through or ruptured by the same type of accident which causes the sacro-iliac sprain. It is only after the usual treatment—manipulation under an anesthetic and use of a brace—has failed to give relief that ruptured disk is suspected. Each spine bone is called a vertebra and the disk or cushion between them is an intervertebral disk.

Dr. W. E. Dandy in Annals of Surgery, Philadelphia, points out that rupture of the intervertebral disk accounts for an overwhelming percentage of the heretofore incurable and untreatable low back pains and sciaticas, miscalled sacro - iliac strains and arthritis of the spine.

Formerly iodized oil was injected into the spinal canal, but this does not always show the rupture even when present. Then as it was found that practically all (96 per cent) of ruptured disks were situated between the last and second to last spine bone in lower back, the iodized oil method is not absolutely necessary, particularly because it is known that a "concealed" disk occurs in 25 per cent of cases. Dr. Dandy has been able to make the diagnosis of ruptured disk 63 times just by examination without use of iodized oil.

Cases of ruptured intervertebral disks are now successfully treated by operation.

However, there is the other side of this matter; that is that many patients and some physicians also, may now make the mistake of thinking that most cases of low back pain and sciatica are due to ruptured disks. As a matter of fact, sacro-iliac strain occurs more often than does ruptured disk and manipulation, rest and use of a brace bring about a cure.

Watch for Early Diabetes Symptoms

There has come to me a copy of the Diabetic Digest, published quarterly by the Philadelphia Metabolic society. This magazine has spread information among physicians so that physicians would be on the lookout for early and unrecognized cases of diabetes. Thus the level of treatment of this disease has been raised in Philadelphia and vicinity.

The facts about diabetes in Philadelphia that have been forwarded to physicians might well be studied by everybody because diabetes strikes many homes. Some of the information is not pleasant; "other information brought out by the study is most encouraging to diabetics and to doctors."

1. Two and five-tenths persons per day die and have diabetes mentioned in their death certificate.

2. One person dies in diabetic acidosis (coma) almost every other day.

3. Almost twice as many persons died of diabetic acidosis (coma) as died with infections of various natures without acidosis.

4. One-half of the persons dying with diabetes did not know of their disease until their last illness.

5. More persons died with diabetes of causes other than diabetes (but having diabetes) than died of diabetes alone.

It is the hope of the committee that other county societies throughout the state and the nation will take up this work and that diabetic individuals will lead longer, more useful and happier lives because of these efforts.

Just how much can be accomplished by the new knowledge of the treatment of diabetes by diet and insulin is shown by the fact that in 1910 average age at death of the diabetic was about 44 years and in 1936 it was 58 years.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—I have blue marks on each arm. How can I get rid of them?

A.—These blue marks may be tiny broken veins. They will do no harm. They may be removed by electrolysis or surgery.

Q.—I am 24 years old and I take spells. When these happen I seem to get in an electric state all over. Is this serious?

A.—As you do not become unconscious, spells may not be serious. Ask your physician about them.

Who's News This Week

By

Delos Wheeler Lovelace

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK. — John Jeremiah Pelly, president of the Association of American Railroads, takes a rightful pride in his contribution to wartime America. What his trains have done in hauling war supplies and moving troops on top of their regular traffic makes every railroad man from president to brakie hold his head high. This is the second war Pelly has had to contend with. Twenty-five years back he was keeping soldiers and munitions rolling successfully over the Illinois Central, for which he was then superintendent of the Southern division.

This Man Fulfilled Boyhood Promise Made to Mother

Leaving the University of Illinois early because his family needed an extra bread winner, he started out teaching school in Anna, Ill., where he was born 65 years ago.

When the Illinois Central gave him his first job as a clerk at Anna, he promised his mother he'd give her a ride some day in his special car. He kept his word. Before that, however, he had been a section hand. The fine physique he'd gained hoeing onions on his father's farm stood him in good stead there. Soon he was foreman of the gang and in 1904 his road made him a division supervisor. Later he worked all over the system, rising with each move. When he left the Illinois Central in 1926 to head the Central of Georgia Railway, he had become vice president in charge of operations.

In 1929 he moved to New York as top man of the New Haven. Five years later even the travel-worn commuters mourned when he left for his present job.

ASKED once what his hobby was, James Vincent Forrestal replied "obscurity." That's something he gets little chance to enjoy these days in his role of undersecretary of the navy. In fact, ever since he took over that job in August, 1940, just two months after congress created it, and became the driving force behind the production of ships, planes and guns, he has been very much in the foreground. Blunt in speech, quick in his grasp of new and intricate problems, steady under pressure, this civilian from Wall Street hits it off well with the Annapolis-trained career officers.

Has Obscurity for Hobby--Never Able To Meet Up With It

Forrestal is a product of the Hudson valley. He was born in Beacon, N. Y., 51 years ago. After graduating from high school there, he tried his hand at newspaper reporting before entering college. He started at Dartmouth, but finished at Princeton. Despite the fact that he had to work his way through, he found time to edit the Daily Princetonian.

The last war, in which he was a naval aviator, interrupted his financial career for a couple of years, but soon after the Armistice he was back at it. The twenties were still young when he became Clarence Dillon's right-hand man. In June, 1940, when President Roosevelt called him to Washington as an executive assistant, he left the presidency of Dillon Read & Co. to accept.

BRIG. GEN. Patrick Jay Hurley's tasks in the present war have been as minister to New Zealand and as President Roosevelt's special representative in the Middle East. They haven't kept him clear of excitement and danger, though. As a result his country has just awarded him the Distinguished Flying Cross. He has made extremely hazardous flights to the South Pacific, the Orient, the Middle East and Russia. On these he displayed "conspicuous courage and initiative," his citation read.

Kicked at Missing Shooting, but That Is Soon Remedied

Early in the war he was kicking that he had missed all the shooting. Then while he was in Port Darwin, the Japs cut loose with an air raid, and he was slightly wounded. He had had two other close calls. Last December while he was touring the Russian front a land mine left by the Nazis just missed blowing up his car. In April, when on his present mission, his plane developed engine trouble over the South Atlantic and the pilot barely got it back to Brazil.

General Hurley won a Distinguished Service Medal with American Expeditionary Forces in France in World War I when he fought in the Aisne-Marne, Argonne, and St. Mihiel sectors. In this conflict his organization of blockade running into the Philippines and his observations in Russia got him an Oak Leaf Cluster.

The Spanish-American war was the only scrap of his lifetime he missed. He tried to join Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders then, but they ruled him too young. He was born down in the Choctaw country of what was then Indian Territory.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

MANY an American of pioneer background can remember when all the floors in the house except the parlor were covered with woven rag rugs and carpets. Today there is something about the vigor, simplicity and economy of these colorful old-time floor coverings that fits our mood. The local weaver with a rug loom is flourishing in many communities.

The modern weaver has an assortment of colors in warp and filler that may be used with the rags that you have prepared in the manner shown here. About one and three quarter pounds of sewn rags will be required for a square yard of carpet. Rugs may be either cotton or wool but do not use both in the same rug. The rags should be soft and clean and hems or uneven finishes should be removed. Dye white rags the colors you wish to predominate.

Odors and Bacteria

Numerous wholesome odors that emanate from various substances or permeate the air of large areas are produced by the present or past action of bacteria, says Collier's. Among them are the bouquet of wines, the fragrances of perfumes and the flavors of fine tobacco, butter and cheeses; also the smells of the sea beach, a wood in winter, a newly tilled field and the earth after a rain.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

A chain of rest stations is rising across northern Brazil along the route of workers trekking into the Amazon Basin gateway of Belem to increase collection of wild rubber. They provide medical aid and other human comforts to the 50,000 additional workers being recruited for the Amazon rubber forces.

The rubber normally used in one month's manufacture of baby pants can make 2800 rubber lifeboats for ocean-going planes.

A check of 7,200 farm-owned trucks showed that only 25 per cent of the tires on them were good; 54 per cent were fair; and 21 per cent were in poor condition.

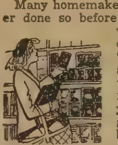
Use a Water-Bath for Canning Tomatoes, Fruits
(See Recipe Below)

Try Canning!



Many homemakers who have never done so before will be hard at work doing some old-fashioned "putting up" this summer. Not only will it be economical to put up your own Victory garden's surplus, but also it will be a vital step in stretching those precious points next winter.

Canning's simpler today and much of the spoilage that occurred formerly can be prevented if the homemaker checks the causes of spoilage. There's a reason for every type of spoilage, and what's more important, every one of them can be prevented if she's careful.

First, it's not smart to use leftover produce that you wouldn't eat at the table. Select only prime fruit and vegetables in perfect condition. Best quality goes into commercial canning, and so it should for home canning. Get out into the garden early in the morning to get vegetables and fruits and can immediately, or if you market, tie a bandana on your hair and go out early in the morning to get your produce while it's still fresh.

Cleanliness is another important factor. Remember that food spoils for other reasons than that the jar is not air-tight. More spoilage than you ever dreamed of can result from not washing the food properly and discarding bruised or imperfect vegetables and fruits. Be sure to peel the food, if it is to be peeled, so that no dirt and the bacteria that lurk in it get rubbed in the product as it is peeled.

Work as quickly as possible with the food once it's started on its way to the can. Flat sour, which occurs in vegetables, can often develop in vegetables, for example, if the jars in which the precooked food is placed stand too long before processing. Too much delay in handling food from one step to the other may cause a great loss of vitamins and mineral.

Do as much preparation ahead of time as possible like checking equipment and getting together jars which are examined for imperfections and nicks. Wash all jars and caps in soapy suds (not in cool dishwater after the breakfast dishes!) and scald or sterilize them.

Select Day for Canning.

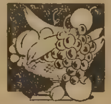
If there's a huge quantity of food to be canned, it would be a good idea to round up as many friends and neighbors to help, and to do the canning on a community basis. In many towns, pressure cookers which are necessary for canning non-acid vegetables, are available at the canning center. Then, if all produce must be canned in a single day, it will be necessary to recruit as much help as possible from others in your community and give them your time when needed.

Canning day should be canning day only, not laundry day, general cleaning and baking day, too. It's better, too, not to be overly ambitious and try to do three bushels of tomatoes, all in one sweep, for you will do better with a small quantity, and feel less tired, even though it may take several days in which to finish.

Processing Foods.

Fruits and vegetables need processing which means the application of heat to the product for a certain definite period of time. You just can't put fruit into jars, seal and store and expect them to stay in perfect condition.

Water-Bath Method.



In some cases, when pressure cookers are not obtainable, a water-bath may be used for vegetables and meats. However, the water-bath is more preferable for tomatoes (which are acid, and technically a fruit) and fruits.

To make a water bath, use a large wash boiler or deep vessel fitted with a rack made of laths, perforated material or galvanized wire. Have a tight fitting cover.

Place prepared jars on the rack which must hold them at least ½ inch above bottom of the canner. The water bath should be filled with boiling water which comes at least an inch or two above the tops of the jars. Jars on the rack should not touch each other. Start counting processing time as soon as water around jars begins to bubble, and keep it boiling during entire processing period. If necessary, add boiling water, if it boils away, for the water must always be boiling at least an inch above the tops of the jars.

Here are some recipes for common fruits and vegetables:

Tomatoes.

Scald tomatoes in boiling water 1 minute. Soak in cold water 1 minute, peel, core, quarter and pack into clean, sterile jars. Add no water. Add a teaspoon of salt to each quart of tomatoes. Put on band and screw band firmly tight. Process in hot water bath for 35 minutes.

Peas.

Shell, grade peas, using only prime quality. Pre-cook 3 to 7 minutes depending on size. Pack loosely, adding hot water to within 1 inch of top. Adjust cap and process in pressure cooker, 60 minutes at 10 pounds, or 180 minutes in hot water bath.

Beets.

Use small, uniform beets. Wash carefully. Leave the roots and stems long. Boil 15 minutes. Plunge into cold water, remove the skins and pack into clean jars. Add 2 teaspoons of salt and sugar mixture to each quart jar if desired. Fill to within ½ inch of top, with boiling water. Put on cap, screwing band firmly tight. Process in hot-water bath 120 minutes or in pressure cooker 40 minutes at 10 pounds.

Lynn Says

Successful Canning: It is easy to do the right thing with foods to be put up in cans if you know the principles and follow directions.

Follow the slogan, "two hours from garden to kettle." Use only fresh, firm, ripe rather than overripe produce. Wash all foods carefully before attempting any preparation.

Check jars, rubbers if used, and caps along with equipment before you start canning. Work at the range as much as possible to save time between steps. Have sterile jars on one side of range, fill them from kettle on stove (or from colander near stove, if using fruit which is not pre-cooked), and place immediately in water bath or pressure cooker or oven.

Jars should be washed in a pan of soapy suds and scalded, inverted on a clean towel until used.

A PEOPLE IN DISTRESS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 1:6-14; 2:23-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—They cried, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.—Exodus 2:23.

Today is Independence Day. Yet much of the world is in bondage, and the rest of it in a struggle to prevent freedom from perishing from the earth.

Our lesson too is about a nation in bondage, but we learn from it that there is a way to be free. Even so we declare the way of personal liberty which is open and free.

The Lord Jesus Christ opened it at Calvary's tree and anyone who is still the bond slave of Satan may make this a great and glorious Independence Day by now declaring his faith in the Deliverer of our souls.

We begin today a series of lessons in the book of Exodus which reveal the high and mighty hand of God working on behalf of His people.

The family of Jacob—or, as the Bible calls them, the children of Israel—prospered in Egypt particularly as long as Joseph and the rulers who remembered him were alive. But they soon learned one of life's bitter lessons, that—

I. Prosperity Is Not Always a Blessing (1:6-11).

The Hebrews were a peaceful, law-abiding people. They were God's chosen people, and as He blessed them they prospered, and thus innocently they brought upon themselves the hatred of the suspicious Egyptians.

Prosperity is never an unmixed blessing. We as a nation know that to be true. Not only does it lead to a certain softening of the sinews, but all too often it results in a weakening of the moral fiber, which makes man easy prey to the attack of the enemy of our souls.

Is it not strange, then, that we should—even in times of all-out warfare—be so eager to chase the dollar that we are willing to neglect our children, forget church, live unnatural lives, just that we may make more and more money?

The Egyptians had, humanly speaking, reason to fear this great nation which was growing up in their midst. The new rulers did not know Joseph and had forgotten the spirit in which he had brought his family into the land. The leaders of the Egyptians therefore made plans which appealed to their brilliant leaders as politic and wise. But they reckoned without God, and the burdens and afflictions they placed on the Israelites only served to bring further blessing.

So Israel learned a lesson which our present sorry world can profit by, that—

II. Persecution Is Not Always a Burden (vv. 12-14).

The people of Israel did not appreciate it, but the bitterness of their bondage was a blessing in disguise. Note that—

1. It Kept Them Separate as a People. Affliction often serves to keep God's people separated from the world. It is doing so today.
2. It Disciplined Them and Prepared Them for the Hardships of Their Wilderness Journey. We too do well to remember that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," and that if we are properly "exercised" thereby, our sorrows may yield rich fruit in our lives.
3. It Threw Them Back upon God. Many are the saints of God who have found that the fiery trial, the burden so hard to understand, or some affliction of their body, has caused them to bring their burden to the Lord. We have traveled far on the road of faith when we have reached the place where we learn that "man's extremity is God's opportunity."

They had only one place to turn. They were hemmed in on every side, but, as ever, they found that the way up no man can close. They called on their God.

III. Prayer Always Brings Deliverance (2:23-25).

Does God really know when His people suffer? Does He really care? Yes, He does. "They cried," and "God heard" and "remembered." That's all we need to know. The groaning of His people had already stirred God's gracious and tender heart. But He waited to hear their cry before He answered. Such is the law of prayer. May we not forget it. Far too often we turn to everyone and everything else, and finally, in desperation, to God. Why not turn to Him first?

Does God hear and answer prayer? Yes, but remember that real prayer is the cry of faith coming from the heart of an obedient child. God may answer other prayers, but He always answers such a prayer.

His answer may not be in accord with our opinion of what it should be, for His wisdom is infinite. He knows better than we what the answer should be. Let us trust the Judge of all the earth to do right (Gen. 18:25).

for any available information to the Medical Devision of the State Selective Service System to be used confidentially by physicians and psychiatrists at induction centers.

In instructions sent out recently to all local draft boards, examining physicians, and medical advisory boards, the State Selective Service System stated: "We want to stop the induction of the social misfits and inadequates. We cannot stop all of them from joining the various components of the Armed Forces, but we can stop trafting them."

This new responsibility in assisting in "screening" inductees is the second cooperative service undertaken by the Department of Public Welfare in regard to selective service boards. Since November 1940, the Chilton County Public Welfare Department has worked closely with local boards in making investigations of doubtful cases of dependancy. In accepting this new job for the public welfare agency, Miss Loula Dunn, State Commissioner of Public Welfare, wrote Lt. Col. J. T. Johnson, Jr., Acting Director of the State Selective Service System: "As I have indicated to you previously, this Department at all times stands ready to provide to your agency any service which we are equipped to render While I am sure you recognize that we do not have on the staffs of our county departments of public welfare psychiatric social workers, the county departments will upon request of the local draft boards be pleased to furnish the Selective Service Headquarters with pertinent factual data in regard to physical and mental condition of registrants known to the agency."

Miss Burt said that a recent meeting of local selective service boards and State Selective Service officials held in Selma, Alabama, had been attended by representatives of the welfare department to review procedures regarding this new responsibility.

Chilton County 1 Of 7 In State To Reach June Bond Quota

The report showing the June War Bond sale has just been released from the state office and Chilton County again reached and exceeded its quota by a very small figure. The writer acting as county executive chairman for the sale of these bonds is most grateful to every man, woman and child that had anything to do with the sale of these securities. The list of names is too long to mention here, except I want to recognize the service of the ladies who sold bonds on the streets of Clanton for several days near the close of the month.

Chilton County was one of seven counties to reach its quota for June. The state as a whole made its poorest showing during the past month in the sale of War Bonds. This is due to a number of things. Judge Reynold is proud of the fact that Chilton met every quota assigned to her during the year 1942-43. The new year begins July 1, and the quota has not been announced but let us make it one of the best months of the whole year.

Get ready to buy a bond this month two or three if possible.

The other counties reaching their quotas for June beside Chilton were: Chambers, Clay, Colbert, Conecuh, Dale and Madison. Again let me thank you for your much appreciated cooperation.—Patterson Hicks, Acting County Chairman.

Time To Vaccinate Your Dog; Here Are The Dates

Dr. W. L. Parrish will visit various places over Chilton County for the next several days for the purpose of vaccinating all of the dogs in the county. REVS. SHIELDS AND THOMPSON RETURN FROM SUCCESSFUL OKLAHOMA CONVENTION

GUY SHIELDS — ALVA THOMPSON

Rev. Guy Shieds and Rev. Alva Thompson of this city returned to Clanton Thursday from the National Convention of the Fundamental Christian Associatiin, of which Rev. Shields is the General Superintendent.

The convention was held in the Latter Reign Baptist church of Oklahoma City, June 22nd through the 24th, and ministers and Christian workers gathered from all over the nation for the time.

Rev. Shiells was assisted by Rev. William Kitchen, Assistant General Superintendent, pastor of the Latter Reign Baptist church; Rev. H. A. Swam, General Sceretary, pastor of Shield of Faith Tabernacle of Charleston, West Virginia, and Rev. Alva Thompson, General Treasurer, pastor of Shield of Faith Tabernacle of Luverne, Alabama.

Revs. Shields and Thompson are to be in a city-wide tent revival in the city of Montgomery July 1st through July 24h. The tent is located in the 300 block on Bell Street in Montgomery. They will be working with Rev. Thos. C. Branford, pastor of the Fundamental Tabernacle of Montgomery. The Harmony Sisters of Rutlelge, Alabama, will also be rendering special singing in the meeting.

Plans are being made at this time for the coming of the First Annual Camp Meeting of Clanton, July 25th through August 8th. Further announcements will be forthcoming relative to this non-sectarian tent Camp Meeting.

Buck Private "Big Jim"

BIG JIM FOLSOM

Runner-up in the race for Governor last summer, Alabama's "Big Jim" Folsom, has finally been accepted in the army in spite of his great height. Folsom succeeded in getting a waiver from the surgeon general's office and was admitted as a buck private. The army will have to make special oversize uniforms and shoes for the 7-foot Cullman giant who wears a number 17 shoe.

Mrs. Samuel Johnson Receives Citation

Mrs Samuel Johnson has been sent the "Purple Heart" awarded her husband, the late Commander Samuel E. Johnson, by the President of the United States, for Military Merit. The Purple Heart was established by Gen. George Washington in the year 1782. It is a beautiful thing and the first, so far as is known, to be awarded in Chilton County.

Accompanying the decoration is a Certificate, stating that the award was presented for military merit shown in action when he received wounds resulting in his death, on December 7th 1941.

It was presented on the 15th day of May and was signed by Frank Knox.

CANDLELIGHT SERVICE AT JEMISON BAPTIST CHURCH

There will be a Candlelight Service at Jemison Baptist Church, Sunday night, July 11, at 8 p. m. It will be in honor of the boys from this community in the Service.

Program:
Prelude.
Song - "Now The Day Is Over."
Scripture and Prayer.
Memorial Service.
Taps.
Dedication Service: (We invite a member of each family to be present to light a candle in memory of a relation or friend).
Presentation of honor roll to the Church.

This program will be presented by the young people of the Church.

Preaching service will follow the Candlelight Service, conducted by Rev. Edward L. Jackson.—Evelyn Cooper.

Daily Vacation Bible School Starts At Clanton Methodist

The Daily Vacation Bible School begins at the Methodist Church Monday morning, July 12th at 8 o'clock. Mrs. S. C. Porch will be Supt. of the school. Mrs L. C. Warr, Supt of Intermediates. Mrs Aubrey Lewis, Sr., Supt of the Juniors. Mrs. L. J. Stewart, Supt. of the Primaries. Martha Gene Stewart, Supt of the beginners. Each Supt. will have corps of teachers and helpers to assist in the department.

Each morning at 10:15 there will be a movie picture shown. Mr. Chas. Wade has kindly consented to assist in showing these pictures. The school will begin at 8 a. m. and close at 11 a. m. All children of the community are cordially invited to attend the school. The Supts. and all the helpers are requested to meet at the home of Rev and Mrs O. C. Lloyd Friday night, July 9th at 7:30 o'clock to complete plans for the school.—O. C. Lloyd, Pastor.

FLEM HIGGINS, JR. LEAVES FOR OFFICERS TRAINING SCHOOL

Flem Higgins, Jr., son of Mr and Mrs Flem Higgins of Clanton, left July 1, to inter Naval Officers Training classes at Howard College in Birmingham.

Flem was one of 187 out of 400 who was selected from the State of Alabama who passed mental and physical qualification tests.

Revival To Start At Sardis

Beginning next Sunday night at 8:30 p. m. with Bro. Hardin Pearson from Macon, Ga., doing the preaching a Revival will start at Sardis.

Bro. Pearson has just closed a revival at Maplesville. We cordially invite everyone who can to attend this revival for we are sure you will receive a blessing. We urge everyone to be much in prayer for this revival. —Rev. Hymon Atchison

AMERICAN LEGION TO MEET AT MONTGOMERY

Plans have been completed for the 25th annual convention of the Department of Alabama, American Legion, which will be held in Montgomery, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 13 and 14. The second wartime meeting of Alabama's veterans of World Wars I and II is expected to attract a large attendance as a program of outstanding interest has been arranged, Commander James S. Saliba, of Florence, announced.

HINES BROTHERS TO BE AT UNION BAPTIST CHURCH

The Hinds Brothers Gospel Singers will be at the Union Baptist Church(Colored) Sunday July 11, 1943 at 6:30 p. m. Everybody is invited to come. To our white friends if you wish to hear some good singing then don't miss this singing on Sunday.

Admission will be 15c and 20c. These singers are from Birmingham, Alabama.

"Would you mind reading the whole menu to Marie? She's taking French lessons."

Revival Closes At Maplesville

The Community-wide Revival conducted by Rev. Hardin Pearson of Macon, Ga., at the school auditorium at Maplesville came to a close last Monday night.

It was said by many to be the largest religious gathering in Maplesvilie in 25 years. The meeting ran 3 weeks. People came from various sections of the county. The auditorium was packed the last night. A hundred came on profession of faith and reclamation. One of the prettiest sights to be seen was 19 standing on the banks ready to go down into the water to be baptized. There are about 30 more yet to be baptized. Rev. Hyman Atchison and Rev Reubin Bearden did the baptizing.

Rev Pearson is a fearless gospel preacher, condeming sin in high places. He not only points people to God but to the Church. Many people said this Gospel preaching reminded them of 50 years ago. Not only the Maplesville Baptist Church strengthened with many members added but Stanton, Pleasant Grove, Pilgrim's Rest, Mulberry, Cox Chapel and Sardis. All of these churches got new members.

The congregation singing of the old Gospel Songs was a special feature.

CLANTON PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Next Sabbath will be the regular day in this church, 11 a. m. and 8:30 p. m. The pastor hopes to meet all the Presbyterians of Clanton at these services and all others who will come and worship with us; there are many living in the community of our church who do not attend any other church service. You will always find a welcome in this church and the pastor's only desire is to help and not hinder you, therefore the minister will never say anything that will hurt or hinder you.

At the close of the morning service, the communion of the Lord's Supper will be observed. This service is for all of God's people.

The sabbath school will meet at the regular hour, 10 a. m. The lesson study for this quarter will be taken from the Old Testament. The lessons will be instructive and inspirational.

"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

ANTIOCH AND WALNUT CREEK

The revival begins at Antioch next Saturday night. Preaching again Sunday morning at 9:30. The Rev. A. C. Britt will be with us there beginning Sunday night. Regular Second Sunday services at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. at Walnut Creek. Then in the afternoon at 3:00 p. m. we preach at Lime Springs. The revival for our Pleasant Hill church will begin the third Sunday morning.—Rev Reese Farnell.

THURSDAY NIGHT SINGING

Don't miss it this week. We have some special interest that I'm sure that you will like to hear. Also we are expecting some new and exciting features in the event. Seats will be at a premium, so we are looking for you. Come and bring the children. If you are interested in a singing school be there.—H. M. Sandlin, Pastor.

AMERICAN LEGION COLLECTS OLD VICTROLA RECORDS

A campaign of the American Legion for collecting old victrola records, to make available new records for America's fighting men, will have active support of the State Defense Council, and assistance of various Citizens Service Corps over the State will be enlisted. The original campaign launched by the American Legion resulted in collection of enough old records to furnish more than 370,000 new records to the Army for men overseas, to the Navy for men in foreign stations and ships. With the need still unfilled, a second campaign is to be launched July 3 to July 31st. New records cannot be made without old ones being turned in for material, and a nationwide appeal will be made to patriotic Americans to part with old records as a boost to fighters in remote parts of the world.

Keep an egg whip on the kitchen work table to remove doughnuts, potatoes, fritters, etc., from hot fat. The excess fat will drip through the whip.

Make a clothespin bag from a good section cut from the leg of worn-out pair of overalls. Tack the bag to a coat hanger, hook it over the clothes line and slide it along as the clothes are pinned to the line. This saves stooping for clothespins.

Stamps Baxter Quartet To Appear Here July 23rd.

May I announce that the Stamp Baxter [illegible] sing over WBRC every Sunday morning will appear in consert at the Court House in Clanton Friday night, July 23 at 8:30 o'clock. [illegible] will be sponsored by [illegible] Methodist Church.. Admission up to 12 years will be 20c and 12 years or older will be 35c. We invite everybody out to hear these boys sing. There has been a good many who have stated that they would like to hear this bass singer in person so you will get that chance, don't miss it.

Don't forget the date: Friday night July 23rd at the Court House. Be sure and hear this fine quartet.

NEXT BOND CALL WILL BE $20,000,000,000 AND WILL START ON SEPTEMBER 9TH.

Twenty Billion Dollars will be the amount wanted by the United States Government on the Third Bond Drive to start on September 9th. In the mean time we are asked for $2,500,000,000 to keep the wheels turning until that time.

State and County quotas have not been announced as yet.

The Good Neighbor Revival Continues

The revival at the Assembly of God continues through Friday the 14 of July. The meetings are gaining in momentum each night. The preachers who have thus far preached have linked their messages just as well as if each one had been present while the others preached. O. C. Lloyd, "Prayer." M Lockhart, "Be Sure Your Sin Will Find You Out" Sandlin, "Why Jesus Came." Williams, "Holding the Truth in Unrighteousness." Brother Jim Baker brought a timely message on Sunday morning.

The following is scheduled to preach from here out: July 9, Floyd Smith. July 10 Jadie Thomas. July 11, H. M. Sandlin. July 12, Grover Langston. July 13, W. Reese Farnell. July 14, N. E. Cook. Thursday Singing Night, no preaching. Friday July 16, O. C. Hickman.

We feel greatly indebted to Bro. Willcutt for announcing our services over the radio almost everyday the last week. We had a wonderful time in the Auditorium Sunday afternoon in Birmingham. He is using the proper tactics to catch fish. It might pay some of us preachers to investigate the tactics.—H. M. Sandlin.

Twenty-nine heifers averaging $317 each and 9 bulls averaging $246 each were sold at the first annual Guernsey sale held in Birmingham June 15.

Dear Family;

It is pleasant to hear from you after such a long period of time but it is unpleasant to learn of your changed condition of living which I can more readily understand from the change of my own conditions.

It is too bad that you are limited in the use of your automobile. I know how it is to walk through miles and miles of swamp and jungle, so I understand.

It is too bad to have your choice of food limited. I have experienced this too, except there is no choice here. So I understand.

It is too bad that Willie has to work so many hours a day at the defense plant. I have to work night as well as day at our defense plant. So I understand.

It is too bad Willie has such little time for amusement. I am deprived of amusement, too. So I understand.

It is too bad that you have to wait in the rain for transportation I have to wait in the rain on post and transportation and my destination is uncertain too. I understand.

It is too bad that you are being paid so little for working so hard I only get a fraction of your pay. So I understand.

Winning this war is hard on all of us. You work long hours and so do I. So I understand. But during those hours I get shot at. Do you understand?

Your Loving Son.

NO! I SAID I WAS A FLAT BURGLAR!

His Opinion

A bombastic man met his somewhat henpecked friend, whose badly injured face suggested a recent motoring accident.

"Good heavens!" his friend exclaimed. "How did that happen?"

"My wife . . .!" the injured one began.

"Your wife?" was the breezy reply. "Ah, evidently you haven't acquired the secret of married bliss. I never have a row with my wife. I have no secrets from her."

"Neither have I!" the henpecked one sighed. "I only thought I had!"

Memory System

Jane—What's the piece of string around your finger for?

Mabel—Oh, that. Well, that's a knot. Knots are in wood. You cut wood with a saw. Saw makes me think of see which rhymes with tea. So this is to remind me to get a pound of coffee today.

Popular!

Joe—That girl is like the measles.

John—What do you mean, nobody likes her?

Joe—No, she gets around.

LOOKS LIKE IT

Frank—My father weighed only four pounds at birth.

Mary—Good gracious! Did he live?

Hold Her, Newt!

Stranger—And who's that close-mouthed fellow sitting over there near the cracker barrel? He hasn't spoken a word for the last 15 minutes.

Villager — That's Luke Sawbuck. He ain't close-mouthed—he's jes waitin' fer them to bring back the spittoon.

Plenty of Space

Nit—I have a cold or something in my head.

Wit—A cold, undoubtedly!

Brother Popular

Two brothers were in the habit of going fishing together every day during the season. One of the brothers caught all the fish, while the other one got nary a bite.

One day the luckless brother decided he would get up very early and go fishing alone. He stayed out all day and toward sundown, being without a single fish, he decided to give up and row home.

Just as he was about to pull away a little fish jumped out of the water and said in a very wistful voice: "Where's your brother?"

Family Provider

Bill—We're going to have a swell time tonight. I've got four seats for the movies.

Belle—Why do we need four seats?

Bill—Two for your mother and father, and two for your little brothers, Jimmy and Billy.

Good Example for All!

Mother—Alice dear, it's bedtime. You know all the little chickens have gone to bed.

Alice—Yes, mother, and so has the hen!

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS

Tall, cool glasses of Ginger Cooler will help get your daily quota of milk into your summer diets besides foiling Ol' Sol on his busiest days.

Cool Salads, Drinks, Sandwiches Help Keep Family Comfortable

You will bless the sandwich, salad and cool drink ideas on those warm days when it is too hot to roast the meat and cook all your vegetables. Set the table in your coolest colors with coolest foods, and don your coolest frock, and you will be giving your family the best—on the home front.

It's doubly important that you keep yourself and your family fit during these times as there are so many activities demanding buoyant health and energy. Even though the food you serve is on the cool side, make every bit of it count as far as its nourishment is concerned.

Cram the salads full of vitamins and minerals, and plan your menus to give your family a well-balanced diet. Foods served during the summer should be even more appetizing than foods served during other seasons, for appetites tend to lag.

If the family does not want to eat a great deal during the meal proper, make the snacks count. For instance, milk drinks will help to get in the pint daily for adults, and the quart for children. You'll enjoy this simple and delicious beverage:

Ginger Cooler.
(Makes 1 tall glass)

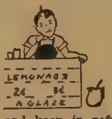
1 cup milk, chilled
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup ginger ale
2 to 3 tablespoons vanilla ice cream

Pour into a tall, chilled glass. Add salt and stir in ginger ale. Top with ice cream and serve immediately.

There's something about good, old-fashioned lemonade that still hits the spot during days that the thermometer speeds to the top rung of the temperature ladder:

Grandmother's Lemonade.
(Serves 10 to 12)

2 cups sugar or 2½ cups honey
2½ cups water
Juice of 6 lemons
Juice of 2 oranges
Grated rind of 1 orange
1 cup mint leaves



Cook sugar and water 10 minutes. (If using honey, bring water to a boil, then add honey and cook 5 minutes.) Cool. Add fruit juices and rind. Pour over mint leaves. Cover and let stand 1 hour. Strain into jar and keep in refrigerator. Use ½ cup syrup for each glass; fill with crushed ice and water.

Sherbet's a popular dessert, and plenty cool! The citrus fruit in this makes it even cooler:

Orange Sherbet.
(Makes 1 quart)

1½ cups sugar
1 cup water
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
2 cups orange juice
3 tablespoons lemon juice

Boil sugar and water together for 5 minutes. Beat slowly into egg whites. Add fruit juices. Pour into freezing tray and set cold control at fast freezing. Freeze stiff, then beat or stir thoroughly. Return to freezing compartment and finish freezing. Serve in sherbet glasses, garnishing each with sprig of mint and a half slice of unpeeled orange.

Lynn Chambers' Point-Saving Menu

*Royal Lamb Salad
Sliced Tomatoes Carrot Sticks
Whole Wheat Bread Butter
*Ginger Cooler
Cookies
*Recipe given

Salads that are full of protein and that keep the cook cool are these that fill the main dish order of summer meals:

Royal Lamb Salad
(Serves 6)

2 cups diced, cooked lamb
1 cup diced celery
1 cup Bing cherries
4 hard-cooked eggs
½ cup chopped nuts
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup mayonnaise
Salad greens

Combine all ingredients except mayonnaise and chill thoroughly. Just before serving, toss in mayonnaise lightly and serve on a bed of greens. If desired, garnish with additional slices of hard-cooked eggs and cherries.

Veal and Bacon Salad.
(Serves 6)

2½ cups cold, cooked veal, diced
½ cup crisp bacon, finely cut
½ cup diced celery
¼ cup radish slices
½ cup mayonnaise
6 small tomatoes

Mix the veal and the bacon with the celery, radishes and mayonnaise and chill. Place each peeled tomato in a lettuce cup. Cut down several sections to open. Place a mound of the salad mixture into each tomato and top with mayonnaise.

Occasionally a fruit salad is all that is desired for a simple luncheon. In that case, make it as attractive and nourishing as possible:

Summer Fruit Salad.
(Serves 6)

1 medium cantaloupe, peeled and cut in cubes
2 cups raspberries or dewberries
2 cups diced fresh pineapple

Chill and mix lightly together. Serve portions on crisp lettuce or watercress and top with mayonnaise flavored with honey.

A cool dessert for a cool meal—Orange Sherbet. It can be simply made in the cool, morning hours, stored in the refrigerator until ready to serve.

Finger sandwiches go well with the salads to round out the meal and are both cool and delicious:

Ground boiled ham with ground pickles and mayonnaise.

Cottage cheese, chopped stuffed olives, nuts.

Peanut butter, raspberry jam.

Chopped dates, orange juice, chopped nuts.

Mashed cooked shrimp and cream cheese.

Flaked salmon, chopped cucumber and mayonnaise.

Cookies like these will go well with your fresh fruits:

Molasses Raisin Bars.

¼ cup shortening
⅓ cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup baking molasses
2 cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon soda
1¼ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup sweet milk
1 cup chopped nuts
1 cup raisins

Cream shortening, add sugar and beat lightly. Add egg, beat well, then add molasses. Sift flour with dry ingredients and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Add chopped nuts and raisins. Spread thinly in greased shallow pan and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 15 to 20 minutes. Cut in bars before cooling.

Point Savers: Don't stretch those points out of joint when you're making sandwich fillings. Try these suggestions:

Diced chicken, green pepper, pickle, mayonnaise.

Sliced chicken with orange marmalade, or sliced chicken and dill pickle, sliced.

Cottage cheese and crisp, chopped bacon.

Hard-cooked egg, chopped with minced pimentos, diced green pepper, and mayonnaise and chili sauce to moisten.

Chopped hard-cooked egg, chopped stuffed olives, mayonnaise.

Chopped hard-cooked eggs and catsup to moisten.

Peanut butter, raspberry jam.

Shredded cabbage, grated pineapple, mayonnaise.

Enemy Weapons Studied At U. S. Proving Ground

The Army Proving Grounds at Aberdeen, Md., has a sample of every weapon that our men have captured from the Nazis and the Japs, says Collier's. All of this material has been forwarded from our fighting fronts by Ordnance officers whose sole duty is to seek new enemy equipment and send it to Aberdeen to be tested and studied.

One thing a soldier is afraid of is a display of emotion. That's why his slang so often sounds derogatory. For example, he refers to the silver eagles on his colonel's shoulder straps as "buzzards." But when he speaks of his favorite cigarette, he says: "Camels." They're first with men in the Army as well as with Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen. (According to actual sales records in service men's stores.) And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

AFTER spending six months in Hollywood, airing his tremendously popular "Take It or Leave It" show and making a picture for 20th Century-Fox, Phil Baker returns to New York with a pretty good idea of who's smarter, West coast contestants or those from the East. But he's a cagey soul; when asked about the results of his own private survey he replied "America's intelligence is nation-wide." He's going to be asking "Take It or Leave It" questions Sunday nights at the New York CBS studio.

Universal plans to cash in on the public's liking for being scared by giving us a series of "Inner Sanctum Mysteries"—they bought the screen rights to the title, but none of the radio stories will be used. They'll make two a year, the first, "Calling Dr. Death," starring Gale Sondergaard and Lon Chaney. RKO will do "Having Wonderful Crime"; 20th Century-Fox has bought that super-super mystery, "Stranger on the Highway." And Metro's doing the shuddery "Gaslight," which, as a play, still runs in New York.

Columbia's taking a chance by having Marguerite Chapman play a full-fledged Nazi throughout most of "Appointment in Berlin"—on the theory that too much sweetness and light hampers the build-up of a new feminine star. They hope the public will agree with that theory. Well, it certainly worked in Bette Davis' case—just see what an unpleasant role did for her!

—*—

Henry Koster and Joseph Pasternak are united again; they're the pair who worked together on many of the pictures that carried Deanna Durbin from obscurity to stardom. Their first joint effort at Metro will be "Music for Millions," starring Lana Turner.

California's oldest mission bell, cast in bronze in Lima, Peru, in 1818 for La Purisima Mission at Lompoc, is the bell that tolls in "For Whom the Bell Tolls." By the way, though you'll probably hardly glance at the picture's main title when it's flashed on the screen, 35 men worked on it, after William Cameron Menzies had designed it.

Nowadays there's a sign saying "No Women Visitors" on the "Cry Havoc" set at Metro. The 13 feminine members of the cast had put in four weeks minus make-up, with straight hair, and wearing soiled overalls—and Hedy Lamarr dropped in, wearing white chiffon!

Johnny Mercer's achieving a lifelong ambition when he steps out on his radio program Tuesday nights. For years the author of "That Old Black Magic" and "Blues in the Night" and many other song hits has wanted to be an actor. GOD CALLS A LEADER

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.—Exodus 3:10.

God calls men, commissions, and uses them to carry out His plans and purposes in the earth. What a great truth that is, and how it glorifies the destiny of man to know that it is divinely appointed.

As Joseph Parker effectively points out, the experience of Moses in Midian was a direct dealing with God, whereas we who may not be able to "see the fountain" must "be content to drink at the stream," but should always remember that the stream flows from that same fountain.

"Every man should put to himself the questions. What is my destiny? What does God mean me to be and to do in the world? . . . It is a most pitiable thing that a man should read of Moses being divinely called . . . to a special work" and fail to realize "that God has a special work for every man to do." Let us be careful that we do not "so pervert and misinterpret circumstances as to press them into a justification of self-will," rather than recognize them as "destiny which is beckoning us to duty."

For our instruction and guidance we consider, then, the story of the call of this outstanding leader of Israel. It presents him as a true servant of God, one who was—

I. Personally Equipped.

While it is a blessed truth that God will use any man who surrenders himself to His control and guidance, no matter how limited that man's ability and training may be, it is also true that, other things being equal, the man with the best equipment will be the most useful servant.

God gave Moses a unique preparation. He was first of all a Hebrew, born among the people that he was to lead. He knew the luxury and all the cultural advantages of the Egyptian court (Acts 7:22), with the safeguard of training by his own mother as his nurse.

He observed at first hand the oppression of his people, and made a self-willed and impulsive effort to deal with the problem. The result was that he had a "postgraduate" course of instruction and discipline in the wilderness, where he spent forty years in the school of experience.

We have learned anew from our war experience that training for service is essential. If that is true in military matters and in secular life, it is doubly true in the service of Christ. He does graciously use even the humble and untrained worker, but no one who has a vision of service will be content to remain unprepared.

II. Spiritually Qualified.

Moses was a man who knew God. Had he been a worldly man he would only have been curious regarding the phenomenon of the burning bush. But note how alert and reverent he was and how immediately responsive to the instructions and the call of God.

Here God's future leader was made conscious of the infinite majesty and holiness of God, the need of reverence and godly fear, the purpose of the Eternal One to deliver His people, and the assurance that He would be with His servant. Such a spiritual experience made effective the excellent preparation which he already had for service.

All the training and preparation in the world is worse than useless in God's service apart from that spiritual qualification that comes from true regeneration and dedication to Him.

There is no more pathetic sight than a spiritually powerless church worker going through the motions of service for Christ. If we are in that condition we may be sure that we deceive no one but ourselves.

III. Divinely Called.

Moses was called (v. 4), commissioned (vv. 6-10), and clad with divine authority (vv. 11, 12) for his great task.

God calls His servants to different responsibilities and in different ways, but the important thing is that we should know that we are in His will and that we are answering His call.

No one has any right to choose full-time Christian service simply as a desirable vocation. In any calling of life man needs God's guidance in order to make a proper choice, but in the ministry or missionary service it is an absolute essential.

If we were more careful to seek His will for every individual there would be less unhappiness in the world. But in the case of the one who goes out to speak for God there is not only the danger of distress, but of real disaster for himself and those to whom he tries to minister. ing Christ.

Prepared, qualified, and called, Moses is now ready to meet God before he goes on to his life of holy exploits for Him

Some men still try to say that women can't do a job as well as men. The girls have proved themselves.

Even small boys recognize the fact. The other day one of them told his father that he'd lost his place at the top of the class. The new top was a girl.

"Surely," said his father, "you aren't going to be beaten by a mere girl?"

"That's all very well, dad," was the reply, "but girls aren't nearly so mere as they used to be."

The TIRE OF TOMORROW is here TODAY!

THE WORLD-FAMOUS
FIRESTONE DeLuxe Champion TIRE IS NOW BEING MADE WITH Firestone Butaprene
THE MARVELOUS New SYNTHETIC RUBBER

JUST as you'd expect, Firestone is FIRST to build the tire of tomorrow for the car owners of America. It is only natural that Firestone should be the leader in working out new processes, in creating new compounds and in building better tires from American-made rubber, for Firestone has always been the pioneer in developing new materials, new methods and new machines that have resulted in tremendous advancements in tire design, construction and performance.

From Firestone have come such revolutionary improvements as the FIRST straight side tire, the FIRST rubber non-skid tread, the FIRST commercial demountable rim, the FIRST patented Gum-Dipping Process, the FIRST balloon tire, the FIRST Safti-Lock Cord Body, the FIRST Super-Speed Construction and the FIRST practical pneumatic tractor tire.

In 1933, Firestone built the FIRST synthetic rubber airplane tires for our armed forces. In 1940, Firestone built its FIRST synthetic rubber passenger car tires at the New York World's Fair and began the manufacture of its own synthetic rubber, called Butaprene, the same type that was later adopted by the Government. In 1942, Firestone became the FIRST company to produce synthetic rubber in a Government-owned plant and later became the FIRST to make synthetic rubber using butadiene made from grain alcohol. And today Firestone is making synthetic rubber tires for passenger cars, trucks, buses, airplanes, tractors, farm implements and all types of war vehicles.

All of these years of experience, all of the knowledge that made these FIRSTS possible have been called upon in producing the new Firestone DeLuxe Champion Tire made with Firestone Butaprene. It is now ready for the car owners of America as released by the Government. But do not think that the crisis is past. America's greatest rubber supply is still on the wheels of its 27,000,000 cars. So you must continue all of the rubber conservation measures that have been so effective. However, if you are eligible and require new tires, remember this — in mileage, in strength and in safety the new Firestone DeLuxe Champion Tire upholds the Firestone tradition of "Best in Rubber — Synthetic or Natural."

Listen to the Voice of Firestone with Richard Crooks and the Firestone Symphony Orchestra, under direction of Alfred Wallenstein, Monday evenings, over N. B. C.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

Should I decide to improve my intellect by reading and going in pursuit of information by the easy, comfortable, way, I would buy me an upholstered reading chair. I would buy for myself a reading jacket, bedroom slippers for my feet and a bookrest for my chair. Then I would get the best of lamps. After supper I would dress myself in comfort and take my place in the arm chair, and if I know myself correctly I would be sound asleep before I had read a dozen pages. Information does not come the easy way. The passion that most people have today for perfect physical comfort, is not a promising indication. One reason why so many people fail in life is because they want everything by the easy way. Good fortune is not the lot of many people. The most of us have to travel the hard way to knowledge and wealth. In nine cases out of ten, real life goes to sleep under the charm of ease and comfort:.

The story is told of a woman who dreamed that she died and went to Heaven. As one of the Angels was showing her around among the mansions they came upona large room filled with precious packages. On many of the bundles she saw her own name written. She remembered that she had prayed for these things and she wanted to know why she had not received them. The Angel replied, "My good woman, when God's children pray for anything, we are commanded to bundle it up and deliver it and we are also commanded to bring it back and pile it in this room, should the potltioner not be waiting to receive it." Does this not account many times for our unanswered prayers? We ask of God and then we fail to wait for the answer. Many of the blessings of life never come to us because we do not wait to receive.

A story comes to us out of the long ago of a giant who was born of the world. In order to keep himself alive this giant had to touch the earth ever so often. Each time that he touched it his strength was doubled and soon he had grown so strong that he could handle the world at his will. The Christian resembles that giant. In order to become and remain a living Christian the disciple of Christ must often touch the throne of God in prayer. Every time that throne is touched, there comes out added strength. By having constant cammunion with God we grow stronger and soon we are are able to handle the world and make it do our biddings. To be sure, we gain strength every ti mewe touch the Divine garment.

After having attended a special service at a negro church on Sunday night, I asked the old cook who served us the next day, why it was that all of her people prayed out loud and prayed at the same time? The old woman was very devout and she replied, "You see Boss, it is this way. We all pray together for the same reason that you pile the coals of the fire together." At once I saw that the old woman had something in her answer. When we seperate coals of fire and let each one burn seperately, they go out, but when we pile them to geter, the flames go high and the heat is intense We are taught that there is strength in unity. We are told by the Master that if two or three shall agree as touching any one thing, that it shall be done. It is true that when a whole family unites to ask a boon of the father, it is then hard for him to refuse. Why not get together and pray together for the things that we need.

THE DESERT LAMENT

Out where there are no Ten Commandments.
And a man can raise a thirst.
Live the outcasts of civilization,
The victims of life at its worst.
Out on the wind swept desert,
The men that God forgot
Battle the ever present fever,
The itch and desert rot.
Living with gila monsters,
Scorpians and rattlesnakes too,
Out on the wind-swept desert
Thousand of miles from You.
Drenched with sweat in the evening,
They sit on their bunks and dream,
Killing themselves with liquor,
To damn memories dream.
Into the village they wander on payday,
To squander their meager pay,
They raise merry hell for an evening
And as usual are broke the next day.
No, we're not convicts,
We're defenders of the land,
Battling the wilds of the desert
Out in the heat and the sand.
But there is one consulation,
And that one I will tell:
When we die we will go to heaven,
Because we've done our hitch in Hell.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Pig Boat

At sea on a submarine isn't exactly the "life of Riley." In the Battle of the Atlantic, or on the great stretches of the Pacific these sailors know the hazards of their work.

One of the spots aboard these "Pig Boats" that all crew members enjoy is the galley, or kitchen. Space limitations prevent an elaborate setup, but cooks aboard these vessels are justly proud of the meals they prepare for their crews. Your increased purchase of War Bonds helps make submarine life as pleasant as possible.

U. S. Treasury Department

Don't spend your pay in competition with your neighbors for scarce civilian goods. Save, America, and you will save America from black markets and runaway inflation. Buy more Bonds every payday. How many bonds? Figure it out yourself.

How to Dehydrate Food at Home

NEW methods of dehydrating food, developed by cooperative extension work in agriculture and home economics, make this an acceptable and inexpensive way in which to preserve food for your family's use during the "scarce" months to come.

These methods are described in The Alabama Polytechnic Institute Extension Service Circular No. 244. This circular also contains a plan showing how to build a home food dehydrator. Operating the dehydrator is simple, but building it requires skill in the use of woodworking tools. You can get a copy of circular No. 244 from your county agent at the courthouse, or by writing Alabama Extension Service, Auburn, Ala., or by mailing the coupon in this advertisement.

Miss Annie Laura Calfee Weds Raymond Bonnett

The marriage of Annie Laura Calfee and Raymond Bonnett was solemnized at 9:00 o'clock a. m. June 13, 1943, at the home of Rev. Ayers, Clayton Street, Montgomery, Ala.

The bride was beautiful in a navy blue crepe dress combined with white and accessories to match. She wore a large corsage of red rose buds.

Mrs Bonnett is the daughter of Mr and Mrs G. T. Calfee of Thorsby. She finished high school at Isabella this year.

The groom is the son of Rev and Mrs George Bonnett of Verbena. He is now employed with the Coastline Railroad Co. He finished school at Verbena. High in 1941 with highest honors.

Those attending the wedding were Mrs Quinton White, Montgomery, Miss Willie Frank Calfee of Alexander City. Mrs Curtis Bonnett and Miss Lytha Bonnett of Montgomery. After the ceremony the couple left for a short honeymoon.

Mr and Mrs Bonnett are now at home in Montgomery, Alabama.

Their friends wish them much happiness.

Saving Garden Seed may Save the Garden

Auburn, Ala.--- To make sure of having adequate garden seed supplies for repeated plantings, home gardeners would do well to save most sorts of vegetable seeds, says Lyle Brown, extension horticulturist. He warns that with greatly increased wartime plantings, seeds are sure to be high in price, and many are likely to be scarce.

Saving seed is a simple process of just permitting most vegetables to mature seed, and then gathering and storing them. But with some, like tomatoes, cucumbers, squash and eggplant, a bit of processing is needed after they are allowed to fully mature on the stalk.

With these, the pulp containing the mature seeds is usually mashed up and water added. This is left to ferment, and as this process developes, the seed and pulp separate out. The good seed sink and the light ones and the pulp go to the top. Then the top can be poured off and the good seed retained. They should be dried in the shade. Screen wire is good to dry them on.

Store the dry seed in fruit jars or similar containers, and treat them with carbon disulphide if insects threaten.

Are you fighting mad about this ...? Does it mean anything to you personally? Then dig down and buy more and more War Bonds.

War Bonds should mean something more to you than just "a good sound investment." Figure it out yourself.

Increase farm productivity by building improvements with CONCRETE

Farmers today are stepping up production of dairy products, eggs, livestock and other essential foodstuffs. One way to begin the job is to build concrete barn floors, stock feeding floors, poultry house floors, manure pits, storage cellars and other improvements that make your farm more efficient and productive.

All you need are a few sacks of portland cement, sand, gravel or stone, and some boards for forming. Concrete conserves critical "war materials"; many farm concrete jobs need none.

Economical, life-time concrete improvements cost surprisingly little to build. If you need help, get in touch with your concrete contractor or building material dealer.

THE MEAT PROGRAM

Under food production Order 27 effective April 1, 1943, County War Boards were charged with the responsibility of issuing permits for slaughter of meat for sale.

Due to continued shortage of animals supplied to packers through regular channels, the Food Distribution Administration has found it necessary to tighten the restrictions as to slaughter. To assist in carrying out this restricted policy a War Meat Committee for Chilton County has been selected by the County War Board. The following compose the Committee:

T. L. Williams, Chairman; Arthur Bazzell, Food Panel; D. P. Culp, Supt. of Education; Aaron C. Dennis, Live Stock Producer; Obie DeLoach, Retail meat dealer; Dr. Thomas Hayes, Veterinarian; and a member of the County War Board.

All slaughter permits which have been issued will be reviewed by this War Meat Committee and approved, revisdd or revoked as evidence indicates is proper under amendments to FDO-27 which are now in effect. After review, the name, address and quota of each permit holder will be published.

In future, applications for slaughter will be reviewed by this Committee so that it may make recommendations to Area Meat Marketing Supervisor, Food Distribution Administration, from which office slaughter permits will be handled except in the case of the farm slaughterer, WHOS QUOTA IS: (1) 300 POUNDS OR LESS, OF MEAT, OR, (2) 3 HEAD OF LIVESTOCK WHICH MAY NOT INCLUDE MORE THAN ONE HEAD OF CATTLE.

Quotas tor slaughterers are based on slaughtering done in 1941, or, if no slaughtering was done in 1941, that done in 1942. Slaughter history must be supported by evidence such as certified statements from books recording transactions, bills of sale, inspection or grading certificates, other pertinent certified data. Details are available at the Office of the County War Board with AAA in Clanton, where applications may be filed until further notice.

Since members of the War Meat Committee serve without pay, the meetings to be held by them must be limited, so it will not be possible to obtain permits immediately. Applications should be filed well in advance of the time it is wished to do slaughtering.

Modern Air Cleaners Protect Cylinder Walls

Auburn, Ala.— Dusty conditions under which tractors operate in farm work is undoubtedly the greatest potential enemy of cylinder walls.

Modern tractor air cleaners will remove more than 99 per cent of the dust from the air which is drawn into the carburetor, says J. B. Wilson, extension agricultural engineer, but daily attention must be given to the cleaner. Under certain conditions, if daily attention is neglected, enough dust and grit can get into an engine to greatly damage or even ruin a tractor in two or three days. Requirements usually call for removing oil cups daily, emptying, cleaning, and refilling with motor oil, and washing the element and breather in kerosene.

If Hitler wins, the issue for you will be living itself and not just the cost of living. Think that over and figure it out for yourself how much beyond 10 percent of your family income you should put into War Bonds every payday.

Sulphuring Fruits will Preservt Color, Vitamin C

Auburn, Ala.--- To preserve color and decrease the loss of vitamin C in dried fruits, Lavada Curtis, extension food preservation specialist, offers these suggestions on sulphuring fruit.

Place fruit on trays, stack trays 1 1-2 inches apart to permit a circulation of the sulphur fumes. Use tight wooden box or heavy carton to cover trays. The cover should be slightly larger than the stacked trays. Place one teaspoon of sulphur for each pound of fruit n a shallow can. Set the can beside the stacked trays or below trays, ignite the sulphur and turn cover over trays

Energy Foods put the POWER in MAN POWER!

Budget your points to balance your meals
Spend ¼ of your RED STAMPS for FATS. . . .
they are VITAL ENERGY FOODS

Long, active hours on a war job use up plenty of energy! Are the meals you serve your war-worker hearty, substantial, rich in energy foods? Uncle Sam says spend ¼ of your red stamps for fats.

Fats top the list of energy foods. They are important in war-time diets. Foods prepared with fat are not only appetizing, they are more satisfying—they stay with you!

The chart in this ad has been worked out to show what the various rationed fats can be used for. For example, you may choose butter or vitamin-enriched margarine for the table. Then you'll want a fat or shortening to cook with. Many women prefer high-quality vegetable shortenings tht can be used for all types of baking and frying and will keep fresh and sweet right on the kitchen shelf.

Senate, House Conference Committee Stops Roll-Back of Retail Food Costs; Revised Bill Approves Funds for FSA; Heavy Aerial Action Marks Pacific War

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

To test new rubber life rafts and accessories, six men were cast adrift off Cape Fear, N. C., in the Atlantic. The men were equipped with a new lightweight life preserver which also holds rations and other essentials, solution for purifying salt water for drinking and oars out of which a mast and boom can be erected by linking them together in a right angle.

PRICE 'ROLL-BACK':
Doomed by Committee

Drastic revision of the administration's subsidy program was indicated by action of a senate and house conference committee, which prohibited use of funds for the "roll-back" of retail food prices. The committee's move would kill the present "roll-back" of butter and meat, only permitting payments to processors for commitments to June 15.

However, the committee did authorize the payment of 150 million dollars in subsidies to offset increased transportation costs, and stimulate the production of scarce metals and essential food products. Congressional approval, however, would be required for expenditures over 150 million dollars.

The conference committee's action ignored an appeal by the War Labor board for the adoption of the administration's "roll-back" program. Citing its policy of limiting wage increases to 15 per cent over the January 1941 level, the WLB declared that the cost of living has spiralled up 6 per cent since last October, with food alone rising 12.9 per cent.

The conference committee increased the Commodity Credit corporation lending authority 750 million dollars to an aggregate of 3 billion 400 million dollars. Under the terms of the bill which also extended the life of the CCC for two years, the war food administrator would be allowed to buy food from farmers and resell it at a loss to stimulate production.

CHEERS ALLIES:
Major Blow

Invasion talk quickened with the statement of Malcolm MacDonald, British high commissioner to Canada, that the Allies would soon assault Hitler's European fortress.

In predicting the invasion, MacDonald said a series of small forays could be expected to feel out the enemy before a major blow would be struck.

MacDonald saw further cheer in the Allies' operations against U-boats in the North Atlantic. Even as he revealed that one submarine had been sunk each day during the preceding two weeks, Goering's Essener National Zeitung confessed that the Allies had surprised the Nazi U-boat force by the use of aircraft carriers in convoys.

As invasion talk increased, Allied bombers continued to pound Germany.

TREASON:
New Trials in Chicago

Basing part of its decision on a recent Supreme court ruling, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals voided the conviction of six defendants for treason in Chicago and ordered the case reheard.

It was pointed out that the Supreme court had held arraignment before a magistrate necessary before a suspect could be questioned. In the treason case, statements had been taken before such arraignment, although the government claimed the suspects had waived the right of appearance before a judicial officer.

The appeals court also held that the individuals were entitled to separate trials which the court denied, and Judge William J. Campbell had erroneously instructed the jury.

FARM:
Approve FSA Funds

Final congressional action on the 875 million dollar farm bill was further delayed with the senate's return of the bill to a conference committee for adoption of provisions for crop insurance and incentive payments.

Before returning the bill, the senate approved conference recommendations for the farm security program. Twenty million dollars was appropriated for the administration of the agency and it was authorized to borrow 60 millions for rehabilitation loans. Transfer of the FSA functions to the War Food administration also was approved.

In sending the bill back to the committee, the senate insisted on acceptance of its provisions for continuing wheat and crop insurance, and on removal of restrictions against use of 400 million dollars of soil conservation payments for incentive awards to producers.

The conference version had recommended an appropriation of 30 million dollars for loans to tenants for farm purchase. It also permitted the FSA to use as much of its funds as necessary during the first four months of the fiscal year before passage of legislation in congress over the future of the FSA. The senate approved both sections.

CABINET RIFT:
Wallace vs. Jones

Differences in the presidential cabinet flared into the open when Vice President Henry A. Wallace accused Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones of hamstringing operations of the Board of Economic Warfare.

As chairman of the BEW, Wallace directs the agency's program for the purchase of material and development of strategic natural resources in foreign countries. As chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, Jones is responsible for furnishing the funds for the BEW operations.

Wallace claimed that the RFC was lax in building up a stockpile of strategic material before Pearl Harbor, although expressly authorized to do so. Jones countered with the assertion that of 1½ billion dollars of precious material bought by this country, the BEW initiated only 5 per cent of the purchases.

PACIFIC:
Action in Air

While American aviators bombed Kiska seven times in one day in the North Pacific, the deliverance of heavy blows at Japan in the Southwest Pacific was promised by Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault upon his return to China from conferences at Washington.

As the soupy Aleutian weather cleared enough to warrant operations, medium bombers hammered at Kiska, blowing up anti-aircraft emplacements and runways. The raids brought to 16 the number staged by American airmen in three days.

In predicting an offensive against the Japs in the southwest, General Chennault said conferences in Washington had convinced him that the U. S. was concentrating most of its naval action in the Pacific and that Allied leaders were making a most judicious use of resources for global warfare.

CHESTER DAVIS:
Resigns Food Job

As support grew in congress for his appointment as Food Czar, Chester Davis resigned from his position as War Food administrator. Lack of sufficient authority and opposition to the government's subsidy program were the reasons Davis gave for his action.

President Roosevelt accepted the resignation and immediately named Marvin Jones, a former Texas congressman and chairman of the United Nations' recent food conference, as his successor. Mr. Roosevelt also relieved Davis of responsibility for plotting the 1944 food program, saying it would not be proper to tie another administrator to somebody else's policies.

In his letter of resignation, Davis declared that subsidies would not tend to halt inflation in this country unless accompanied by current tax and savings programs. Mr. Roosevelt replied with the statement that congress had failed to enact the added tax legislation he had asked.

In answer to Davis' assertion that authority over broad food policy and the day-to-day decisions were being exercised elsewhere, Mr. Roosevelt said he had named a War Mobilization director for the purpose of co-ordinating all functions of the war agencies.

MEDITERRANEAN:
Blast Axis From Air

While the Axis continued to report Allied concentrations in North Africa, U. S. airmen struck at Nazi aerial installations in Greece, further diverting attention to the Balkans.

Strong formations of Liberator bombers raided Axis airdromes near the ancient Greek capital of Athens. Although enemy planes arose in number to the defense, hits were reported on hangars, fuel dumps and aircraft spread over the fields.

In announcing the raids, the ninth U. S. air force also revealed that the Axis continued their novel attacks on our planes by attempting to drop bombs on them from fighters overhead.

British Wellington bombers dropped incendiaries and block busters on Naples as direct attacks were continued on Italy. Docks and industrial installations were reported struck and the Italians admitted damage.

COAL PRODUCTION:
U. S. Names Director

While 156,000 miners stayed out of the pits, Carl Elbridge Newton, 45-year-old president of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, was appointed to direct the operations of the nation's mines now under government control. The selection of Newton was announced as Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes told a congressional committee that there was no hope for an early return of the properties to the owners.

Although many locals voted to resume work, thousands of soft and hard coal miners insisted they would not go back without a new contract. Pits of several steel companies in Pennsylvania were affected, but in Illinois where the union and operators had come to an agreement before the War Labor board refused to recognize the concession, all of the 25,000 miners were on the job.

Formerly an assistant United States attorney in New York and special assistant state attorney general in New York, Newton was named president of the Chesapeake and Ohio last December 15. However, he had been connected with railroad matters since 1938. In his capacity, Newton is answerable only to Ickes, although he will have the services of Ickes' office.

U. S. BACKS GIRAUD:
F.D.R. Shows Support

President Roosevelt's approval of General Eisenhower's support of Gen. Henri Giraud's French command in North Africa was seen in an invitation extended to Giraud to visit the U. S. Although Giraud accepted, he is not expected to make the trip until cessation of hostilities.

General Eisenhower came to Giraud's side during the recent conferences of the French National committee at Algiers. Gen. Charles DeGaulle had boldly sought to subordinate Giraud to a military commission and replace certain of his officers. General Eisenhower then stepped in and insisted on the retention of Giraud's command.

Back of the maze of political complication, one could see General Eisenhower's firm respect for the honor so strongly cast in military men. It was General Eisenhower who negotiated with Admiral Jean Darlan for French North Africa's collaboration with the Allies at the time of the U. S. landings in 1942. When Darlan was assassinated, General Giraud inherited his position as high commissioner and with it, Darlan's organization.

NAZI SPY:

Trial for espionage with death or prison facing him if convicted loomed before 57-year-old Ernest Lehmitz, Staten Island, N. Y., air raid warden, following his confession to the FBI that he had informed the German government of American troop movements, convoys and arms production.

Lehmitz had communicated with the Nazi intelligence by using invisible ink to write between the lines of apparently harmless letters to acquaintances in Germany.

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK. — Wollmar Filip Bostrom, Swedish minister to the United States, reached the retirement age of 65 the other day, but he is staying right on the job. With the world all topsy-turvy and with plenty of things to worry about elsewhere, his foreign office decided that this was no time to call in a man who had made good on a job for 17 years. Besides to a nation ruled over by an 85-year-old king, 65 isn't a bit old, anyway.

A Sprighty Chap Like This Retire? That's Ridiculous

Calvin Coolidge was in the White House and Frank B. Kellogg was secretary of state when the blue-eyed, ruddy cheeked envoy with the build of an athlete arrived from Stockholm in February of '26. At Upsala university in Sweden, where he was graduated in 1903, he had studied to be a lawyer, but he soon decided that the diplomatic service was his forte. He was sent first to the legation in Paris, but in 1907 King Gustav called him home to become his private secretary. In 1913 he went to the legation in London and was there during most of the last war. Just before coming to America, he was minister to Madrid.

At Upsala, he had been a top notch performer at both hockey and tennis. In 1908 he represented Sweden in the Olympic games. He first began playing tennis with King Gustav as far back as 1900 and not so many years ago he and his monarch won the doubles title in an "old boys'" tournament. On his 60th birthday, his wife snapped a photograph of him when he was swinging upside down on the flying rings in a gymnasium.

THINGS are looking up for the Allies on the Pacific front. Take it from Sir Owen Dixon, Australian minister to the United States. He returned to Washington the other day after a trip home and should know. He had been away from Australia for 11 months and was delighted in the changes for the better he noted in that time.

Envoy From Down Under Heartened By a Visit Home

This tall, angular envoy from the underside of the world first took over his job here last year when Richard Casey moved on to the Middle East. He had had a distinguished career as a lawyer and a judge and had directed some of his commonwealth's top war boards — shipping control, wool, war risk insurance—before that.

Born in a suburb of Melbourne 57 years ago, he made a brilliant record at Melbourne university. He won his B.A. there in 1906 and his law degree two years later. His law practice mounted rapidly in size and importance, and he was rated as one of the outstanding attorneys in the dominion when he was elevated to a judgeship in the supreme court of Victoria in 1926. Three years later he became justice of the high court of the commonwealth.

With high forehead, keen eyes and graying hair, he looks every inch a man to hand down learned decisions.

He has been addressed as Sir Owen for two years now. He is married and has four children, two boys and two girls.

LIST Maj. Gen. Ralph Royce among those who have great faith in what the Allied bombing raids will do to lick the Germans and make them want peace for a long time to come. Place him also among those who point out that there is no one-way street for air raiders. It's the latter thought, incidentally, which is his major concern at present, for he is now in command of the First Air Force of the U. S. army, and it's his job to protect the Atlantic coast from enemy planes.

Hard-Hitting Vet Backs Air Bombs To Soften Up Nazis

There isn't much about air combat and flying that this athletic appearing, hard hitting veteran doesn't know, for he's been at it a long time. Since 1915, in fact. That was the year after he won his first commission at West Point. He flew for Pershing in the brush with Mexico in '16 and again in World War I. He came home from France with a Croix de Guerre and some staff experience at the general's headquarters.

His fame as a flier did not wane with the Armistice, however. In 1930, while at Selfridge Field in his native Michigan, he won the Mackey medal for leading a midwinter test flight of planes out to the Pacific coast and back. His ships froze up en route, but he borrowed a railway locomotive, hooked up a steam hose, and got them going again.

He has won the DSC and DFC in the present war. He gained the former by his spectacular raid on the Japs in the Philippines from a secret base in the islands in the spring of 1942.

TO YOUR Good Health

BY DR. JAMES W. BARTON

PIGMENTED SPOTS ON FACE

One of the distressing ailments that comes usually toward middle age in women is coffee colored spots, usually on the face, about the eyes and cheeks, on the arms and knees. The cause of these spots is unknown but physicians have found that after correcting any ailments of ovaries and uterus, these spots disappear, quite often. Removal of these spots and careful examination of them under the microscope show that they are not the usual pigmented blood spots nor exactly like the spots which occur so often at or during the menopause.

Dr. Barton

In an extract from a medical journal published in Montevideo in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. F. Rocca reports a case of pigmented spots on the face cured by injection and local application of ovary extract.

Twice a week, for a period of several months, 5,000 international units of ovary extract (estrone) was administered by injection. These injections regulated the monthly periods, the nervousness and shock became less and the spots on the face began to clear up. An estrone ointment was now applied to the facial spots for 20 days. It was observed that some spots disappeared and others became lighter.

The ointment treatment of the spots and the injections were continued for several months, when the pigmentation had decreased greatly on the face and in many parts of the body.

One year after this ovary or gland treatment was stopped, small spots began to appear about the eyes.

Now this is only one case, but when we remember that in some of these cases the spots disappear without treatment and that others disappear with the correction of genital ailments, it will certainly be much worth while for our women's specialists and general practitioners also, to try this treatment on these coffee-colored spots.

When we remember how ovary extract in the great majority of cases gives relief from the symptoms of the menopause, it is not too much to expect that at last a remedy has been found to remove these embarrassing coffee-colored spots.

Insulin Injections Stimulate Appetite

Just as most overweights have a large appetite and eat much more than they need, so most cases of underweight are rather "picky" about their food and have a small appetite. And just as the overweights choose the starches and fats (fat builders), so most underweights choose meats, leafy vegetables and fruits (which are not fat builders). There are exceptions to this, of course.

I have spoken before of the use in Canada and the United States of insulin in stimulating the appetite. In the American Journal of Sciences, Philadelphia, is a report from Brazil recording the results of using insulin in underweight patients. Dr. J. B. Greer and his associates treated 30 underweight patients with insulin with "most satisfactory results." They injected insulin just once a day, beginning with eight units and increasing according to the patient's appetite on the previous day; never more than 30 units were injected.

The injection was made about 45 minutes before the noon meal, but the patients were advised to eat when they began to get hungry. When the weight became normal for the patient's height and build, the injections of insulin were gradually discontinued.

This injection of the insulin only once a day and stopping it gradually, protects the glands of the pancreas that manufacture the insulin. It removes the burden of work from them for the time being.

"The unanimous statement of the patients was that they ate as never before in their lives."

There are, of course, many cases of underweight due to infection which "uses up" some of the food eaten. There are other cases of underweight where too much play, not enough sleep, not enough outdoors are factors in preventing gain in weight.

It is gratifying to know that the injection of insulin when stomach is empty will create an appetite in underweights.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Edward Thomas Marion Lawton Hargrove, feature editor of the Charlotte (N. C.) News, has started his story of a private's life in the army by giving prospective doughboys some solid advice on what course to pursue the days and nights before induction. He advises them to "paint the town red." On getting into the army he tells them "to keep your mind open" as the "first three weeks are the hardest." Like a job in civil life, says Hargrove, it's the first impression that counts. He has received his own induction notice and with a number of other soon-to-be-soldiers has completed the first day at camp. He is stationed at Fort Bragg, N. Carolina.

CHAPTER II

A soldier stuck his head through the door of our new dormitory and gave a sharp whistle. "Nine o'clock!" he yelled. "Lights out and no more noise! Go to sleep!"

"It has been, withal, a very busy day," I said to Piel, who was buried with his hay fever in the next bunk.

"It sure withal has," he said. "What a day! What a place! What a life! With my eyes wide open I'm dreaming!"

"It's been a little hellish out today," I agreed, "although it could have been worse. We actually saw a corporal and he didn't cuss us. We have eaten Army food twice, and, except for the haphazard way the pineapple was thrown toward the peas, it wasn't horrifying."

"I am broken and bleeding," moaned Piel. "Classification tests, typing tests, medical examinations.

"Funny thing about the medical amination," a voice broke in from wn the line. "Before you get it, u're afraid you'll pass. When you through the examinations, you're aid you won't."

"I noticed that," I said. "I don't ve any special hankering for a dier's life, but I thought when I s going through the hoops this rning that this would be a helluva e for them to back out."

s morning—our first morning e Recruit Reception Center— when we finished breakfast started cleaning up our squad-. A gray-haired, fatherly old te, who swore that he had been ted from master sergeant four , lined us up in front of the cks and took us to the disry.

he line in front of the mess hall dwindled as rapidly as the one at the dispensary, life would have loveliness to sell above its private consumption stock. First you're fifteen feet from the door, then (whiff) you're inside. Then you're standing between two orderlies and the show is on.

The one on my left scratched my arm and applied the smallpox virus. The only thing that kept me from keeling over was the hypodermic needle loaded with typhoid germs, which propped up my right arm.

From the dispensary we went to a huge warehouse of a building by the railroad tracks. The place looked like Goldenberg's Basement on a busy day. A score of fitters measured necks, waists, inseams, heads, and feet.

My shoe size, the clerk yelled down the line, was ten and a half.

"I beg your pardon," I prompted, "I wear a size nine."

"Forgive me," he said, a trifle weary, "the expression is 'I wore a size nine.' These shoes are to walk in, not to make you look like Cinderella. You say size nine; your foot says ten and a half."

We filed down a long counter, picking up our allotted khaki and denims, barrack bags and raincoats, mess kits and tent halves. Then we were led into a large room, where we laid aside the vestments of civil life and donned our new garments.

While I stood there, wondering what I was supposed to do next, an attendant caught me from the rear and strapped to my shoulders what felt like the Old Man of the Mountain after forty days.

"Straighten up, soldier," the attendant said, "and git off the floor. That's nothing but a full field pack, such as you will tote many miles before you leave this man's army. Now I want you to walk over to that ramp and over it. That's just to see if your shoes are comfortable."

"With these Oregon boots and this burden of misery," I told him firmly, "I couldn't even walk over to the thing. As for climbing over it, not even an alpenstock, a burro train, and two St. Bernard dogs complete with brandy could get me over it."

There was something in his quiet, steady answering glance that reassured me. I went over the ramp in short order. On the double, I think the Army calls it.

From there we went to the theater, where we were given intelligence tests, and to the classification office, where we were interviewed by patient and considerate corporals.

"And what did you do in civil life?" my corporal asked me.

"I was feature editor of the Charlotte News."

"And just what sort of work did you do, Private Hargrove? Just give me a brief idea."

Seven minutes later, I had finished answering that question.

"Let's just put down here, 'Editorial worker.'" He sighed compassionately. "And what did you do before all that?"

I told him. I brought in the publicity work, the soda-jerking, the theater ushering, and the printer's deviling.

"Private Hargrove," he said, "the army is just what you have needed to ease the burdens of your existence. Look no farther, Private Hargrove, you have found a home."

This was a lovely morning. We began at daybreak and devoted all the time until noon to enjoying the beauties of nature. We had a drill sergeant to point them out to us. We marched a full twenty miles without leaving the drill field. Lunch, needless to say, was delicious.

We fell into bed, after lunch, determined to spend the afternoon in dreamland. Two minutes later, that infernal whistle blew. Melvin Piel, guardhouse lawyer for Company A, explained it all on the way downstairs. We were going to be assigned to our permanent stations.

I fell in and a corporal led us off down the street. I could feel the California palm trees fanning my face. We stopped at Barracks 17 and the corporal led us inside.

"Do we go to California, corporal?" I asked.

"Naah," he said.

"Where do we go?" I asked him, a little disappointed.

"To the garbage rack," he said. "Double quick." He thumbed Johnny Lisk and me to the back of the barracks.

At the garbage rack we found three extremely fragrant garbage cans. Outside, we found more. Lisk and I, citizen-soldiers, stared at them. The overcheerful private to whom we were assigned told us, "When you finish cleaning those, I want to be able to see my face in them!"

"There's no accounting for tastes," Lisk whispered. Nevertheless, we cleaned them and polished them and left them spick and span.

"Now take 'em outside and paint em," said the private. "White. Git the black paint and paint 'HQCO-RRC' on both sides of all of them!"

"This is summer," I suggested. "Wouldn't something pastel look better?"

The sun was affecting the private. "I think you're right," he said. So we painted them cream and lettered them in brilliant orange.

All afternoon, in a blistering sun, we painted garbage cans. The other Charlotte boys waved to us as they passed on their way to the ball park. Happy voices floated to us from the post exchange.

The straw-boss private woke up, yawned and went away, telling us what would happen if we did likewise. He returned soon in a truck. He motioned peremptorily to us and we loaded the cans into the truck. Away we went to headquarers company—and painted more garbage cans. It was definitely suppertime by now.

"Now can we go home, Private Dooley, sir?" asked Lisk. I looked at Lisk every time the blindness left me, and I could see the boy was tired.

The private sighed wearily. "Git in the truck," he said. Away we went back to our street. We stopped in front of our barracks and Private Dooley dismounted. "The truck driver," he said, "would appreciate it if you boys would go and help him wash the truck."

We sat in the back of the truck and watched the mess hall fade away behind us. Two, three, four miles we left it behind us. We had to wait ten minutes before we could get the wash-pit. It took us fifteen minutes to wash the truck. By the time we got back to the mess hall, we were too tired to eat. But we ate.

It was through no fault of mine that I was a kitchen policeman on my sixth day. The whole barracks got the grind. And it was duty, not punishment.

It was all very simple, this KP business. All you have to do is to get up an hour earlier, serve the food, and keep the mess hall clean.

After we served breakfast, I found a very easy job in the dining hall, where life is much pinker than it is in the kitchen. A quartet was formed and we were singing "Home on the Range." A corporal passed by just as I hit a sour note. He put the broom into my left hand, the mop into my right . . .

There was a citizen-soldier from Kannapolis to help me clean the cooks' barracks. For a time it was awful. We tried to concentrate on the floor while a news broadcaster almost tore up the radio trying to decide whether we were to be in the Army ten years or twenty.

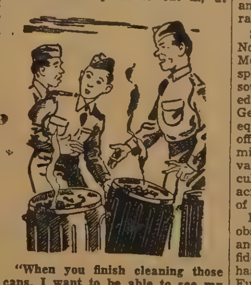
We finished the job in an extremely short time to impress the corporal. This, we found later, is a serious tactical blunder and a discredit to the ethics of gold-bricking. The sooner you finish a job the sooner you start in on the next.

The corporal liked our work, unfortunately. Kannapolis was allowed to sort garbage and I was promoted to the pot-and-pan polishing section. I was Themos Kokenes' assistant. He washed and I dried. Later we formed a goldbricking entente. We both washed and made Conrad Wilson dry.

Pollyanna the glad girl would have found something silver-lined about the hot sink. So did I. "At least," I told Kokenes, "this will give me back a chance to recover from that mop."

When I said "mop," the mess sergeant handed me one. He wanted to be able to see his face in the kitchen floor. After lunch he wanted the back porch polished.

We left the Reception Center mess hall a better place to eat in, at any rate. But KP is like a woman's work—never really done. Conrad Wilson marked one caldron and at the end of the day we found that we had washed it twenty-two times.



"When you finish cleaning those cans, I want to be able to see my face in them."

Jack Mulligan helped me up the last ten steps to the squadroom. I finally got to the side of my bunk. "Gentlemen," I said to the group which gathered around to scoop me off the floor, "I don't ever want to see another kitchen!"

The next morning we were classified and assigned to the Field Artillery Replacement Center. Gene Shumate and I were classified as cooks. I am a semi-skilled cook, they say, although the only egg I ever tried to fry was later used as a tire patch. The other cooks include postal clerks, tractor salesmen, railroad engineers, riveters, bricklayers, and one blacksmith.

But we'll learn. Already I've learned to make beds, sweep, mop, wash windows and sew a fine seam. When Congress lets me go home, will I make some woman a good wife!

Germany's 'Maginot Mind' May Hasten Nazi Collapse

Axis Propagandists Fear Fortress Europa Concept May Backfire; If Allies Break 'Impregnable' Line Morale May Crack.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

Has Herr Goebbels created a "maginot mind" in his minions which will crumble and wreck German morale just as the failure of the French defense smashed French morale? That is a question which the students of propaganda in Washington are studying with great interest today.

Both external evidence—newspapers, broadcasts, public statements; and internal evidence—reports of spies and neutral observers; reveal two things: one, that the Axis peoples are extremely invasion-conscious; and two, that they are suffering from a severe case of war nerves. But a third more serious possibility is developing.

As a result of the "maginot mind," it is believed that a marked increase in the scope of the air raids, or even a minor success of a single invasion unit, might result in a complete breakdown of Axis morale. Realizing this, the German propaganda forces are working frantically to change their previous verbal barrages based on the concept of the Fortress Europa, an utterly impregnable defense system, back to the original German concept of the value and efficiency of a highly mobile, offensive force.

Last year, when the second front talk reached its height, the German defense propaganda reached a high water mark too. Then when invasion weather passed, the German defense talk died down to be renewed this past April. Everything was done by the Nazis to create the idea that Europe was ringed by an unbreachable wall of steel, iron and concrete. Comparisons were made with the Maginot line; they said the guns in the Maginot line could traverse 180 degrees—in the new German wall, they can swing around the whole 360 degrees. They said that the steel used in the construction equals a bar which would reach from the earth to the moon—the concrete would build a road from Berlin to the Solomon islands.

Those Six Months

That was the kind of fare the Germans and the Italians were served. Immediately after the fall of Tunisia, for instance, there was an Axis chorus which tried to sound exceedingly jubilant when it declared: "Halleluja, we have held back the enemy successfully for six months, long enough to complete our fortifications, it is too late for an attack on our fortress now!"

In recent weeks, however, with the growing attacks on German cities, the surrender of the Italian island fortress to forces utterly indifferent to walls of steel or concrete, the German propagandists have begun to realize that they went too far in building a faith in a wall—that their propaganda is in danger of back-firing. They realize that if that concept is held, and if the Allies make a landing at any point and break the wall, the civilian morale will break with it.

So the tune has suddenly changed. Now we hear that the shores of the Mediterranean are protected by a splendid mobile defense—there is no south wall to Europe—none is needed. The European continent under German dominance is ideally equipped, far better equipped for offense against any invader who might get a foothold than the invader could possibly be; the difficulty of the Allied transportation across water is stressed, the power of the submarine is emphasized.

But this about-face, according to observers here, has come pretty late and can hardly create much confidence on the part of a nation which has had the myth of the Fortress Europa pounded into it for over a year.

About the Luftwaffe

There is another factor, of course, which is working against enemy morale; that is, the fact that the hardest blows now struck come from the air with the weapon which Italy exalted and which Hitler forged and put into effect in the form of his one-time invincible Luftwaffe.

Meanwhile, what has happened to the Luftwaffe—which some people have called the "vanished" Luftwaffe?

We have heard much about it during past months, but very little has been of a definite nature.

Well, the paper strength of Germany's air force has been pretty well plotted from data obtained in confidential reports to Allied headquarters here and abroad. This is what it looks like:

A maximum overall, first-line German force of between four and five thousand planes. (Even as I write, it is probably declining in numbers.) The whole is divided into five "Luftflotte" (airfleets) one of which, until the middle of June, was putting up a considerable offensive effort on the northern Russian front. It is (or was) under General Keller and it may originally have been composed of 2,500 planes. That estimate is questioned by some American observers.

The second fleet under General Pesslering was in the Mediterranean area. It was estimated shortly after Tunisia as 800 strong but probably soon thereafter was considerably "wasted" and not very efficient because it was spread thinly over a long coast line with Italy as a weak link.

The Remainder

The third fleet was under General Sperle—perhaps fifteen hundred planes with the tremendous and growing task of guarding the German industrial area, the submarine ports all the way to the bay of Biscay—and also the duty of meeting an invasion at any point along that long coast line.

Then there was General Richthofen's fleet in southern Russia and General Stumpf's at the other end of the stick in Norway with what was left.

Besides these fleets, or a part of them perhaps, were certain "Flieger korps"—mobile units which attempted to come to the rescue when some area was in dire distress. But the whole force, the experts believe, is spread so thin that in case of simultaneous air attack, great gaps have to be left which would make (and already have made) Allied air invasion safe and, as a corollary, would do the same for land invasion beneath it.

The Luftwaffe has not vanished. It is still a powerful weapon and the Germans are trying to maintain its strength by concentrating on the production of fighter planes. But the days when Hitler's evil angels darkened the skies and fortunes of Europe are over.

Diary of a Broadcaster

This "share-a-taxi" system is really working out very well, but it requires quick thinking. I heard a very charming but disappointed young lady telling her tale of woe today.

"I had to get to my dentist this noon and I stopped a cab with someone in it. The driver said he had to go to the Mayflower hotel first. That was only a few blocks out of the way but I was in a hurry so I said 'no.' As the cab started off, I looked at the passenger. And was I sorry I said 'no'—it was Wendell Willkie!"

I thought: This "One World" isn't so small after all!

We didn't realize how prophetic we were when we used to sing: "Yes, we have no bananas."

I stepped into a Connecticut avenue drug store the other day and asked for a chocolate milk shake. "No, chocolate," said the clerk. Another customer ordered a bacon and tomato sandwich: "No tomatoes," said the clerk. Before anyone else could speak he said: "Now who's going to be smart and ask for a banana split?"

Oh, we are learning to do without. In Washington the "without" sometimes seems as if it would include shirts and sheets—clean ones, anyhow. I met a dignified lieutenant colonel early the other morning carrying his laundry box. Did he wear a shame-faced look? He did not. He was beaming. Anyone beams who is able to get his laundry in time in this town.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The first privately owned turnpike toll company to be organized in this country was the Philadelphia and Lancaster Turnpike Co., incorporated in 1792. New York was the first state to charge an automobile registration fee to pay highway costs and in 1901 collected $954 in such fees.

In 1843 an English woman obtained a patent for a pavement material consisting, among other things, of "oil rubber."

Eleven per cent of the tires of the 25,400 passenger cars on New Jersey farms were found to be "bald" in a check made by Rutgers University.

Modern Weapons Of War

Japs are hard to kill. But Army Ordnance weapons are designed for use in all theatres of war.

On Attu Island, the Japs constructed innumerable earth huts and foxholes. They fought from these underground dwellings, which were interconnected, and could only be smoked out after fierce hand-to-hand fighting.

During the American attack, according to reports received by Major Robert L. Holt, Commanding Officer, Coosa River Ordnance Plant, Talladega, Alabama, our caliber .50 machine guns and 81-mm. mortars were particularly effective in silencing Jap 3-inch gun emplacements.

The caliber .50 machine gun, which American fighters call the "Stinger" is widely used in the air over Europe, on the fringes of Henderson field on Guadalcanal, in New Guinea Jungles, on PT boats, and on the long sea between the United States and its overseas bases. It won new laurels on Attu.

The powerful 81-mm. mortar weighs 136 pounds and can be broken down so that three men can carry it. It has a rate of fire from 30 to 35 rounds a minute and is particularly effective in demolishing shelters and accessory defenses. The gun f irst achieved great success in battle under MacArthur and Eisenhower, and has now proved that it is equally devastating in northern latitudes.

One of the major lessons of the Battle of Attu is that the Japs must be killed the hard way....by close-in fighting. Long range air and naval bombardment will help; but if the enemy is to be thrown out of the Island stepping stones that lead to Tokyo, if the Philippines and Burma are to be liberated, guerilla fighting is inevitable.

This conclusion directs attention to the latest short-range light weight, easy-to-carry weapons in the Ordnance Department,s mighty arsenal of firepower. Here are a few that are certain to be used on the Nips this summer.

The new Garand semi-automatic rifle and its steel bayonet out-ranks any other hand weapon in the world in potential killing power. On Attu, three Japs charged an American soldier. He killed all three with his semi-automatic Garand....a feat that would have been impossible with the old-style bolt-operated rifle capable of firing only one shot at a time.

The vicious little caliber .30 carbine was used by company officers on Attu and proved very popular. It spits 15 high-velocity slugs from one clip with deadly accuracy. A soldier can carry 4 or 5times as much ammunition for this gun as he can for the Garand. It is very effective at short range, having greater accuracy than the caliber .45 pistol which is handled expertly by only a few men at ranges over 50 feet.

Another one of the new weapons which would prove so effective against the enemy is the M-3 machine gun, small enough to be carried in an ordinary brief case, yet so sturdy that after 49,600 rounds of test firing its accuracy improved rather than decreased. The M-3 is a caliber 45 weapon and weighs less than 9 pounds. It is capable of firing 450 rounds a minute and costs less than $20.

The Browning caliber .30 machine gun packs a terrific wallop. It weighs only 21 pounds and has a rate of fire of approximately 500 rounds a minute. The new type of bullet used in this gun should cause the Japs plenty of trouble.

The Ordnance Department, Armed Service Forces, is also supplying our combat teams with a new sharp-bladed trench knife, in appearance resembling an oversize hunting knife.

The knife has a corrugated rawhide handle with a six and three-quarter inch blade. One cutting edge runs the full length of the blade. The other cutting edge extends for two and three-quarter inches. From that point to the hilt, the steel widens, providing extra strength. No Ranger or Commando-type equiptment is complete without this deadly all-purpose weapon.

Troops participating in all coming will wear the new M-1 trench helmet which saved many American lives on Attu. The vast majority of wounds received on Attu were arm and leg wounds which heated quickly..... not the more serious head or neck wounds.

The helmet now usdd by American combat teams in all theatres of war.... the same helmet that recently saved the life of Lt. Gen. Leslie J. McNair in Tunisia is so well made that a bullet fired from a caliber .45 service pistol at point blank range does not penetrate.

Reviewing the history of the Army's new helmet, Major Robert L. Holt, Commanding officer of Coosa River Ordnance Plant, Talladega, Ala. stated that the American football helmet provided the inspiration for the inside liner of the helmet now used by our fighting forces.

In World War 1, American troops used the inverted wash basin type of British helmet. After the war, Army Ordnance carried on experiments to develop an improved head-covering. In 1940, as a result of events in Europe, it was apparent that an inverted washbasin type of helmet, originally designed to protect soldiers in trenches from fragments of shells bursting overhead, would not be adequate in a war of movements where missles could come from all directions.

As the 1917 helmet was most suitable for protecting the top of the head, Army Ordnance engineers trimmed of the brim. They welded to the remaining dome-shaped piece a visor and skirt-like extentions to protect the sides and rear of the skull. A pot-type helmet resulted. This was then fitted over a modified football helmet. The inner fiber lining acts as normal headgear for soldiers, replacing fatigue hats.

More protection for the neck and sides of the head is afforded by the new helmet. Flanges on it have been designed to permit free use of the neck and to avoid interferance in handling firearms. Besides giving greatly increased production, it is considerable easier for the soldier to keep it in place while falling to the prone position and during battle maneuvers. Much of the rockng, one of the most aggravating features of the 1917 helmet, has been elimated.

The total weight of the M-1 helmet, including the snug plastic helmet inner lining, is hree pounds.

Who Has The Money For 2nd War Loan?

"Where is all the money coming from to meet the 13 billion dollars of the Second War Loan goal?" is a question heard on many sides. It will come out of the 45-billion dollar surplus earnings of 1943, according to statistics reported by Treasury experts.

During 1941 personal savings of individuals amounted to 9 billion dollars. During 1943 this surplus or prospective savings will increase by 36 billion dollars over 1941 when consumer goods were easy to get.

Now that prices are high, thrifty people will make their goods last longer and place more money in War Bonds.

Today's Travels

TO KNOW the highways of the nation has long been the business of our Travel Bureau. To chart the roads on legible maps, to classify them as to surface and character, to spot the sections where construction or other obstacles block traffic—and to tell all who may inquire—these are the full-time specialty of Kyso Motor Travel Bureau.

Designed to function in peace time, it has been wholly converted to a war time basis. Pleasure trips are "out" for the duration, but many highways are very busy, nevertheless. Officers and men are hastening to camps, or moving from camp to camp, or "heading for home" on leaves and furloughs.

It is important for them to save time—miles—gasoline—rubber. They ask our Travel Bureau to help them to conserve—cut corners—avoid costly detours. The same consideration applies to commercial vehicles, bound on missions of war necessity.... This service is free.

Cafe Owner Convicted In Slaughtering Hog Without Permit

Proof that the War Food Administration means business in enforcing the orders requiring permits for the slaughter of meat animals was furnished by the conviction of a restaurant owner in Mississippi last week, according to William R. Sewell, Acting State Meat Marketing Supervisor for Alabama.

Theo. Grillis, owner of a prominent restaurant in Jackson, was charged with slaughtering a hog without a permit and with offering for sale meat that was unfit for human consumption. On the first charge he pleaded guilty and was fined five thousand dollars. On the second charge he was given a light fine and suspended jail sentence. He already had been convicted and sentenced to two years for offering the diseased meat for sale He has appealed the latter conviction and is now free on bond.

The Federal regulation requiring a permit for the slaughter of meat animals is one of the Government's principal weapons in the fight against black markets, said Mr. Sewell. The fact that the regulation was upheld in Federal court in this, the second such case to be tried in the South, means that the Government is prepared to deal with flagrant violators to the full extent of the law. Of course penalties as severe as that in the Grillis case will be unusual, since this was a particularly serious offense.

OUR SINGING

Our singing at the Assemblies of God Church is growing to be one of the major attractions in Clanton, Where all the folks come from I can't tell but strangers and more strangers show up each night until the church will not hold them all. Come early Thursday night if you want a seat. On Sunday afternoon Prof. Duffy DeVaughn will appear at a sing at our church preceeding the opening of a music school to start on Monday night the 19th. For information concerning this school see Gene Wyatt, Jesse Jones, Marion Easterling; Gerthy Easterling or Pastor Sandlin. Be Sure To Come It's Going To Be a Big Affair.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

GOVERNMENT STILL CALLING FOR MORE TIN CANS—GREASE

The United States Government has sent out the call that we must save more tin cans and more scrap grease for the war effort.

Supporting this call, Earl Gore has announced that the City truck will make the rounds in Clanton, Friday July 23, to gather tin cans and urges every housewife to prepare the cans and have them in front of the house ready for the boys to pick up. As to the grease the lady will have to bring it to her nearest market. She will receive about 4c per pound for it.

Mr. Gore stated Tuesday that within the past several days that 250 lbs. of grease had been turned in at local markets.

Large Group Children Attending Vacation Bible School

The Daily Vacation Bible School opened Monday morning at the Methodist Church with 113 children present. Tuesday morning 125 children came.

The following schedule is being followed daily:

8 to 8:30 a. m. Devotional Period.
8:30 to 9:20 Study of the Bible.
9:20 to 9:40 Supervised play.
9:40 to 10:15 Creative Activities.
10:15 to 10:45 Motion Picture is shown.
10:45 to 11 Music and singing.

The program is well planned and the children are kept busy every minute of the time. Tuesday morning Mr. C. E. Stapp, dairyman and Mayor of Clanton gave the children 102 bottles of milk. Chas. Wade, Jr., is contributing much to the school in showing the movie pictures. We have a loyal corps of teachers and helpers who are doing a splendid work.

The school will close Tuesday night July 20th, at which time a social get-together meeting will be held in the basement of the church. Parents, children, and everyone is invited. The Womans Society of Christian Service will be hostess on this occasion and will serve light refreshments.—O. C. Lloyd, Pastor.

CHILTON COUNTY PRICES FIXED BY OPA BEGINNING NEXT WEEK

Housewives in 6 Alabama counties, Chilton, Coosa, Elmore, Pike, Autauga and Lowndes, next week will begin buying approximately 275 general grovery commodities at dollars and cents prices fixed by the District OPA Office in Montgomery.

The OPA's action, which brings to this area the recently instituted community pricing program, is designed to simplify price regulations for retailers, and at the same time make the consumer a partner in the enforcement of wartime price ceilings. The price order is effective Thursday, July 15.

Community prices for the 275 items covered were calculated by applying the maximum retail mark-up over cost permitted for the specified commodities. OPA officials said housewives will find their grocery bills somewhat lower—principally because listing the prices will tend to "climinate sales at illegal prices."

A separate schedule of prices has been fixed for each of four group of retailers. Each retailer is required to post the prices applicable in his store, as well as a sign stating the retail classification in which his store falls. Consumers are asked to obtain the price lists from their local ration boards and check them against prices they are asked to pay. Sales in violation of the community price order should be reported to the local board, or to the OPA office in Montgomery.

The store classifications are as follows: Class 1 store, independents with an annual gross volume of $50,000 or less. Class 2, independents with an annual volume between $50,000 and $250,000. Class 3, chain stores with annual sales of $250,000 or less. Class 4, all stores with an annual volume above $250,000.

BANK OF THORSBY SHOWS STEADY GROWTH DURING PAST SIX MONTHS

We feel sure that the people of Thorsby and its good friends of Jemison will be interested to note the growth of the Bank of Thorsby. In this issue you will notice the statement of condition of this bank as of June 30th, which shows how this institution has grown since the first of the year when it changed hands and was taken over by the people of Thorsby and Jemison. Thorsby should be proud of their bank and give it their utmost support, for all should realize what a bank means to their town. Thorsby should also feel grateful to the people of Jemison and the country surrounding, for these fine people are certainly playing a large part in the growth of this bank. Our hats are off to our good neighbors in Jemison.

Mr. Ogburn, the banks friendly Cashier, is always ready to serve his patrons in any way possible. Under his supervision, we predict for this bank a bright future.

NEW CEDRON TO HAVE CEMETERY CLEANING

There will be a cemetery cleaning at New Cedron Church, Wednesday July 21. All interested, come and bring proper tools to work with.—W. S. Cox.

CHILTON COUNTY SCHOOLS TO OPEN AUGUST 30TH

A report from the Board of Education Wednesday morning was to the effect that the Chilton County Schools would open the fall term on August 30th.

In the past the Elementary schools have open two weeks later than the High Schools. This year all schools will open on the same date.

According to Mrs. Culp, attendance records show much better attendance at the beginning of a school year than at the close.

EASTVIEW—

Eastview Congregational Christian Church has set Tuesday, July the 12, as the day to clean the church and grounds before their revival begins the fourth Sunday. Rev Vel M. Bayne of Trinity, Alabama, is to conduct the services.

Everyone is asked to come early for the clean-up before it gets so hot.

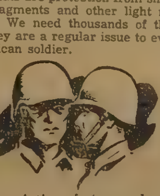
ARCHIE'S CHAPEL—

There will be a Young People's meeting Saturday night at 7:30, after which will be a regular preaching service with Rev. Vel M. Bayne of Trinity, Alabama giving the sermon. Rev Bayne is conducting the revival services for the whole week. Everyone is invited to attend.

The annual home coming day will be celebrated Sunday with Sunday School, Church Services and Dinner on the grounds. There will be services Sunday night thru Friday night with services every morning at eleven. A Vacation Bible School will be held for the young people from nine to Eleven every morning.—Annie R. Campbell, Pastor.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

When the American Expeditionary Force landed in Ireland recently newspapers reported the citizenry remarked at the similarity of the steel helmets worn by our boys with those worn by German troops. These steel hats are protection from shrapnel fragments and other light missiles. We need thousands of them for they are a regular issue to every American soldier.



A smart strap fastens under the chin and they are padded for comfort. One steel helmet costs $5 so every time you fill a $5 stamp book you are buying protection for an American soldier. Invest at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day. Help your community reach its War Bond Quota. U. S. Treasury Department

CHILTON COUNTY JULY WAR BOND QUOTA DOUBLED

$63,700.00 AMOUNT TO BE RAISED BEFORE END OF MONTH

The quota for Chilton County in the sale of War Savings Bonds and Stamps for July has been doubled at compared with previous months. For July the citizens of Chilton County are asked to buy $63,700.00 worth of bonds and stamps. Instead of assigning this amount in one sum, the quota has been made up as follows:

E-Bonds	$32,600.00
F & G Bonds	7,000 00
Stamps	24,100.00
	$63,700.00

Every man, woman, and child in Alabama is being asked to buy at least one dollar's worth of War Stamps during the month of July. The United States is to take the money received from the sale of these stamps during this month and with it build an air plane carrying ship named SHANGRI-LA to carry air planes to Tokyo with which to destroy that city. This will in a way avenge the murder, after surrender, of the brave men who bombed Tokyo with Capt. Jimmy Doolittle last year.

Every person in Chilton County is urged to buy at least $1.00 worth of Stamps this month. These stamps are on sale at all post offices in the county as well as at the following stores:

In Clanton; The Leader, The Dollar Store, Chicago Sales Co., Elmores Levines, The Klinner Furniture Co., The Parisian, Johnson's Fashion Shop E. L. Klinner Furniture Co., and Tiffins Furniture Co. At Jemison: Smith Grocery Co., Langston Cash Store, Cobb Bros., and Jemison Cafe. At Thorsby: Thorsby Cash Store, and Pope Payne Hardware Co. At Maplesville: The Yellow Front Store, J. P. Thomas and Maplesville Hardware Co. At Stanton, Parnell and Son will have the Stamps.

CEMETERY CLEANING AT NEW HARMONY

There will be a cemetery cleaning and cleaning of the churchyard at New Harmony on Tuesday the 20th day of July. All who possibly can, be there. The business of buying some additional land for the cemetery will also be transacted on this day.—J. H. Blankenship. Route 4.

HIGHLAND

There will be a cemetery cleaning here on Wednesday morning, July 21. Bring sufficient tools to work with. If raining that day come the next.

Our revival begins the fourth Sunday with Rev. Paul Oden, helper. Everyone is cordially invited to attend the services.

Strong Allied Drive in South Pacific Threatens Main Jap Base in Solomons; Nazis Make New Bid to Cripple Russia Through Attack on Orel-Belgorod Line

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Taking oath as colonel, Oveta Culp Hobby assumes command of the new Women's Army corps, which replaces the WAAC. Pictured with Colonel Hobby from left to right are Brig. Gen. H. B. Lefis, acting adjutant-general of the army, Gen. George C. Marshall, and Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell.

NAVY STRIKES:
Jap Fleet Hit

The battle in the Southwest Pacific grew in intensity, with the Japs throwing the full weight of their air and sea power against the advancing Allied forces.

Drawn out by the U. S. navy's shelling of the Jap anchorage of Bairoko, through which supplies have been carried to the big enemy air base of Munda on New Georgia island, formations of the Japanese fleet engaged the American ships in the Kula gulf, coming off a poor second best.

According to a communique from General MacArthur's headquarters, no less than six enemy vessels probably were sunk and four damaged. We lost one cruiser, which with a destroyer sunk in the Bairoko bombardment and a transport knocked out in the earlier landings, brought our own known losses to three.

All along the 700 mile front the Japs hurled their aircraft at American positions. Enemy fighters and bombers flew over newly occupied Rendova, struck at General MacArthur's beachhead below Salamaua in New Guinea, and attacked Darwin in northwestern Australia in force. At Salamaua, Allied forces had worked their way through jungle to the northwest, so that with General MacArthur's position, that Jap base was now ringed from three sides.

JAPAN:
Parcels Out Territory

In development of the "great east Asia co-prosperity sphere," Japan ceded four Malay and two Burmese states to the kingdom of Thailand. North of Malaya and east of Burma, Thailand, by its alliance with Japan at the start of the war, provided the Nipponese with a backdoor into these British possessions.

The cession of the Malay states gave Thailand rich rice, tin and rubber producing territories. The population includes more than a million natives. The two Burmese states constitute 24,000 square miles.

The cession was made on occasion of Premier Hediki Tojo's visit to the Thai capital of Bangkok. Tojo later went to Shanghai, where Chandra Bose, exiled Hindu nationalist leader, called for the organization of all rebels for the defeat of the British in India.

WAR PRODUCTION:
Up and Down

Declaring that we are on the verge of one of the greatest trials of our national history, War Production Chairman Donald Nelson revealed that the nation's arms output for May had gained for aircraft and naval vessels, but fallen in other lines.

On a weight basis, airplane production jumped 10 per cent in May, Nelson said, with bomber deliveries up but fighter manufacture unsteady. A total of 204,000 tons of naval vessels were completed.

In other lines, ground ordnance, such as tanks, artillery, etc., was down 3 per cent; merchant vessels were down 4 per cent, and miscellaneous munitions were down 7 per cent.

For the first half of the year, Nelson said the estimated output fell below the goals marked out. Merchant shipping was 44 per cent of the year's objective; army ordnance and naval vessels, 40 per cent, and aircraft 35 per cent.

SUBSIDIES:
Would Limit Expenditures

If President Roosevelt's subsidy program to "roll-back" the price of retail food was to become the administration's bulwark in its anti-inflationary program, congress indicated that it would retain a voice in such a policy by limiting the government's expenditure of money in its operation.

In considering a new Commodity Credit corporation bill which would allow subsidies, the senate banking and currency committee heard Sen. Robert Taft propose an appropriation of 525 million dollars to "roll-back" prices to January 1, 1944. Unless such a limitation were made, Taft said, the government could borrow any amount from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

President Roosevelt declared it was necessary to "roll-back" food prices to equalize the stabilization of wages. Subsidy opponents contend that such payments will only increase the public debt, and wages generally have risen to a level at which consumers can well afford to buy food at present prices.

RUSSIA:
Nazis Gain

Big guns thundered — airplanes whined in endless swoops — huge tanks rumbled over barren plains; action had come again on the Russian front.

While the Nazis insisted the action was of a local, minor character in segments of the Ukrainian and Kursk provinces in Russian hands, the Reds claimed the Germans had launched a major offensive. Although announcing that they had stopped the advance generally along the 165 mile front, the Reds admitted the Nazis had breached their defenses in the Belgorod sector.

Red reports indicated the Nazis had massed large armored formations in the battle zone. The 1,271 tanks the Russians said they knocked out would be sufficient to outfit four Nazi panzer divisions. In two days the Reds claimed they shot 314 planes out of the sky.

For their part, the Nazis said their infantry had initiated a local attack, and then fighting had flared all along the front.

CANNED GOODS:
Increase Prices

To absorb higher labor and material costs, canners of vegetables and processors of frozen berries were authorized to increase prices of the 1943 pack by the Office of Price Administration.

Prices of canned tomatoes, corn, snap beans and peas, however, will remain at the 1942 level. Seeking to stabilize the prices of these essential commodities, the government will pay subsidies to canners to make up for increased costs.

The OPA also acted to place specific increases on spinach, asparagus, mustard and turnip greens. To reflect wage boosts, canners of spinach were allowed a 4½ per cent boost. Price of the No. 2 can of asparagus was raised 4 cents and mustard and turnip greens were increased 1½ cents.

Increases ranging up to 3 cents a pound were allowed to processors of blueberries, cranberries, currants, dewberries, elderberries, huckleberries, Johnson berries and Olympic berries.

DADS:
O. K. Draft Delay

By a vote of 11 to 5, the senate military affairs committee voted to delay the induction of fathers until after January 1, 1944. Congressional action on the bill will not be taken until sessions are resumed in September, however, one month before the drafting of fathers is scheduled.

Introduced by Senator Burton Wheeler, the bill provides that any man married before Pearl Harbor, who has maintained bona fide family relationships since that date and has children under 18 years of age, would be exempt from induction until the first of next year.

As the Wheeler bill was being approved by the committee, the War Manpower commission announced that an additional 3,600,000 persons will have to be placed in the services and munitions industries within the next 12 months. Of the total, 2,000,000 men and women will be needed in uniform, 1,500,000 by December 31.

Materialization of the WMC plans will mean that half of the population will either be fighting or working. 11,300,000 will be in the services; 11,600,000 in war industries; 12,000,000 in agriculture, and 30,000,000 in other non-farm work.

POST-WAR WORLD:
What Labor Thinks

How one great union feels about the post-war world was ably expressed by the United Automobile Workers, CIO, in a seven-point program for peace time.

Among other things, the UAW called for government ownership and operation of industries whose monopoly gives them dictation in their fields; the 30-hour week, and a vast public works program, calling for construction of schools, highways and power projects.

Of private industry, the UAW said: "Our industries can no longer be operated to serve private interests where those private interests conflict with the public need. Initiative can find its most useful outlet, greatest recognition and highest reward when exerted in the public service."

The UAW also proposed each soldier be given a $2,500 bonus upon his discharge from the service.

CABINET FEUD:
Jones Answers Wallace

Fur continued to fly in the heated cabinet feud between Vice President Henry Wallace and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones over Wallace's charges that Jones had throttled activities of the Board of Economic Warfare, and failed to build up an adequate stockpile of tin, rubber, quinine, etc., before Pearl Harbor as directed by congress.

Repeating his previous statement that the Reconstruction Finance corporation which he heads has committed itself to purchase 3½ billion dollars of foreign material, Jones said the BEW initiated only 10 per cent of this business. Then he declared that the RFC cannot sign blank checks for the use of any government agency, and charged Wallace with amending President Roosevelt's original order setting up the BEW to permit approval of BEW transactions without inspection.

In the matter of stockpiles, Jones said our supply of quinine was ample and BEW's program for obtaining the drug in South America failed to take account of that continent's unfamiliarity with producing the bark. BEW accused Jones of overestimating our inventory by 50 per cent, and delaying the BEW's production program.

MEDITERRANEAN:
Adolf Comes to Rescue

Increasing opposition to Allied air raids on Italy and her neighboring islands by swarms of Axis planes, many of them German, indicate that the Nazi air force is being employed in strength in the critical Mediterranean area.

Despite the stiffening resistance, however, Allied planes broke through to pound Palermo to such an extent that the Italian radio admitted that Sicilian air and naval base was of no further use. Allied reconnaissance also disclosed that the Italians had destroyed shipping installations at the harbor of Trapani.

According to American fliers, the Axis met the strong Allied formations with new tactics. Approaching the rear echelons of the Allied squads, the enemy planes flew in a single line, dropping incendiaries that burst into strings of small explosives.

Official Axis circles awaited an attack on Sicily or Sardinia or Corsica. Capture of Sicily would be necessary for an attack on the Italian mainland or protecting Allied convoys bound for the Balkans, they said, while occupation of Corsica and Sardinia would be necessary for an invasion of the French coast.

POLES:
Russian Status Unchanged

The tragic death of Gen. Wladislaw Sikorski, premier of the Polish government-in-exile, has not altered that government's attitude toward Soviet Russia, its officials declared. Poland's attitude will continue to be one of friendliness, with insistence on Polish territorial rights, which have been contested by Russia's claim to portions of the former Polish republic.

GOD ENCOURAGES MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:13-16; 4:10-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Certainly I will be with thee.—Exodus 3:12.

Encouragement is something much needed, and not too often given. The word means to put some new thing into the heart of another, that is, to hearten and assure him, especially in the bearing of a heavy responsibility.

Moses, in all probability the world's greatest military and national leader, was about to lead his people out from under the mighty hand of Pharaoh. His final preparation for that epochal deed and all the years to follow was a personal meeting with God.

Possibly it was the mistake Moses had made and which caused him to be sent into the back of the desert, that now caused him to move with—

I. Understandable Caution (Exod. 3:13).

There is something remarkably fine about real humility. It commends itself to our thinking as the proper attitude of a mortal being, particularly in the face of spiritual responsibility.

Neither God nor man dares entrust a high and difficult commission to foolish man who brusquely "rushes in where angels fear to tread." The fact that one feels fully and unhesitatingly qualified to take over such a responsibility is almost a certain indication that he is not the man to assume it.

Moses' request for God's backing must have been acceptable to Him, for He gave Moses—

II. Unlimited Authority (3:14-16).

Moses went as God's messenger. He was authorized to put all the majesty and power of the Infinite One behind his words and acts.

The ambassador must have credentials. God's representative has them. When "they shall say"—what an important and difficult situation that creates. The one who speaks for God must expect not only the scornful bitterness of God's enemies, but also the unbelieving questions of those whom he seeks to serve.

"What shall I say?" asks Moses, and God answers that he may say that "I AM" had sent him. This name of God reveals Him as the eternal, independent, self-sufficient, self-existent, immutable, personal Being. Consider, Christian brethren, whose we are and whom we serve.

But Moses seems to have been unable to see beyond his own human infirmity even in the light of such a glorious revelation, supplemented as it was by miraculous powers, and we find him showing an—

III. Unjustified Humility (4:10-13).

Perhaps we should not call this humility at all, for in one so divinely called and encouraged it was an act of unbelief and almost impertinence.

When God calls a man He knows his limitations. Why then should one plead them as an excuse for not serving? The excuse of Moses that he was not a fluent speaker has been the standby of unwilling workers all through the ages. When asked to lead a prayer meeting, teach a Sunday school class, conduct a young people's meeting, thousands upon thousands have lamely thus excused themselves and missed a blessing.

The perfect answer of God (v. 11) merits attention. God made your mouth and mine. He gives us the power of speech. He asks not the eloquence of polished rhetorical phrases, or the flights of man's imagination. He wants but the incomparable eloquence of His own words on our lips.

No man should think too highly of himself, but let him beware lest he think too lowly about God. We are not sufficient for the opportunity. But God is more than sufficient.

Having called Moses, God saw to it that Moses went on with His work, even though now He had to call in Moses' older brother to help him. It was, in fact, an—

IV. Unnecessary Substitution (4:14-17).

Loving and patient is our God, but, mark it well, there is a boundary line to that patience. Moses went too far in his needless humility, and really reflected on the ability of God. God promptly substituted Aaron as the spokesman.

Gracious was He in thus providing a helper for Moses. But one wonders what Moses missed of blessing and power because of his slowness of heart. To decline the labor and the responsibility of service for God means loss far greater than we may ever know.

God's dealings with Moses speak eloquently to us of His willingness to enable and use a man who lacked some of the gifts for leadership. Let none of us be like Moses and become involved in needless worry about our gifts, and forget God's purpose and enabling power. When God calls, our gifts are not the controlling factor; in fact, they are not a great factor at all. The question then becomes, Is God able? Let us trust and obey Him.

Cold Radiant Light

Probably the coldest radiant light made by man is produced by the reaction of certain chemicals in an alkaline solution, says Collier's. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Recapped tires will render satisfactory service — if the tire carcass is in good condition, good workmanship is exercised, inflation rules are observed and speed is kept to 35 mph. Have your tires recapped at a reliable shop.

Scientists have developed the fact that when a car is driven at 50 mph there is a centrifugal force of two tons trying to pull the tires apart.

That our standard of living is affected in many ways by the shortage of rubber will be appreciated when it is known that normally about 50,000 items were made with rubber.

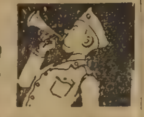
See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE



THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former feature editor of the Charlotte (N. C.) News, has been inducted into the army and has completed the first few days of his training at camp. He has given prospective inductees advise to "paint the town red" before getting into the army and once in he tells them that "the first three weeks are the hardest." He has gone through the experience of the army physical exam, has been fitted with a uniform, been classified as a cook and has had a good taste of KP duty. In fact, he has had so much of the latter that his sergeant is beginning to despair. So is Private Hargrove. He has completed a KP session and returns to his quarters.

CHAPTER III

I tiptoed into the squadroom so that the sergeant wouldn't notice that I was wearing fatigue clothes. His voice rang out to me as I passed his door, and I slunk in guiltily.

The sergeant's face showed that he was hurt. "You were on KP again today, weren't you, Hargrove?"

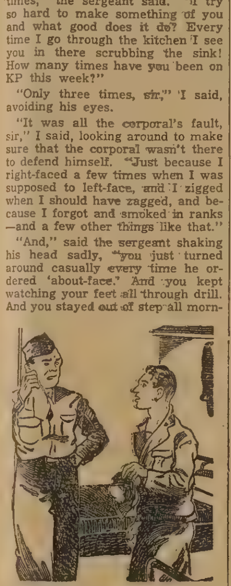
I lowered my eyes and scuffed my toe against the floor. "Yes, sir."

"Oh, I get so discouraged sometimes," the sergeant said. "I try so hard to make something of you and what good does it do? Every time I go through the kitchen I see you in there scrubbing the sink! How many times have you been on KP this week?"

"Only three times, sir," I said, avoiding his eyes.

"It was all the corporal's fault, sir," I said, looking around to make sure that the corporal wasn't there to defend himself. "Just because I right-faced a few times when I was supposed to left-face, and I zigged when I should have zagged, and because I forgot and smoked in ranks—and a few other things like that."

"And," said the sergeant shaking his head sadly, "you just turned around casually every time he ordered 'about-face.' And you kept watching your feet all through drill. And you stayed out of step all morning and you took those plowhand strides of yours and walked all over the man in front of you. And you sassed the drillmaster three times. And you generally spoiled the whole morning's drill. Why can't you be a good boy and learn the drills?"



"That's all, Hargrove," the said, mopping his brow; "you're not supposed to salute a non-commissioned officer—just go to bed."

"I don't mean to be bad, sir," I said.

"And that's another thing," the sergeant moaned. "Why must you say 'sir' to the noncommissioned officers and forget to salute the commissioned ones?" He mopped this forehead wearily. "Do you know what the top sergeant told me today?"

"No, sir," I said, twisting my cap and awaiting the worst.

"He said—and don't 'sir' me—that when the battery commander had you on the carpet yesterday you stood there leaning on the table, and you shifted your feet eight times. And you saluted four times during his talk—and when you saluted you gave a European heel-click and bowed. And when the captain dismissed you, you told him, 'Thank you, sergeant' and forgot to salute when you left."

"Was there anything else, sir?" I asked in a whisper.

"That's all, Hargrove," he said, wiping great drops of perspiration from his forehead.

"Thank you, sir," I said. I saluted, clicking my heels, and turned to go.

"Hargrove," the tired voice said. "You're not supposed to salute a noncommissioned — Never mind, Hargrove. Just go to bed."

"Just look at me," the exercise sergeant roars in a voice that would go four miles against the wind. "Just look! I weigh two hundred and eight pounds and I'm in the worst physical condition I've ever been in! I ought to be busted for the way I've allowed myself to get fat and flabby! I'm ashamed!"

You look at the exercise sergeant and wonder what he's leading up to. To you he looks like the "after taking" part of a malted yeast advertisement. He could probably lick his weight in police dogs.

His next statement explains everything. "Now I'm going to show you an exercise that's so simple it's almost ridiculous. Even I can do it. Now, I don't want to hear anybody down there admitting he's in worse shape than I am. If I can do it, you can do it—or else!"

He outlines the exercise and you begin wondering how a contortionist happened to wind up at Fort Bragg. This self-styled "fat and flabby" calisthenics master doesn't have any knees or elbows. You stand there waiting to hear his spine fall apart under the strain, but he comes up all in one piece.

"That's the way I want you boys to do it," he says, beaming cheerfully. You begin to feel your face getting gray and you wonder why a bolt of lightning doesn't come to deliver you from the prospective torture.

"One. Two. Three. Four. Five. Six. Seven. Eight. One. Two—"

The first three or four times are the hardest. After that, you get the swing of it. It's really tame stuff, you decide.

"The next exercise," says the sergeant, "is what we call the quarter, half and full knee bend. It goes like this." He shows you. When you see it, the corners of your mouth go up in a sneer of derision (unless the corporal is looking). Ho Hum, you say to yourself. Why do they take up time with this play?

"Exercise — one, two, three, four—" Quarter, half, full recover. Your knees get That Tired Feeling after the third time. After the sixth time, you feel your eyes getting glassy. After the ninth, you're floating in space. By the time the exercise is over, nothing matters any more.

Before you have marched off the drill field you notice that you still haven't collapsed. In fact, you find to your disappointment that you're beginning to feel good. All limbered up.

Quarantine has been lifted for us of the July 17 contingency. If the sergeant wasn't looking over my shoulder, I'd say it's about time. Before our release from isolation, Army style, I was able to get around and swap lies and gripes with every one of the boys in our group.

A little under 100 per cent of them came up with the same account, which reads as follows: "Our battery has the worst food in the Army. We've got the worst sergeant in the battery. No kidding, though, our platoon makes all the others look crummy. Here two weeks already and I haven't pulled KP or had the sergeant jump me a time yet. Don't tell a soul, but I think they're going to make me a corporal." All of which is a lot of hot air.

Actually, they're fighting to get into the mess hall first at every meal. They're gaining weight and tanning where they used to blister. They're sassing their sergeants, who deplore them as the sorriest bunch of rookies they ever sweated over. Every one of them has been on KP at least once.

By the time Congress says I may go home and be a mere civilian again, I suppose I'll be the best soldier at Fort Bragg. At least I seem to get more individual attention than anyone else. Private tutoring, I always tell the boys.

We were at work the other morning learning how to handle a rifle. The sergeant was putting us through our paces.

"Hargrove," he said with infinite sweetness, "where is the balance of your rifle?"

"This is all the supply sergeant gave me, sir," I said. "I thought it was all here."

The sergeant slapped his forehead and mumbled something furiously under his breath. "Wonder-child," he said, "this (pointing) is the balance of your rifle. I can't imagine why they call it that, unless it's because when you hold the rifle there with one hand, it's balanced." He then went on for a few minutes explaining a few of the things I had still failed to master.

"Now do you understand it?" he asked, beaming at me with a look made of all sweet accord.

"No, sir," I said.

The sergeant sighed wearily. "Private Hargrove," he said, "right down by the next barracks there's a group of young people who are practicing with rifles for the first time. They haven't had theirs for three days like you have. Run along down there and see if you can keep up with them."

I tried. There was some confusion about the orders, however. At the end of a movement where I wound up with my rifle on my left shoulder, the rest of the detail had theirs on the right. I noticed also that I usually finished a command long before the others.

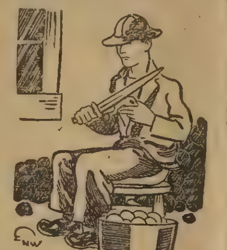
The sergeant in charge of the detail commented on this, "You know, Shorty," he said, "you have all of these routines worked out much better than the War Department was able to do them. Where it took them sixteen counts to complete the sixteen-count manual, you always manage somehow to complete it in twelve."

I was still blushing modestly when he called the corporal over. He said something to the corporal, who took me by the elbow and guided me gently around the building at a spot where, he said, the battery officers wouldn't see me drilling and thereby be discouraged.

"This," he said, pronouncing each syllable slowly and distinctly, "is what we have come to call a rifle. R-i-f-l-e. It is used for the purpose of shooting. Primitive man, we are told, did not have a rifle. Primitive man was forced to bring down his supper with a knife, a spear, a stone, a bow and arrows or his own little primitive hands."

I nodded automatically and paid scant attention to all this. I already knew it.

"Today," he continued, "civilization has been improved upon to the extent that—" and he went on and on. After that we began at the beginning of the manual of arms and took each command slowly. The corporal sweated for forty-five minutes.



"In the first place you can peel potatoes with a bayonet."

"Are there any questions now, Private Hargrove?"

I thought for a while. "Yes, sir," I said. "That is, 'yes, corporal.' What use will I have for a rifle? I'm going to be a cook."

The corporal mopped his brow. "Well, Private Hargrove," he said, patting me lovingly on the shoulder, "you'll find use for it. Ha! ha! In the first place, you can peel potatoes with a bayonet. And in the second place—if you're as good a cook as you are a soldier—you'll need it every day. After breakfast, lunch, and supper you'll need it to protect yourself from murder at the hands of your comrades in arms."

"See here, Private Hargrove," the sergeant sighed. "Can't you try just once to do something right? Don't you want to be a credit to the platoon? You don't want us to be the worst bunch in the battery after we've been the best for so long, do you?"

"Please, sergeant," I begged him, "couldn't I just stay inside for this once? They'd never miss me at rifle inspection. I'd be very quiet and nobody would ever know."

He ignored the request. "Try hard to remember, private, these few simple things. When the officer reaches the man next to you, open the rifle. When he grabs your gun, don't hang onto it or you'll have a bellyache for two weeks. When he throws it back to you, don't catch it with your chin. And when you get it back, snap the trigger. And heaven help you if you ball this thing up!"

The forces of Destiny placed me second in the front rank at inspection. We stood at attention for three minutes before the inspecting officer approached. For seconds after we brought our rifles up for inspection, a fly which seemed to be a little larger than a June bug landed on my forehead. The sergeant shot a warning glance across my bow and I decided to humor the fly. It would go away soon, I told myself, although I knew it wouldn't.

The inspecting officer still had not begun his rounds. He was waiting for us to get off our guard. The fly demonstrated its impatience by stepping up to double-quick in its pacing. "Oh, if I only had you alone!" I thought. The itching nose became more insistent. A gnat made a three-point landing on it and began playing about the left nostril.

I gave the sergeant a glance which said distinctly, "This can't go on much longer. Something's going to pop!" His return glance said, in italicized words, "Bat just one eyelash and I'll break your neck!"

Suddenly the inspecting officer grabbed the rifle from the hand of Grafenstein, who stood beside me. His lightning swoop on the gun, coupled with the speed with which Grafenstein relinquished it, completely paralyzed me. An almost inaudible groan made me look at the sergeant. He was making furious grimaces at me and his face looked as if he was going to burst a blood vessel. He kept wagging his eyes down to the bolt of my rifle. A split second before the officer reached me, I managed to pull the bolt.

I could see the sergeant unloading freight carloads of potatoes for me to peel. I could see the next weekend, with me restricted to quarters while the rest of the platoon enjoyed themselves in town.

The officer reached me several lifetimes later. He looked at my face and sighed wearily. Then, with infinite tenderness, he gently lifted the rifle from my grasp. He inspected it and handed it back to me as though he was laying a brick on an orchid or giving a hundred-pound weight to his aged grandmother. He sighed again and passed on to the next man, whose rifle he grabbed with the confidence that the man wouldn't fall apart when he snatched it.

'When Will War End?' Nation's No. 1 Question

Ruhr Valley Bombings Seen as Concrete Evidence of Germany's Inevitable Defeat; Aviation Expert Revises Estimate.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

Today Washington, deep as it is in the problems of the moment—on the home front and along the seething globe-scattered sectors where our men are fighting—is more deeply conscious of the future than ever before in history. And that feeling is clearly reflected in every town, city and cross-roads in the country.

The letters I receive express this interest in tomorrow, the many polls on post-war problems and the plans to solve them echo that interest, the comment of leaders, the organization of clubs and forums and committees to discuss them, add up to the largest and healthiest curiosity that the nation has ever seen. The political parties recognize this and the Republicans are busy working on a constructive foreign-policy plank for their 1944 platform to meet the administration's post-war plans.

As the people look toward tomorrow, the first thing they ask is: "When will the war end?" You can't get an official prognostication on that subject and, personally, I would hesitate even to make a guess. But this week, there came to my notice two remarks, one from the German propaganda minister and one from the president of an American aviation corporation which I want to place figuratively in parallel columns—not only side by side with each other but in balance with previous remarks of both men.

Goebbels' Viewpoint

Some time ago, Herr Goebbels spoke of "the Ruhr," that little industrial area including the historic center of Germany's munitions manufacture, the Krupp works of Essen.

Goebbels was on record as saying that the destiny of the Ruhr was the destiny of Germany itself. And then only a few days ago, a broadcaster from Berlin admitted that the "havoc" wrought by the Allied bombers in that area was "incredible."

The other gentleman whom I wish to quote is R. S. Damon, president of the Republic Aviation corporation, which builds those famous P-47 "Thunderbolts," the fighters which have done such an efficient job of protecting our bombers over Europe.

Some time ago Damon predicted that Germany would be knocked out of the war by 1944. But Mr. Damon has now revised that estimate. He says:

"Unpreparedness may have cost us many early rounds but now it appears possible that Germany will have been removed from the lists by the end of 1943. I believe this to be true because no nation, not even Hitler's Germany, can suffer the rate of attrition which is now being inflicted on the Nazis and survive for long. The aerial combat box scores are now so definitely in our favor and our constantly increasing production of fine aircraft and well-trained airmen precludes any possibility of those scores being reduced unless by a miracle, and the days of Hitler's miracles have ceased to be. Our air forces are now systematically and liberally pulverizing the industrial centers of Germany and without her industries, Germany cannot fight or even exist."

Mind you, I do not underwrite this prophecy but I think it is worth recording because both men have revised their views in the direction of a shorter war—Goebbels would never have dwelt on the importance of the Ruhr in the beginning if he knew he would have to admit the degree of its destruction—Damon, after similar consideration, reduces the time he believes it will take to knock Germany out.

Aviation's Growth

In both cases, we have a tribute to the tremendous growth of American combatant airpower. Now let us look at the parallel growth in non-combatant airpower. We turn to no less an authority than the Office of War Information:

"By 1945, it is expected that transport planes in the 100,000-120,000-pound class will be flying in quantity, carrying loads of 15 tons at a speed of 250 miles per hour over distances such as from New York to Chicago.

"By 1946, it is expected that 70 per cent of the passenger travel, now relying on railroad pullmans, will go by air—about 20,000,000 passengers a year.

"Exclusive of certain military airdromes, there will be about 865 major airports in the United States by the end of this year, all with paved runways of 3,500 feet or more, capable of handling the largest planes, where fewer than 100 existed in 1940. In addition to these, there are well over 2,000 smaller fields.

"To operate these planes and airports after the war, there will be the 3,000,000 air-minded and trained pilots, navigators, radiomen, airport engineers, traffic controllers and others who will be in the air forces by the end of this year."

The OWI predicts post-war flights of 11 hours from Washington to Paris and London; 7 hours from Washington to Mexico City; 16 from Washington to Moscow; 18 from Washington to Cairo or Buenos Aires and 22 hours from Washington to Tokyo (if Tokyo is still on the map).

I quote these statements to show how tremendously the world we are living in today differs from the world we lived in before Pearl Harbor—a change which must affect all phases of life tomorrow. Already, as far as the military go, the earth has shrunk from the comparative size of an orange to the size of a marble. When the war is over and we have had time to adapt what we have learned in the field of aviation to peaceful transportation, it will shrink to the size of a pea. When we shift our war effort to peacetime production, it will shrink still further.

Utopian Plans

Aviation is only one phase of the achievement the war has forced upon us; there are great plans bursting to become realities, many that seem so utopian that the cynics scoff—a world organization to enforce peace and achieve freedom from fear; world co-operation which will increase production and facilitate distribution to the point where there will be at least an approximation of freedom from want—to tick off only two of the four freedoms for which we are supposed to be fighting.

Discouraged at our inability to realize within our own vast borders all of the dreams of our founding fathers, we cannot believe that the high aims for unity embracing the whole world can be anything but pure fantasy. But if we can shrink the globe from orange to marble, a feat that would have been considered utterly incredible to our own grandfathers, must we say that we cannot build a world unity and a world understanding greater than anything heretofore conceived?

It took a dreamer to put the first wings on man—the laboratory and the machine shop did the rest. With the widespread will to a better future providing the psychological inspiration, who knows but that the energy which has made the prosecution of global war possible can be transmuted into a framework upon which global peace can be built?

It's a smaller globe, after all.

As we begin to think in global terms, we have to adjust our views of geography. For instance, suppose someone should tell you that the important port of Siberia, for which the Japs yearn but do not dare attack, the port of Vladivostok, were a hundred and fifty miles south of the poetic city of Venice with its streets of water? Of course, you would know better but could you say how much better?

Or if someone said flatly to you: "You can't tell me what South American countries a line running straight south from Savannah, Ga., would pass through," you would feel you could at least guess and get one right.

No. No. Naples is 150 miles north of Vladivostok.

You can't name any South American country south of Savannah, Ga., because the western coastline of South America is east of such a point. Guess again.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Tokyo propagandists have added India to the growing list of countries they are seeking to dazzle with promises of Japanese-style "independence," the Office of War Information says on the basis of Tokyo broadcasts exploiting the reported arrival in Japan of Subhas Chandra Bose, outlawed Indian extremist now very active in the Axis camp.

Commemorative lights in Polish cemeteries must be extinguished during blackouts, according to an article in a German-language paper in Poland reported to the office of war information.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

SERVICE ON THE HOME FRONT—

Two weeks ago we ran the first of a series of advertisements for the Standard Oil Company, which we commend to the special attention of our readers.

These are unique, in that they make no mention of Standard Oil products. They are designed to let the public know what Standard Oil agents, dealers, tank-wagon drivers, etc., are doing on the home front in the present war emergency.

The Standard Oil Company has been serving the people of Chilton county for many years. They began this service back in the days when coal-oil and axle grease were their principal products, when roads were bad, and when serving the rural South was difficult. In those days, we didn't have electricity, and the people depended upon the Standard Oil Company for the kerosene to light their lamps. And good weather or bad, they always managed to get this kerosene to us.

When the automobile came along, they made gasoline and motor-oil available from one end of Alabama to the other. They've never forgotten their country friends, who were their first customers. Today, wherever we drive, we're never far from a Standard station.

The Standard Oil Company of Kentucky is a good example of a Southern business organization—of the South, for the South, and by the South—serving the people of the South with necessary products of dependability.

TWO AND A HALF TO ONE—

With the knowledge that the number of civilian government employees per soldier in uniform has increased one hundred per cent since the World War, the Joint Committee on Reduction of Non-essential Federal Expenditures has recommended the prompt elimination of 300,000 government employees.

In World War I there was one government employee for every five soldiers. This war sees one for every two and a half men in uniform. The federal personnel report of the Committee, headed by Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, strongly criticizes more than a dozen government agencies for this excess and denounces their personnel policies as making a tremendous drain on the nation's manpower.

The Committee's report pointed out that the 925,000 civilian employees of the government in 1939 had been increased by 205 per cent, or to 2,830,000, by January 1, 1943, and by 225 pr cent, or to 3,008,519, by April 1, 1943.

Eliminating purely clerical employees, the Byrd Committee found that only 1,349,098 of the civilian workers, or 45 per cent of the total, are actually engaged in direct war production

In soundly berating many of the government's departments for their delay in submittng personnel reports or in making incorrect returns, the Committee said:

"It is amazing to note that in the face of vast numbers of employees now on the pay roll of the federal government, the main reason given by the agencies for their inability to submit correct reports on time was 'lack of sufficient personnel.'"

HOW TO PLANT YOUR FALL IRISH POTATOES

By L. M. Ware, Horticulturist AES

It is much more difficult to succeed with fall than with spring Irish potatoes. If the grower, however, can provide certain conditions, the fall Irish potato crop should not be overlooked. Fall-grown Irish potatoes provide a relatively concentrated energy food and they store well during the winter months.

A few suggestions may be of value in growing fall Irish potatoes:

1. The chances for success with fall potatoes are fair in Chilton County if special precautions are taken.

2. In Chilton county, best results may be expected by planting on moist but well drained bottom land sites, or if planted on upland sites by mulching with straw, peanut hulls or leaves. Irrigation of upland sites will help if mulching is not practiced.

3. Seed, to sprout uniformely and satisfactorily, should have about six weeks rest period, that is, there should be a minimum of six weeks between harvesting of the spring crop and plantng of the fall crop. Spring-grown potatoes from the South Alabama crop of the Triumph variety make a good seed. These will be scarce this year. Locally grown seed of the Triumph variety from the spring-grown crop may be used; the Cobbler a white variety, sprouts much more slowly than the Triumph and is not generally recommended for fall planting. Seed from the North Alabama spring crop may be used for the fall crop. However, irregular stand often results.

4. Fall crop of Irish potatoes in Chilton County should be planted from August 1 to August 20.

5. Better results may be expected on sites which have had a good winter crop turned in April or early May and have been harrowed several times to prevent loss of moisture by grass or weed growth. Every effort should be made to conserve moisture in the soil.

6. An application of 1000 pounds per acre of a 4-10-7 fertilizer is recommended. Scab may be reduced if the nitrogen in the fertilizer is derived from ammonium sulphate or from some acid-forming material.

7. It is well to apply the fertilizer in the drill about two weeks before planting, mix well with the soil and cover. At the time of planting the furrow should be opened, the potato immediately planted and then a 5 to 6-inch bed thrown over the potatoes. Eoch operation should be done with an idea of conserving all moisture possible.

8. Seed should be 1 ounce in size, planted 12 inches apart in the row and covered about 6 inches deep. Just before the sprouts begin to appear above ground a light drag harrow or weeder may be used to pull the bed down to about 4 inches.

9. Better stands may be expected if the potatoes are planted in a cool, moist soil. Plantng on cool, cloudy days or early in the morning is advised.

10. Where a straw mulch is used it should be spread uniformly over the ground about 3 to 4 inches deep. A mulch wll prevent high temperatures at midday and during the afternoons and will make it unnecessary to cultivate. The few weeds which penetrate the straw may be removed by pulling.

11. Fall Irish potatoes may be stored in banks just as sweet potatoes, in cool, dark cellars or basements, or in cottonseed, cottonseed hulls, or sawdust.

A camp Rucker soldier recently was turned over to military authorities on charges of attempting to attack a 9 year old girl.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Torpedo Junction

"Awash amidship!"

"Sparks," the radio operator, has sent his final message from another U-boat victim. The lifeboats are pulling away from the doomed vessel as millions of dollars' worth of food, supplies and munitions settle to the ocean bottom in another allied catastrophe in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Millions of dollars' worth of material that was paid for by the dollars we saved and invested in War Bonds. Thousands of man hours have been lost.

We can have but one answer: work harder, save more and invest more frequently in War Bonds.

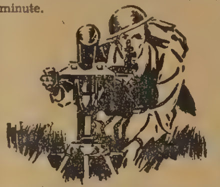
What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The "Stovepipe," as the 60-millimeter trench mortar is commonly known, is used by our infantry for close-in fighting. It fires a 2.4-pound shell at the rate of about 35 a minute.



The mortar fires its projectile in a U-shaped arc and for this reason may be successfully camouflaged behind an obstruction. It costs about $500. You and your neighbors, joining together, can buy many of these effective weapons for use of our Army. Investing at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every payday will do the job. Get on the firing line on the home front . . . join the "Ten Percent Club."

when hogs are kept on sanitary CONCRETE

A sure way to increase your pork production is to keep pigs on concrete from farrowing to market time.

One farmer who does this reports: "My first crop is gone to market by the time the second is farrowed . . . average weights around 275 pounds at six months . . . 100 pounds of pork with 300 pounds of feed."

Hog floors are only one of many improvements that will make your farm more efficient and productive. A new barn floor, poultry house, milk house, milk cooling tank, manure pit or watering trough costs little to build with concrete and will last a lifetime.

Concrete farm jobs require a minimum of critical war materials. Many jobs need just a few bags of cement, and some sand and gravel or stone.

If you need help, get in touch with your concrete contractor or building material dealer. Let us send you free "how-to-build" booklets.

Transform Axis Stronghold Into an Allied Base

After surrender of Pantelleria, a series of patrols was organized to search for stray enemy units and snipers. At upper left three British fighters pick their way through a battered street. At upper right a bulldozer clears away rubble as the island is turned into a base for use against the Axis. Italian soldiers, marines, and sailors stand in line (bottom) waiting for transportation from the former Axis stronghold.

French Girls Help Stage 'South Sea Scandals'

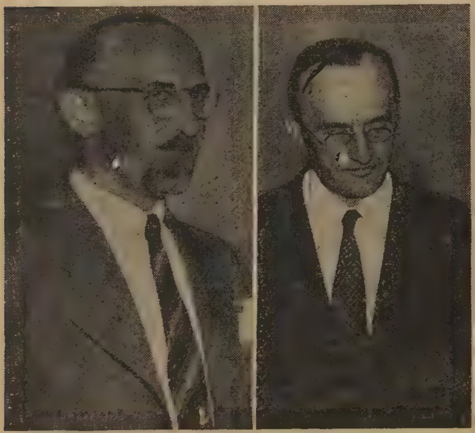
Seized by FBI in Spy Hunt

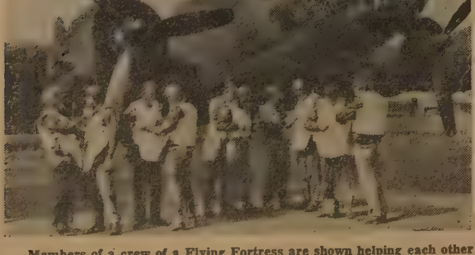


These two men have been arrested as spies by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Erwin Harry De Spretter (left) had been making gun sights for our armed forces. He admitted guilt in connection with sending information to Germany. Ernest Frederick Lehmitz (right) was known as a highly efficient air raid warden. He is accused of informing Germany of U. S. convoy movements.

Hurdles to Health

Wounded American soldiers now take special exercises in hospital gymnasiums to rehabilitate their injured limbs and muscles. Private Ralph Johnson is assisted over these foot-high hurdles by Sergt. D. D. Gilbert. They are hospitalized overseas.

Fighters Put on Their Armor



Members of a crew of a Flying Fortress are shown helping each other don their armored flying vests at a United States bomber station in England. Made of tough manganese steel, these vests protect the airmen from flak shrapnel and fragments of cannon shells. A quick pull on a rip cord causes the vest to fall away from the body.

Fun Outdoors

Your family will like eating outdoors for nothing seems so good as beef barbecues or hamburgers served in the open when appetites are their sharpest, or coffee made on a make-shift stove from a couple of large bricks maneuvered to hold the old granite coffee pot in place.

Food is good and wholesome, and there's plenty of it whether you cook it at home and wrap it up to take with you to the spot of your choice, or if you gather twigs and cook to order. Make use of the back yard for your barbecue, or take to the woods or lake, even if you have to use the bicycle. The change from eating on the dining room table will be a welcome change and will do wonders toward perking up summer appetites.

Make outdoor eating as convenient as dining at home. Be sure to include such things as salt and pepper, napkins, plenty of cups, plates and silverware in your basket to make the family comfortable.

A spicy sauce with beef or veal makes up a delicious barbecue. The pound and a quarter of meat is enough for 12 buns—just in case you're interested in stretching those precious red points:

Barbecued Beef on Buns.

1¼ pounds beef or veal
1 cup thinly sliced onions
1 clove garlic, chopped (optional)
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
½ cup catsup
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cut meat in 1-inch cubes and brown in hot fat. Add 1 cup water and simmer 1½ hours until tender. Brown onions and garlic in hot fat and add to cooked meat with remainder of ingredients. Make on outdoor stove or wrap carefully in container with plenty of towels to keep warm, and take to barbecue. To serve, spoon on to warmed buns.

Hamburgers are still a great favorite for outdoor eating, particularly now since hamburger still has fairly low point value. This recipe makes tasty and tender, well seasoned hamburgers:

Prize Hamburgers
(Makes 24 hamburgers)

4 pounds hamburger
½ cup chili sauce
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1½ tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon onion salt
½ teaspoon celery salt
24 buns, toasted and buttered

Mix hamburger well with sauce and seasonings. Form into 24 patties and fry slowly in hot fat until browned and done, on both sides. When nearly done invert the bottom half of a bun over the hamburger so that bun will be steamed and toasted. The other half may be toasting on a stick while one rests on hamburger. Place other half on hamburger when ready to eat.

Many families are fond of barbecued spareribs on their jaunts outdoors. You'll like this one, particularly the sauce:

Barbecued Spareribs.
(Serves 4)

3 to 4 pounds ribs, cut in pieces
1 lemon
1 large onion
1 cup catsup
½ cup Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 dashes tabasco sauce
2 cups water

Place ribs in shallow roasting pan, meaty side up. On each piece place an unpeeled slice of lemon, a thin slice of onion. Roast in hot oven (450 degrees), 30 minutes. Combine remaining ingredients, bring to a boil and pour over ribs. Continue baking in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes. Baste ribs several times with sauce.

Let the green salad for the outdoor supper be as green and sprightly as you can make it. A smart idea in making the salad is to toss all the greens together, but add the salad dressing only just before eating to allow the salad to keep its crispiness:

Chef's Favorite Salad.

½ head of lettuce
2 cups spinach leaves
2 tomatoes, cut in wedges
½ cup sliced radishes
½ green pepper, cut in rings
3 green onions
1 stalk celery, cut in pieces
¼ cup french dressing

Break lettuce into bite-sized pieces and toss together with other vegetables. Just before serving, add dressing and serve from large bowl. Have all ingredients well chilled.

If you have a host of hearty eaters and would enjoy a luscious pie, the combination of strawberries with rhubarb is a happy choice:

Strawberry-Rhubarb Pie.

1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¼ cup orange juice
3 cups cut rhubarb
1 recipe pastry
1 cup sliced strawberries
1 tablespoon butter

Combine sugar, salt, nutmeg, tapioca, orange juice and rhubarb; place in 9-inch pie pan lined with pastry. Top with strawberries and dot with butter. Arrange whole pastry top or lattice covering. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) for 10 minutes, then in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes.

On the other hand, fresh fruits by themselves or with a few cookies may be more to your liking. Be sure to wash them carefully, so they do not bruise, wrap them in waxed paper, and toss them into the red-checkered tablecloth that you're fastening together at the corners.

Are you having difficulties planning meals with points? Stretching your meats? Lynn Chambers can give you help if you write her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply, in care of her at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Lynn Says

The Score Card: Ceiling prices are in effect for such vegetables as cabbage, carrots, lettuce, spinach, snap beans and tomatoes.

Watch for changes in point values on meats and other red stamp foods. Look, too, for the ceiling prices on many cuts of meat. The butcher usually posts ceiling prices on his wall.

Your butter and cheese man can collect your points before he leaves your order. In this way he won't wake you up if he comes early, or if you're not at home later in the day. Should he fail to be able to fill your order, he must give you a ration check for points given him but not used, and you can turn this in to your local war price and rationing board.

Uniform prices for poultry have been established, and the campaign against the poultry black market is swinging into shape.

George Was Graciously Willing to Aid Illiterates

Tired after a difficult day, the American congressman handed the menu to George, the colored waiter, and said: "Here, just bring me a good meal."

He put a generous tip on his plate, and a good meal, indeed, a very good meal, was served in due time.

When it was over the satisfied diner gave a large tip as a good-by gesture. The waiter's eyes grew big, then leaning over the chair of the solon, he said confidentially: "Thank you, sah, an' if you done got any othah frien's what can't read, why you jes' send 'em to me, sah."

If you know a Navy man, don't ever call him a "gob"—sailors consider the name an insult. You can get on the right side of him though if you offer him a Camel—or better yet, send him a carton. Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in the Navy (Army, Marines, Coast Guard, too, for that matter) based on actual sales records from the service men's stores. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. Will Travel Rationing Become Necessary ?

In conformity with the wishes of the Office of Defense Transportation —an authorized Government agency with which the L. & N. is fully cooperating in the handling of war-time transportation problems—the ville and Nashville Railroad urges passengers to refrain from non-e travel, The need for this restriction grows out of the necessity of a odating essential travel, and the present crowded condition of trai

WHAT IS NON-ESSENTIAL TRAVEL?

The following trips are defined as non-essential:

Visiting friends in other cities.

Going home for the week-end.

Those of a sightseeing nature.

Any trips merely for social or pleasure purposes, including those for attending conventions, class reunions, etc.

Attending sporting or athletic events.

The railroads today are carrying nearly four times the passenger traffic they did in 1939, with practically the same amount of equip One-half of all available Pullman cars and one-third the numb coaches are being used now for transporting military personnel in spe cars or special trains.

VACATION TRIPS

It is desirable, first, that vacations be spent at, or as near, home as sible. However, where journeys are involved, observance of the following would be helpful:

Spread vacation periods over the whole year, instead of the usual concentration during June, July and August.

Commence and terminate vacations on Tuesdays, Wednesdays or Thursdays (relatively light travel days).

Vacation trips should, in no circumstances, involve travel during holiday periods.

Take entire vacation at one time instead of splitting it into several shorter periods, involving perhaps more than one trip

Essential war needs prevent the construction of additional passenger train equipment. Travelers must be prepared to encounter delayed arrivals and crowded conditions of the trains, and a lack of some of the usual travel comforts.

C. Reese Mullins To Be Candidate County Treasurer

The political bees are beginning to buzz already for the election to be held next year.

Mr. C. Reese-mullins tells us that unless he changes his mind he will be a candidate in the Democratic Primary to be held next spring, for the office of County Treasurer. Mr. Mullins states this office does not pay enough to spend a lot of money on or to have any fuss or discord over. If there ever was a time when all the people should pull together he thinks is now. He stated that he did not think that it would be wise for our party or our Democratic Executive Committee to indorse anyone. Let everyone run for office that wants to run for office and lets have an honest-to-goodness, fair and impartial election, and the majority rule. This is Democratic. He thinks a man should be as honest with his sacred ballot as he is in his church affiliations, but let every fellow who wants to run, run on his own merits.

Mr. Mullins further stated that if he does decide to run that he will submit his race to all the voters of the county. All the people of this county know that Mr. Mullins managed the campaign here for Governor Sparks in 1938. He would have managed it again for the Governor in 1942 but had to decline on the account of his health at that time. Mr. Mullins states that he has now fully recovered and enjoying the best of health. Mr. Mullins further states, as we all know, that he has been in business here for the last 40 years. That he has represented some of the largest Fire and Life Insurance Companies in the business. Also the Singer Sewing Machine Company and has probably handled more than a half-million dollars during all these years and has never been short one cent.

Mr. Mullins further states that he has fought and bled for the Democratic Party for all these years but He has never run it to an extreme for he has always realized we had as good and competant men in the Republican party as we have in the Democratic party, he further stated. The only difference is letting the money power rule instead of the people which he considers the very foundation of the Democratic Party.

In conclusion, Mr. Mullins further states, that if he finally decides to make this race which he is now inclined to think he will, that he will promise the voters of this county that he will continue to go on down the same old straight and narrow trail that he has been travelling for all these years and that his platform will be condensed and will be set out in only seven words. to-wit: "Honesty first, last and all the time."

UNIVERSITY HIGHWAY OPEN TO TRAFFIC

The all-paved highway between Tuscaloosa and Montgomery is now open to traffic and only final touches are being applied, State Highway Director G. R. Swift announced today.

The new 99-mile route saves 43 miles' travel betwen Montgomery and Tuscaloosa, compared with the old route, via Uniontown.

Launched in 1941 by Governor Dixon, the University Highway was completed last fall, except for paving of a 17-mile gap above Centreville. Because of heavy rains, little work was don on the gap between December 1 and March 1.

"A few days ago only four miles of bituminous mat remained to be laid and less than seven miles of the final coat," said Mr. Swift. "However, the highway will not be closed again—no more detour mud, no more dust."

The all-paved Alabama 5 route from Birmingham to Mobile, by way of Centreville, Marion, Browns, Safford, Catherine, Thomasville, Grove Hill and Jackson, is now open, following completion of a 12-mile gap between Browns and Safford.

DRAFT OFFICIALS RECEIVE WARNING TO KEEP SECRETS

Washington—From now on Selective Service System people will weigh their words before speaking, because they could forfeit their lives for the wrong one.

They have been told that giving out secret, confidential or restricted information will be considered a violation of the espionage act, which carries the death penalty.

Penalties under the selective service act are as high as five years' imprisonment and $5,000 fine, but draft officials and the Army apparently felt that wasn't tough enough as a silencer.

Major objectives are to prevent disclosure of the size of quota calls, to prevent creditors from using draft records for collection purposes, and to protect registrants against revelation of highly personal information.

Still publishable are the names of men accepted at induction centers and ordered to active duty.

DEVAUGHN TEACHING THREE SCHOOLS HERE

Monday of this week Prof. W. M. Devaughn opened up three singing classes, two in Clanton and one at Thomas Junior School. From 9 to 11 a.m. he is at the Thomas School; then from 3 to 5 in the afternoon he is teaching a class at the Assembly of God church, likewise one at the same place in the evening from 8 to 10. Good attendance has been registered for each class even from the first day.

Assisting Prof. Devaughn at the evening class here is Prof. Marion W. Easterling, who also teaches piano lessons. Both these men are experts in their work. They will be glad to enlist any others who can arrange to attend either of the three classes or take piano.

The regular Thursday night singing at the Assembly of God will be held as usual each Thursday night throughout the term of the school.

REVIVAL SCHEDULE

Our revival begins at Chestnut Creek next Sunday, July 25th, Rev. Maurice Hodgens doing the preaching. As many of you know Bro. Hodgens has just finished at the Baptist Theological Seminary, and is now pastor at Shawnut, Ala.

Our revival at Concord begins the first Sunday in August, Rev. J. E. Franks of Fort Payne doing the preaching. Rev. Franks will, also, do the preaching in our revival at Samaria, which begins the third Sunday in August.

Let me urge upon all who can, to attend these services.—G. G. Williams.

Rev. M. Lockhart Receives Letter From Soldier

Published here is a letter received recently by Rev. M. Lockhart, from a soldier.

Btry. C. 347, F.A.Bn
Camp White, Ore.
July 10, 1943

Dear Former Pastor:

I harly know how to start this letter because there is so much I have to say, and it is so hard to say in a letter as you know. To begin with, I hope you will remember me because I shall never forget my preacher as long as I live, because of what he did for me. I shall tell you now who I am, then you can place me possibly. My name is L. Z. Dickey, my father was a deacon at Highland Baptist Church They later moved to Anniston, Ala. Do you remember me now? Do you remembdr standing on the edge of a chair in the front of Highland Baptist Church eight years ago, the fourth week in July and asking people to change their ways and be a christian. Then one night when you shook my hand and said: "Think about your souls salvation, and let this preacher baptise you." and then I went away without an answer, then I came the next night as a candidate for baptism, July 25th, 1935, was the date of my change of heart, and the last eight years has been the happiest eight years of my life because I have tried to be true to my Lord Jesus Christ, and I am not tired of it and I will never become tired of it. I know that it is the only thing worth living for. The world doesn't know how to live. Thank God, I learned eight years ago, but I still need your prayers. So don't ever forget me as long as you live.

Preacher do you realize how far your one statement or request, "Think of your souls salvation, and let this preacher baptize you," has gone? Well preacher it has gone to ten states and across the water three times. I am just back and can say that my time across has been well spent, and some day I hope to preach one sermon in your pulpit, and look you in the face. I want my text to be John 3:16. That is my every theme when I talk to a person about his soul's salvation, because the one verse covers salvation fully: "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only son that whosoever would believe on Him, would not perish but have life everlasting." And yet the people wont give themselves. God pity them. Here are a few experiences that would never have happened had it not been for you. These are a few that have happened on the "Battle Front." I can not name, but I can tell you just how far your statement has gone, and maybe it will help you not to ever give up. I was on the battle field less than two months ago, and a big black negro was shot with a 30-30 machine gun, about 50 yards away, and I slid to him on my stomach against an officers wish and when I got to him I put my arm under his head and raised him up and said: "How are you with your God? Because I saw that there was no chance for his life, because his heart was pierced. He looked at me and said: "White folks I haven't got a God, He is for you white folks and yellow neg-

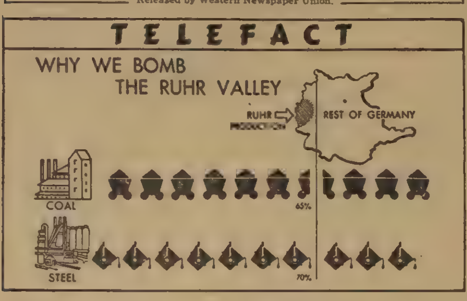
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Heavy Fighting Follows Sicily Landings As Allied Forces Strike for Key Points; U. S. Navy Scores Again in Pacific Battle; Cut Dairy Product Supply for Civilians

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



SICILY:
Allies Advance

As a great bridge of 3,000 ships poured troops onto conquered beachheads of Sicily, American forces drove 20 miles inland to join up with the British at Ragusa, an important communication junction dominating high ground in the area.

Along the eastern coast of the island, the British captured the naval base of Augusta and then made landings to the south of the great port of Catania. The movements placed Gen. Bernard Montgomery's forces within 55 miles of Messina, terminal of the ferry route from the toe of the Italian boot.

Only around the American beachhead of Gela did heavy early fighting develop. Here, the celebrated Goering division teamed with an Italian force to counter-attack, and though the enemy drove through to the sandy shore, Gen. George Patton's troops sealed the breach.

Against the 144,000 Axis troops defending Sicily, the Allies were reputed to have put up at least 10 divisions of 150,000 men in the early stages of the campaign. With airdromes established in the island's picturesque olive groves of the southeast, Allied airmen assaulted enemy landing fields, shot up motorized convoys and roads, and bombed shipping to the north.

PACIFIC:
Win Another Round

Hovering in the approaches of the Kula gulf, American naval units took another broadside at Japanese warships seeking to supply enemy troops penned at the Munda airfield on New Georgia island. In the exchange of salvos, four and probably six Jap cruisers and destroyers were sunk. No American losses were announced.

Near Munda, American troops, picking their way through the thick jungle, encountered stiffening resistance from the entrapped enemy. Earlier, U. S. forces had wiped out a Japanese stronghold on an inlet to the northeast of the island.

Collaborating with the sea and ground forces, American airmen continued hammering at Japanese installations throughout the 700-mile arc of offensive. The enemy air base at Vila above New Georgia island and another in the Shortland islands to the northwest were raided.

In New Guinea, the Allies were making use of the supply route from the beach where General MacArthur had established a base early in the offensive, to Mubo, about 15 miles inland and just below the Japanese stronghold of Salamaua.

WAR BUREAUS:
Get $2,911,697,224

After paring the OPA's request for funds by 22 million dollars and the Office of War Information's by 16 million dollars, congress appropriated $2,911,697,224 for the government's war agencies in bills approved by President Roosevelt.

A total of 848 million dollars was appropriated for the department of agriculture. The department of the interior received 105 million dollars, including 22 million dollars for the irrigation of food producing lands. Other bills provide for 100 million dollars for new war housing and 15 million dollars for flood relief.

Also signed by the President was legislation for authorizing the use of government held silver for industrial purposes; for establishing a pharmacy corps in the army; for providing for emergency flood control work, and for settling boundary lines between Iowa and Nebraska.

CROPS:
Prospects Down

Overall crop production for 1943 is expected to be about 10 per cent below last year, according to estimates of the department of agriculture. With a tight situation in corn already existent, it was predicted current acreage would yield 2 billion, 706½ million bushels, 15 per cent below the 1942 harvest.

Wheat production is expected to approximate 790,823,000 bushels, 200 millions below 1942. Oats were expected to be down 8.6 per cent at 1 billion 242½ million bushels; barley down 17.4 per cent at 350 million bushels, and rye down 41 per cent at 33,562,000 bushels.

Generally good yields were expected from the 15,434,000 acres of soybeans seeded. Approximately 39 per cent less sugar beet acreage was planted than in 1942. However, higher acreage for dry beans, peas, peanuts, flaxseed, rice and potatoes spelled higher production. Truck crops were expected to drop 11 per cent.

In signing the $848,000,000 agricultural supply bill, President Roosevelt deprecated the elimination of crop insurance from the measure. Congress had provided over $3,000,000 for liquidation of the service.

RUSSIA:
Reds Counter-Attack

Bitter fighting on the Russian front spread, with Russian units counter-attacking fiercely above Orel, northernmost pivot of the 160-mile front bending southward to Belgorod.

Announcement of the counter-attack was made by the Nazis after the Russians had claimed that they had checked the Germans in the Orel-Belgorod region after initial break-throughs.

In the battle of the giants, London said, the Nazis had thrust wedges of 20 miles into Russian lines above Belgorod, but that the Reds had temporarily slowed the drives and were now throwing their tanks and artillery at the German flanks in an effort to pinch them off from the main forces.

Besides claiming successes around Belgorod, the Nazis asserted they had progressed at the northern anchor of Orel. Some extent of the fighting may be gleaned from Nazi and Russian claims, which put total tank losses at 3,000.

FOOD:
Less Dairy Products

The 46.3 pounds of butter, cheese, canned and dried milk consumed by Americans in 1942 will be cut to 31.3 pounds in the next 12 months following the War Food administration's allocation of supplies among civilians, the military and lend-lease.

Of the four products, only butter production will drop for the period, from 2 billion 170 million pounds to 1 billion 670 million pounds. Under the allocation, every person will receive 13.5 pounds of butter for the 12 months compared with 16.5 pounds in 1942.

Cheese output is expected to soar to 915 million pounds, but civilian quotas will approximate 4.1 pounds per person against 6.7 pounds last year. Despite record production of canned and dried milk, every consumer will get 8.4 pounds less of canned milk for a total of 12.1 pounds and 1 pound less of dried milk or 1.6 pounds in all.

WFA pointed out that these quotas are subject to change, depending upon the rate of production throughout the next 12 months. Therefore, they may go up, or again, they may go down.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

ACTRESS: Cecilia Loftus, the famous English and American actress of a generation ago, was found dead in her New York hotel room. She was 67 years old.

• • •

POPULATION: The population of the United States is now 135,900,000, as of March 1, according to an estimate by a national advertising agency.

STEEL: Steel mills of the nation are now operating at about 97 per cent of capacity, compared with 98.4 per cent this time last year.

• • •

STOCKS: Average prices on the New York exchange have climbed to the highest point in three years, reflecting the successful invasion of Sicily, and continued high production.

U. S. WARPLANES:
Criticize Production

Pulling no punches, the Truman defense investigating committee delved into America's record aircraft production and came up with strong criticism of certain phases of the industry.

The committee attacked the Curtiss-Wright aeronautical company for improper inspection of engines; expressed disappointment with Ford's slowness in coming into bomber production; declared certain makes of fighters and bombers had proven unsatisfactory in action, and, in turn, praised the development of new models, like the Grumman Hellcat and Mustang 51.

Summed up, the committee's report reflected the growing pains experienced by the American aircraft industry in its gigantic expansion in the last few years. Whereas one plant was assailed for sacrificing quality for production, several others were criticized for their slowness in putting out superior models.

MARTINIQUE:
Helps Allies

The aircraft carrier Bearn, the light cruisers Emile Bertin and Barfleur, a half dozen tankers and several merchant ships were put into the service of the Allied cause with the French National committee's assumption of authority over the Caribbean island of Martinique, previously in the Vichy camp.

With Martinique also went control of a cache of 300 million dollars in gold, taken there upon the fall of France.

In its adherence to Vichy, Martinique had been considered a danger-spot to U. S. defenses in the Caribbean, on the outskirts of the Atlantic ocean and midway between North and South America. High Commissioner Georges Robert's political position had resulted in a falling out with Washington, and all U. S. food shipments to the island were shut off. With hunger rampant, Robert threw in the sponge.

Sicily Rugged Island

Sticking out like a great, big rock at the toe of the Italian boot, Sicily is an island about the size of Maryland, with a normal population of 4 million. Flanking the straits that separate it from North Africa, it has been a frequent battleground throughout world history, for whoever holds it threatens the western passage of the Mediterranean.

Sicily is peculiar in topography. From its sandy, coastal plains, the land gradually rises to a plateau of 1,600 feet. Then from the midst of this plateau springs a mountain chain, which effectively divides the southern half of the island from the north. Chief peak of this mountainous backbone is Mt. Etna, 10,739 feet.

Because of its ruggedness, Sicily has never been rich. Fruits, olives, figs and wheat are the principal food products. Sulphur and asphalt deposits have been well developed.

GUNDAR HAGG:
Good-Will Envoy

Seemingly, athletes are the best of the European ambassadors. Paavo Nurmi, the famous Finnish long-distance runner, set the fashion years ago, and now the latest of the good-will ambassadors is the equally celebrated Swedish track marvel, Gundar Hagg.

Chief virtue of these athletes is their outstanding ability and success in living up to their headlines. Hagg is a brilliant example. In one of his early performances here, Gundar broke the American record for two miles in 8:53:9.

Like most Europeans, Hagg has come to the American cinder path determined to win not for the sake of winning, but to uphold Swedish prestige. He goes about his training as naturally as you'd take a walk. When he works out in his native Sweden, he does so by romping over the picturesque countryside like any boy on a lark. No fancy or artificial hi-jinks for him.

DADS:
Draft Delay Sought

In an effort to forestall the induction of fathers, the War Manpower commission was reported to be studying plans for reducing list of essential occupations for childless married men. At the present time, there are 35 such occupations, with thousands of specific jobs in those activities.

According to the same reports, the WMC was urging the army to reduce its demands to the minimum. Recently, the agency said the services were planning the call of 2 million men within the next year, exclusive of replacements. Insistence on drafting men for replacements, the WMC said, would result in the induction of fathers.

FARM MACHINERY:
Increase Output

By increasing allocations of carbon steel to the farm machine industry, production of sorely needed agricultural implements should attain a volume 80 per cent of the 1941 output.

According to advices, most of the production will be centered in the smaller shops. Normally an 85 million dollar business annually, half of farm machinery output is concentrated in Illinois.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

JUDY CANOVA, the Florida comedienne who made hog calling pay dividends, is coming into her own this season, after years of being featured, co-starred, and everything else but starred. With "Sleepy Lagoon" just finished for Republic studios, the lanky hillbilly immediately started her own starring roles in two mediums, films and radio. In August she goes to Columbia Pictures, to star in an expensive production, "Louisiana Hayride"; at present she has the honor of replacing Al Jolson on the air, Tuesday nights.

JUDY CANOVA

Mrs. Robert Donat saw her husband for the first time in two years at a recent Hollywood preview, but only on the screen. Robert insisted on her going to America when the war clouds gathered, but he remained in England. The picture was M-G-M's "Tartu," in which he plays a swashbuckling secret agent—it'll be ready for the rest of us to see.

That very good mystery, "The Fallen Sparrow," will be filmed by RKO Radio with a cast so good that it's got to be fine. Maureen O'Hara, who co-starred with Charles Laughton in "This Land Is Mine," heads it.

Those publicity questionnaires which Hollywood stars fill out for their studios are frequently a source of amusement. George Sanders, for example, who co-stars with Marguerite Chapman in Columbia's "Appointment in Berlin," came across the question, "What did your parents want you to become?" Whereupon Sanders promptly wrote "Self-supporting!"

Eddie Cantor made his first trip East in a year to launch a new Liberty ship, look for talent for his new picture, "Show Business," and to raise money to admit 6,000 youngsters from Nazi Europe into Palestine; the British government had agreed to admit them if they could be provided for. Cantor gave the arrangements a good start by adopting 500 children himself. Incidentally, said he, he could always use a new name for his radio show.

If you liked Helen Hayes' radio drama, "Bid for Happiness," look forward to seeing it in pictures. Samuel Goldwyn has announced that when Teresa Wright returns to the movie this autumn she will be featured in a film based on the air show.

Peggy Allenby, of NBC's "David Harum," has learned to make her motto, "Never expect much." Once a radio director phoned her that she was perfect for a certain part on his show. She rushed to the studio—and found the part consisted of one piercing shriek! But as a matter of fact, it was one of the highest-paid screams ever screamed over a radio network.

Records for Our Fighting Men, Inc.—Bob Hope, president—has already sent more than 300,000 new and popular discs to the services for distribution. This year's drive lasts all through July; look up your old, scratched or even broken records and turn 'em in. They're sold as scrap to record manufacturers, and the net proceeds go for new records for the men in the armed forces.

Harry Sherman ought to receive a medal from Western picture fans. With almost 100 of his Western films still currently playing to audiences all over the Allied world, he is preparing 16 more Americana stories for release in the near future. "The Daddy of Hopalong Cassidy series" is given credit for bringing Zane Grey's books to the screen as well.

ODDS AND ENDS—Al Jolson will play himself in the Jesse Lasky-Warner picture, "Rhapsody in Blue" . . . And Oscar Levant will play himself in the same film . . . Anne Baxter gets the role Janet Gaynor played in the silent version, when "State Fair" is re-made, by 20th Century-Fox . . . Tallulah Bankhead returns in the Alfred Hitchcock picture, "Lifeboat," which promises to be one of the year's most dramatic pictures . . . James Cagney bought "The Stray Lamb," by the late Thorne Smith, from the estate of John Barrymore—it's another of those wacky comedies, and film folks wondered if he planned to appear in it himself.

NEW YORK.—Peace and its problems are the concern of brisk Nelson Rockefeller. His Office of Inter - American Affairs, having scotched the Axis fifth, columns southward, works now, he says, for a long-term two-continent control of production and prices.

Rockefeller Does As Well on Own As Gunder Hagg

An aggressive grandson of the aggressive John D., Sr., young Nelson has fixed himself solidly in the hemispheric picture. His family name may have helped him to a running start and Harry Hopkins' blessing gave him an early breather, but latterly he seems to have done very well on his own.

He is 35 now, with the strong, squarish face of his father and considerable good looks. Married 13 years he has five children—Rodman, Ann, Steven, and twins, Michael and Mary. Not until the second twin was one of the five named for Mary Todhunter Clark whom Rockefeller married practically the minute he finished his studies at Dartmouth.

At Dartmouth he lived on $1,500 a year, but he had to save 10 per cent and give 10 away. That was a 20 per cent income slash long before Morgenthau got the idea. But he learned to handle money. And now, as a trustee of the Rich Metropolitan Museum of Art and of the Livly Modern Museum, and as a director of the family's epochal Rockefeller Center, he deals with mountains of currency and never turns a hair.

THROUGH three long years Sir Bernard Paget's Home Command has stood on the alert, never sure it would not need to fight on the beaches and in the hills. Now, however, England hears of a happily "altered military situation" and Sir Bernard orders soldiers to begin tearing down those barriers hurriedly raised when the terrible Hun was just outside the gate.

Now Sir Bernard's Coasting Down Hill With a Tail Wind

A lieutenant general, Sir Bernard has been commander-in-chief of the Home forces for a couple of years. Earlier he tangled with the Nazis in Norway. They had him outnumbered and his problem was to pull back his hardpressed troops and embark them without a major engagement.

He deployed by day, forced the Nazis to deploy to meet the threat of battle, then at night ran like all get-out for the coast. It was a back-handed victory, but then he was content.

In the last war Sir Bernard ended up a major, DSO, MC, with an Italian decoration, numerous flattering dispatches and four wounds, including a crippled left arm. When the French chivvied Abdel Krim he was an observer, perhaps picking up some pointers about night retreats.

A redheaded son of a one-time bishop of Oxford, and 55 years old, he still is enough influenced by his father to want sweetness and light in his army. Not long ago he ordered an end of strong language, or at any rate less of it. With those barriers falling his soldiers should find obedience easier.

THEY tell you, in army circles, that Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney is about the best poker player in uniform anywhere. They do not mean, however, that he is bluffing when he warns that the tide of war has turned and the Japs had best hunt high ground.

Best Poker Player In Army Says Japs On Skids; No Bluff

Deputy chief of staff, the youngest officer ever to hold that post, McNarney is generally considered a soldier who talks only when he knows his facts.

He was born in Pennsylvania 50 years ago. His father was a lawyer, a tough prosecutor; his mother an indomitable temperance worker. After West Point he switched in '15 to the signal corps which then included the little air arm we possessed. About the same time he switched to matrimony with a handsome little school ma'am from San Diego.

He was an air officer in France through the little World war and has been one ever since. Like other top commanders of the American army at this time, his permanent rank is nothing much. The lieutenant generalcy is but a temporary one, and unless our congress is big hearted after peace is declared, he might drop back to colonelcy.

He is a tall man and lean and dark, with not much hair forward any more. By some he has been called dour, taciturn and ruthless, but his many good friends insist that the word "fair" be added.

And Nary a Drop Was Spilt Along the Way

A young Scottish couple had moved from their country cottage into a modern house. All their goods and chattels arrived safely—with the exception of the rain water tub.

After the wife had pleaded with her husband that this was an asset to her household, he said he would go and get it that evening.

As he had not arrived home at 12:30 a. m. his wife became worried. At 1:15 a. m. the back gate slammed and there was a dull thud. In a few seconds the door opened to reveal a dishevelled and perspiring man, who remarked:

"Ee, lass, 'A've 'ad job wit' toob. Thee didn't tell me it were full o' watter."

SMOKES and the SOLDIER

Is it true that a soldier is always hungry?

Yes—up to a point. But the Quartermaster Department has found that some soldiers, particularly new recruits, actually don't eat enough.

The Army mess table is exactly like a football team's training table. The food served there is carefully planned to aid in the physical development of the soldier. And the Army has discovered certain little ways to increase Johnny Doughboy's appetite.

The Army has found it can add to a soldier's enjoyment of his food—and therefore increase his consumption of all those carefully prepared vitamins, minerals, and proteins—if he is allowed to smoke during meals. Measured tests run by the Quartermaster's Department show that food consumption actually increased by 5% when soldiers were permitted to smoke cigarettes at the mess table.

"Smokes," of course, play a prominent part in many phases of the life of a soldier. Whenever you see a news photo of soldiers at ease, you're apt to see them enjoying a cigarette. Particularly among American troops overseas, cigarettes—real American cigarettes—are highly prized and almost never present in sufficient quantities.

What kind of cigarettes do Uncle Sam's fighting men prefer? Well, records show that the favorite cigarette is Camel. That is true not only with men in the Army, but with Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen as well. Sales records from the service men's own stores—Post Exchange, Sales Commissaries, Ship's Service Stores, Ship's Stores, and Canteens—show that Camels are first with men in all branches of the service.

Further proof that Uncle Sam's fighting men like their smokes is given in the service man's preference in gifts from home—it's a carton of his favorite brand of cigarettes. Tobacco dealers, recognizing that Camels are the favorite among service men, are equipped to help you in properly wrapping, addressing, and stamping your gift of Camels to the man in the service.—Adv.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

At a Navy yard, 3000 workers travel daily 60 to 85 miles round trip by automobile—a good reason why war workers must have tires.

Tire users now restricted because of the rubber shortage will have de luxe road traveling conditions open to them in post-war days if State and Federal highway plans materialize. Already twelve States have approved building express highways of tomorrow when peace comes. Seven others are considering such plans.

A truck tire that is overloaded 50 per cent will only deliver 44.5 per cent of its mileage expectancy.

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, late of the editorial staff of the Charlotte (N. C.) News, has been inducted into the army, classified as a cook and has spent a large share of his "spare" moments on KP duty. He has taken time out, however, to advise prospective doughboys to "paint the town red" before induction and once in the army to "keep an open mind" as the "first three weeks are the hardest." His constant assignment to KP is the despair of his sergeant who believes Hargrove will never learn to be a crack soldier. His last experience was a rifle inspection in which he fared badly. Now he begins a new episode concerning advancement in rank.

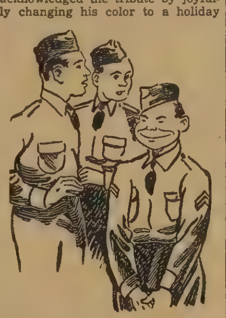
CHAPTER IV

Selectee Joseph G. Gantt, late of Liberty, South Carolina, came out for reveille this morning with a grin you could have used for a foot rule. He held both his arms against the front of his shirt in a queerly strained posture and blushed happily every time someone looked at him.

"The heat's got the boy," I told Gene Shumate. "Looks like the best ones always go first."

"That ain't the heat," said Cookie. "He seems to have a cramp in his arms." We looked at Citizen-Soldier Gantt's arms again. Then, for the first time, we noticed two shining stripes on each sleeve. Citizen-Soldier Gantt was a corporal now!

"Heavens to Betsy," we shouted in unison for his benefit. "Is that punk a corporal?" Corporal Gantt acknowledged the tribute by joyfully changing his color to a holiday red. The grin widened until his ears hung perilously on the brink of his lips. It took him half the morning to sober his spirits to working conditions.



"Heavens to Betsy," we shouted in unison for his benefit. "Is that punk a corporal?"

Corporal Gantt has been in the Army exactly four months. He had been an acting corporal for three weeks before he got his stripes.

Heaven grant him strength for the ordeal ahead.

The term "buck private" was explained to us this afternoon. It refers to the Old Army Game, "passing the buck." The sergeant is first called on the carpet for a mistake in his platoon. The sergeant seeks out the corporal and gives him a dressing-down. The corporal passes the buck by scalding the ears of the private. The private doesn't even have a mule to kick, so he can't pass the buck any farther. He keeps it. That makes him a buck private.

The Army, I find, has many subtle ways to trap the unwary into volunteering for work. First there was the sergeant over at the Reception Center who came through the recreation hall one afternoon calling for "Private Smith." Four men answered. All four were put to work picking up cigarette stubs.

On the call, "Anybody in here know how to handle a truck?" don't speak up. The last three were seen later pushing a hand truck up the battery street to haul rifle racks.

Corporal Henry Ussery is to date the most dangerous conscriptor. This week he came into the squadroom to ask if anyone was good at shorthand. Three citizen-soldiers admitted that they were.

"Report to the kitchen," the corporal laughed. "The mess sergeant says he's shorthanded on dishwashers."

"One of the most solemn and responsible trusts of a soldier," Sergeant "Curly" Taylor said today, "is his guard duty." Sergeant Taylor, who has been in the Army for nineteen years and probably knows more about guard duty than any man in Fort Bragg, is teaching us about guard duty now.

The soldier is called to this duty about once a month. For a twenty-four-hour period, he is on two hours, and off four hours, and he "walks his post in a military manner," guarding the peace and possessions and safety of a part of the post. He is responsible only to a corporal of the guard, a sergeant of the guard, an officer of the day, and his commanding officer.

The guard, or sentry, is known chiefly to the reading and movie-going public by two expressions, "Halt, who goes there?" and "Corporal of the guard! Post number three!" The former, Sergeant Taylor said with his best poker-face, has given the Army considerable worry at times.

According to the sergeant, the guard is instructed to give the "halt" order three times and then shoot. Over-enthusiastic rookies from the back counties, he said, had been known to go like this: "Halt halt halt! Ka-POW!" (You can believe it or leave it; I never question what the sergeant says.)

There was one rookie guard, he said, who halted him, questioned him and allowed him to pass. After he had gone several steps, the sentry again shouted, "Halt!" Sergeant Taylor came back and wanted to know—politely, of course—how come. "My orders," said the guard, "say to holler 'Halt' three times and then shoot. You're just on your second halt now!"

The other popular expression is the come-a-running call that goes up the line to the guardhouse when a guard takes a prisoner or "meets any case not covered by instruction" (General Order No. 9). If the guard is on the seventh post, he sings out, "Corporal of the guard! Post number seven!" The guard on the sixth post picks up the cry and it goes down the line like that.

There's the story about the officer of the day who questioned a new sentry, as officers of the day frequently do in order to test the sentries. "Suppose," the OD asked, "that you shouted, 'Halt' three times and I kept going, what would you do?"

The guard was apparently stumped by the question. Finally he answered, "Sir, I'd call the corporal of the guard."

The officer of the day gloated. "Aha!" he said. "So you'd call the corporal of the guard, would you? And just why would you call the corporal of the guard?"

This time the answer was prompt and decisive—and correct. "To haul away your dead body, sir!"

Heroes are born, not made.

There's one job here that is nothing but goldbricking in itself. That's the latrine orderly detail. You go to work after lunch and spend the rest of the afternoon watching the fire in the water heater and feeding it regularly—every two hours. The next morning you sweep and mop the washroom and spend the rest of the time until lunch watching the fire again. All in all, you lead a lazy, carefree existence.

There was a slip-up somewhere yesterday. I was latrine orderly instead of a KP. It was probably the mess sergeant's idea.

The boys started out after lunch for an afternoon of drilling in the warm Carolina sunshine and learning to drive trucks across ditches.

An hour later, I decided to take a casual look at the boiler. When I opened the furnace-room door, a blast of strong brownish smoke struck me to the ground. I lay there for several minutes, tapping my forehead thoughtfully, while more smoke poured out.

When it still hadn't slackened after five minutes, I crawled under the layer of smoke to the boiler. There the sickening vapor was, pouring nonchalantly through clinks in the door.

"Don't come telling me about it," said Sergeant "Ma" Davidson. "Take out the pipes and clean them. All of them."

I had to see the top sergeant to get my instructions. When I returned to Sergeant Davidson I was happy again.

"Ma," I told him, "the top kick says for you to supervise the job."

The sergeant was furious with rage and frustration. I grabbed a screwdriver and he grabbed Private Downer, who had a black mark by his name for not wearing his identification tag. The three of us started work.

First, put out the fire in the boiler. Shake it down, throw ashes on it. It still burns. Shake it down more, throw sand on it. Still burns. Close the bottom door, shake it down more, throw ashes and sand on it. Curse it. After too long, it dies.

The man who devised the system for connecting an indoor boiler and an outdoor chimney should be parched with his own pipes and stuffed with oily soot.

Unscrew a pipe, lift it gently, coax it from its socket. Easy does it. Careful there. When you have it almost out, inhale for your sigh of relief. Crash! The whole network of pipes bounces off the floor scattering ashes and soot over half the battery area.

After half an hour of scrubbing and wiping the interior regions of all the pipes, they're ready to go up again. All but one of them are in place and the last one is ready to be fitted. Careful there! Easy, now! Watch out! Catch it! CRASH!

The boys come in from the drill field at 4:30 and head for the showers. There is no hot water.

"Get a load of that Hargrove," they fume, in an unnecessarily nasty manner. "He gets a job where all he has to do is throw a shovel of coal on the fire every two hours. And then when we come in, there ain't no hot water. There ain't even no fire. Throw the bum out."

* * *

I grinned weakly as I reported to the supply sergeant for work. "You must be that nice Sergeant Thomas W. Israel I've heard so many nice things about."

"No, little man," he said. "I'm the nice Sergeant Israel you've been running your loud mouth about. I'm the nice sergeant who always gives you the wrong clothing sizes and hides your laundry and does all those awful things you've been telling about me."

"So help me, sergeant," I protested. "I never named thee but to praise. Somebody's been trying to poison your mind against me."

"I am also the nice sergeant," he said, "who is going to let you earn your seventy cents today. Take off your fatigue blouse, my man, and prepare to sweat. Today we make progress. We are going to unpack rifles."

It seems to me that when the manufacturer prepares to pack a box of Army rifles, his cruel streak comes out at its worst. From the look of the rifles, he has his three-year-old daughter prepare a compound of molasses, pitch, and used motor oil—the gooier the better. He slings each gun into the resulting mess, sloshes it around for a while, and then lays it neatly into the box.

You use a swab about the size of a tablecloth to wipe the grease from the rifle. When you're halfway through the first rifle, you have to use the gun to wipe the grease from the cloth. When you have finished, you need a large coal shovel to wipe the grease off yourself.

There is nothing so conducive to itching as the inability to scratch. Just when the molasses-pitch-axle grease mixture covers your hand to the point where you can't see the outlines of the fingers, that left nostril starts tingling. At first it itches only a little and you decide to suffer it. So you don't wipe your hands on the seat of your trousers. Instead you pick up another rifle and your hand sinks to the elbow in the goo which wraps it. This is the stage where your nose gets peevish and impatient and decides to itch in earnest.

Finally, you decide to give in. You wipe your hands—an operation which takes a good three or four minutes for satisfactory results. You lift your hand to scratch your nose, only to find that your nose isn't itching any more.

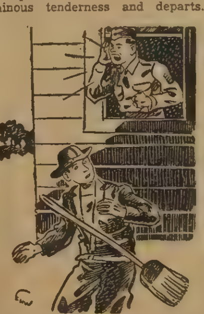
I was doing fairly well this morning, even when you take the itch into consideration, until the mess sergeant happened to stroll by.

"Hello, little man," he sings gaily, with a horrible gleam in his eyes. "You've not been around to see me for a long time. Aren't mad, are you?"

I look at my hands, at the rifle, at the old shoe, and at the mess sergeant. I hold my tongue. Health is wealth.

"We miss you terribly in the kitchen," he coos, "even when you go griping around that my food is the worst in the Army. I just saw the first sergeant and I asked him to let you be a KP just as soon as he can spare you. Oh, we're going to do wonders to that kitchenware, you and I."

He pats me on the forehead with ominous tenderness and departs.



The sergeant yelled out of the window at me, so I dropped my broom and went upstairs.

Five paces away, he turns for a parting shot. "Blabbermouth!" he snorts.

I suppose he's good to his mother, though.

The sergeant yelled out the window at me, so I dropped my broom in the battery street and went upstairs. He was sitting on the foot locker, thoughtfully rubbing his chin with the handle of his mess-kit knife.

"Ralph Oxford got called up to the battery commander's office this morning," he said, "and do you know what the Old Man gave him?"

"I've got a pretty good idea," I said. "If he gave him what he gave me when I got called up, it has four letters, starts with an h and ends with an l."

The sergeant closed his eyes and slowly shook his head. "Oxford isn't a sore thumb to the platoon like you are," he groaned. "Oxford got a bright red stripe to wear around his sleeve."

"Oxford's no fireman," I told him.

"You're dern right he ain't," said the sergeant. "Starting with today, Oxford and Zuber and Roff and Maciejewski and Pappas and Mihalakakos are acting corporals!"

I knew there must be a moral to all this, so I wanted for him to go on.

"Now, why couldn't you have been one of those six boys?" he asked.

BIBLE TEACHINGS ON THE COST OF DRINKING

LESSON TEXT — Deuteronomy 21:18-21; Proverbs 23:20, 21; I Corinthians 6:9-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God?—I Corinthians 6:9.

Billions of dollars—how many we cannot say—make up the annual cost of liquor to America in dollars and cents. Terrifying as it is, that stupendous waste is but a drop in the bucket compared with the moral and spiritual degradation, the sorrow and suffering, the poverty and distress, which must be added into our liquor bill.

For it is not only a matter of dollars, but of blood and tears, of destroyed usefulness, lost virtue, wrecked homes, and so on and on and on. We go right on paying the bill, allowing ourselves to be misled by clever propaganda, and skillfully manipulated statistics—or it may be our sheer indifference. When will America awaken!

Our lesson faces us with the cost of this despicable traffic in the life of the individual to the social order, and in the light of eternity.

I. The Personal Cost (Deut. 21: 18-21).

Liquor destroys individuals relentlessly, rapidly, and effectively. Have we forgotten that fact?

The passage in Deuteronomy presents a drastic remedy for a dreadful situation. Drink and gluttony were recognized as the deadly instrument which would bring a boy to the place where he was incorrigible. Stubborn, rebellious, and disobedient, his parents were to bring him to the elders for a final judgment.

If one thinks the penalty too harsh, he must remember that it was established in the early days of Israel when it was necessary for God to use such drastic remedies to stamp out incipient [illegible].

It must be remembered that in ancient Greece weak children were left out to die, and in Rome a father could at will put to death even a grown up son.

The point of this scripture for us is that a life of debauchery (and it can start with just a glass of wine) leads to the ultimate destruction of life. It is far too high a cost to pay for a sinful indulgence.

II. The Social Cost (Prov. 23: 20, 21).

Drunkenness and gluttony lead to poverty and rags. The intemperate man cannot keep up with the high cost of supplying his growing appetite. Even as he tries to satisfy its insatiable demand, it also renders him unfit to earn a living.

So the vicious circle works its way around, and stops not until the drunkard totters off in his rags, unless perchance some loved one or friend takes care of him.

Do we not all recall how families in our own communities have been ruined and become charges upon the county or charitable organizations because of the destruction wrought by a father who was a winebibber.

Not only does it bring poverty upon families, but it reduces able and gifted men to shambling wrecks and thus deprives society of the benefit of their lives and service.

A present-day illustration is the unsolved problem of absenteeism for days after pay day in our essential industries. Again we say the cost is altogether too high; let us get rid of this monster before it destroys us!

III. The Eternal Cost (I Cor. 6: 9-11).

Money lost is serious. Life lost is far more serious. But the saddest cost of all is the eternal damnation of the drinker's soul.

We quote from Dr. Horace Martin these stirring and meaningful words: "It is my calm judgment that any man who names the name of Christ should take an attitude of horror and disgust at the liquor traffic and the use of liquor as a beverage. There are at least three places in the New Testament where the Bible says that no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God.

"If any man takes that statement seriously he must think twice before he refers to the use of liquor in a joking manner, or in any way condones the use of alcohol as a beverage" (Lesson Commentary).

Drunkenness is a foul and sinful thing, classed by the apostle Paul with the lowest of human vices. Review the list as it is given in verses 9 and 10 (and by the way notice the other sins mentioned there), and place drunkenness in its proper classification.

Call it what it really is—sin, and then call on the One who can save from sin. You will then be washed from your sin, sanctified, and justified in the name of the Lord Jesus (v. 11). In Christ there is hope for the drunkard. A spiritual revival is the real answer to the liquor problem. Let us seek to promote it even as we at the same time give ourselves to an intelligent and constructive battle against this destructive force in the life of our nation.

Cautions for Home Canners

Housewives doing home canning with wartime jar caps are cautioned to follow implicitly the instructions of the cap manufacturers if they wish to avoid unhappy experiences and waste in their patriotic effort to conserve. Spoilage of food and breakage of jars is certain to result, if instructions are not followed to the letter.

Proper methods and careful canning will insure excellent results, more important in the present food situation than at any other time.

The Glass-Top Seal Fruit Jar Cap, a wartime product developed to conserve metal, requires careful use, according to the home service departments of fruit jar manufacturers. This cap consists of a metal band, glass lid and rubber ring. With these three widely varied materials making up its component parts, the cap must be used according to important but easily followed instructions. First of all, the cap is not recommended for, and must not be used in, oven canning.

If the food is processed (cooked in a jar), one inch of space must be left in the top of the jar when filled, in order to allow room for expansion. If an open kettle is used a half-inch of space must be left in the top of the jar.

The next step is to place the rubber around the projection on the bottom side of the lid, and the lid must then be placed so that the rubber lies between it and the top edge of the jar. All jars on which top-seal closures, either glass or metal, are used must have smooth-top edges.

The band is then applied tightly and immediately loosened slightly about one-quarter of a turn. Bands must fit loosely during the processing or cooking. If an open kettle is used, the bands are to be screwed tight as soon as the jar is filled. After the processing is completed the bands are screwed tight to complete the seal. The bands may be removed twelve hours after the canning operation. At no time should the filled jars be turned up-side-down.

The housewife who takes no chances on variance from any one of these simple but important steps is assured of success and the enjoyment of the delicious flavor of home canned foods this winter.—Adv.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

The vaccinating party held the past week, or was supposed to be held last week, at Geo. McCain's Barn, was well attended. There were large dogs, small dogs, fat dogs, lean dogs, hot dogs, (100) percent were hot dogs, just about every color and size attended. However, the party was called on account of having no desert. Dr. Parrish's vaccine failed to come.

One of our Cafe owners asks that we do something about this grease situation. He contends that he threw away 50 pounds last week because he could not get any of the markets to buy it. If this situation exists, then those who have the power should see that the markets do take it. If it is impossible for all to handle large quantities like a Cafe would naturally accumulate, then the marketmen should take time about gathering the grease that is so necessary to our armed forces. It all can't be roses, you know. All of us are having to accept thorns along with the roses.

Our good friend, Donald Blackketter, Mgr. at the local Yellow Front Store, and supervisor over several in this part of the State, is pouting. It seems that last week the Chairman of the War Bond Committee released a story naming several stores in the County who are selling War Stamps, and left Donald's Store off the list. Now the local Yellow Front Store has been selling War Stamps ever since the Store owners and managers hit upon the idea, and being left off the list wasn't appreciated. But so far as pouting is concerned, we are kidding. Donald is too good a sport for that.

Did you ever see a harder working or a more serious little fellow than Buddy Wade. Doesn't seem Buddy ever thinks of anything but serious business. . . . .More beautiful peaches (we mean sweet, lucious peaches) going through Clanton than we have ever seen. . . . .Boy, six smackers a bushel, we'll have to take the other variety. . . . .Jesse Culp has gone to work at the News office and because he is last in, we'll just have to call him the "printer's devil." Jesse has made an outstanding record at his High School, which is Isabella, and is prominent in State 4-H circles. We are counting heavy on him to make good here. . . . .Millard Lancaster wrote us from Tacoma, Wash. Says he is having a nice trip. Plenty cool. Them's fighting words, Millard.

In this issue of Chilton County News you will see a letter from Mr. C. Reese Mullins stating that he is contemplating running for the office of Treasurer of this County in the coming elections to be held next year. We do not know of a man in the County that is any more competent or more worthy to fill this office than Mr. Mullins and we hope to see him in the race for this office.

Ant Control

Ants are a serious household problem in all parts of the state. There are many different species of ants and all of them are hard to control. Argentine ant is the most common household ant. The most satisfactory way of controlling this specie is by the use of poisoned baits. The bait should be placed in a water-tight container along with a small wad of absorbent cotton. One or more holes should be made in the container with a nail. The containers should be placed on trees and shrubbery around in the yard. An effective poisoned bait or syrup can be made by mixing four ounces of sugar and one-half ounce of tartar emetic with one quart of water. If available, one tablespoon of honey added to this mixture will make it more attractive. This material may be used in the house.

Occasionally, ants that feed on meat or other fats, are found in the house. These ants will not be attracted by the syrup bait. The best way to get rid of them is to sprinkle a small amount of tartar emetic on bacon rinds or small pieces of bacon and place near their runs.

Ants may become troublesome in the yard and on the lawn. These ants usually throw up beds which disfigure the lawn; and often they will disturb young plants in the flower and vegetable gardens. The best material to control these ants is carbon disulphide. One or two tablespoonsful forced into the openings of the nest by the use of an eye dropper or an oil can will usually destroy the colony. After the carbon disulphide is in the nest the openings should be closed with moist clay. Kerosene poured into the openings of the ant bed will also be found helpful.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has found that P.D.S. (paradichlorobenzene) is effective in controlling ants. In applying P.D.B., two or three holes about six inches deep should be made near the openings of the nest and two tablespoonsful of P.D.B. should be placed in each of these holes After the chemical has been applied the holes should be filled with soil.

All of the materials mentioned above will injure plants, and for that reason should not be placed closer than one foot to growing plants. Of course in many cases it is much better to destroy a few plants and get rid of the ants.

MOUNT NEBO

The annual homecoming day at Mt. Nebo last Sunday was a success, considering the transportation shortage and other wartime restrictions. Although no former pastors were present, a number of visitors were present Sunday School and preaching was held as usual in the morning, after which a large and delicious dinner was served outside. After lunch, those who were interested reassembled for a singing session with Mr. Evan Popwell acting chairman. Mr. D. P. Culp also made a welcome address in the afternoon. Pianists for the day were Mrs. D. P Culp and Mr Evan Popwell.

We ar eglad to announce that Pfc Arthur Henley is much better and is back in A M school at Keesler Field.

Evelyn Mims is spending her vacation with Mrs. Charles Mims.

Mr and Mrs E. W. Holloway of Birmingham were week-end guests of Mr and Mrs A. B. Culp.

Mr and Mrs M. L. Williams and Imogene spent the week-end in Pensacola, Fla.

Everyone is reminded of the remaining services in the revival at Mt. Nebo. Morning services begin at 11 o'clock. Rev W. G. Barnes of Deatsville is doing the preaching.

It is the confident spirit of 130 million God-fearing and freedom-loving Americans . . . confident even though so viciously outraged by Japan's treachery and Hitler's cruelties.

It is the spirit of a unified people in a country where Life, Liberty and Pursuit of Happiness are not just empty phrases. They live through laws made by free men, guaranteeing Freedom of Speech and Worship, a fair trial, protection of property and peaceable assembly.

It is the American Spirit seeking only a just reward for thrift, ability and initiative earned under a system of Free Enterprise in which . . .

the savings of the thrifty combined with the energy of labor, with research and invention, and directed by management, have created an industrial development that is the marvel of the ages . . .

the average man has greater opportunity and better living conditions than anywhere else on earth yesterday, today or tomorrow . . .

free men in a year or two have outstripped Hitler's ten-year production lead under the dictator's lash.

As a part of the accomplishment of the American Spirit stimulated by Free Enterprise, the privately owned and operated railroads have astonished the world and dismayed the Dictators by their tremendous contribution toward winning the war. They have proven their necessity and won such recognition as entitles them to continued growth and protection, both now and in the years of peace to come.

Much Little Makes a Lot

Enough raindrops make a river.
Enough grains of sand make a beach.
Enough savings can finance a war.
Enough little wastes make big waste.

It's never wise to waste, but in wartime, WASTE IS UNFORGIVABLE.

Everytime something is wasted, it can mean that the war will last that much longer.

It takes labor, material and transportation to replace things that are wasted.

Labor and transportation can be better used to make and haul things needed to win the war.

Don't waste food; save leftovers; preserve all you can.

Don't waste leftover cooking fats; that spoonful of oil or grease from the skillet saved each day will soon make the pound to take to your grocer who'll get it to the plants which make glycerine for explosives.

Don't waste cardboard containers; use them again.

Don't waste tires; we're not out of the woods yet.

Do no unnecessary driving.

Don't waste clothing; wear it out before you discard it.

Don't waste money; BUY WAR BONDS STAMPS instead.

DON'T WASTE ELECTRICITY. Much of it is made in generating plants which burn coal to run the generators. A car less of coal in a freight train means that the locomotive can haul a carload of some other vital war material.

A Few Things that Waste Electricity

Leaving fans, lights and radios turned on in unoccupied rooms
Failing to defrost refrigerators regularly.
Turning on range burners before you're ready to cook on them
Letting hot water faucets drip.

ELECTRICITY IS CHEAP; IT CAN'T BE HOARDED; IT'S NOT RATIONED. BUT DON'T WASTE IT!

Must Have Permit To Slaughter Livestock

Every local slaughterer and butcher who holds a permit to slaughter livestock for the sale of meat will be required, by July 15, to submit evidence to substantiate the amount of livestock slaughtered during the period upon which his current quota is based, the WFA said today.

Purpose of the ruling is to establish a more uniform system of permits and quotas and also to adjust those quotas already issued in such a way that they will be standardized in all sections of the country. Because of the rapidity with which the permits originally were issued, the policy in granting the quotas varied somewhat from section to section.

The new requirement is contained in FDO 27.3. Submission of the evidence must be made to the County War Meat Committee of the County War Board where the permit was issued. The evidence must substantiate the amount of slaughterer's 1941 slaughter, or, if he did not slaughter during the corresponding period of 1941, he must submit evidence of his 1942 slaughter.

The permit of any local slaughterer or butcher who fails to furnish such evidence on time may be revoked by the Director of FDA. The evidence, which will form the basis for any necessary adjustments in quotas or quota bases, may include; the Applicant's books or records, records or statements of persons from whom he has bought livestock; grading certificates or inspection records; or any other evidence which the applicant considers relevant.

Officials emphasized that in furnishing slaughter records, local slaughterers and butchers should realize that total sales of meat are of slight value as evidence, because it is difficult to segregate the amounts purchased from amounts slaughtered by the applicant. Only the amount of livestock owned at the time of slaughter, should be offered for consideration. Likewise plant capacity is of little significance as evidence since very few plants operate for an extended period at capacity.

CONCRETE DAIRY IMPROVEMENTS
can help America increase food production

The Department of Agriculture has urged greatly increased milk production to meet the needs of the United Nations for dry milk, butter, cheese. Concrete improvements—such as a new milk house, cooling tank, dairy barn floor, granary, manure pit or storage cellar—will help many farmers do a bigger production job.
